Anti-Tobacco League To Launch Offensive

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18. — (Canadian Press). — An anti-tobacco movement, which it is hoped will attain the proportions of the anti-saloon movement, will be launched in Washington in March. The aim of the convention will be to federate all anti-tobacco organizations in United States to decide the best methods for eradicating the cigarette and tobacco habits.

Prove Qualifications To Sit In Imperial House

LONDON, February 18. — "I am going to educate myself with regard to the British Empire in case I get into parliament again. Lawyers, doctors, accountants and auctioneers consider it necessary to be trained through long pupilage and to give evidence of qualification. Legislators need it more yet it has never been deemed necessary either to undergo training or to prove qualification."

This was the reason given by Frank Grey, former M. P. for Oxford, and the Junior Liberal Whip when interviewed before he left England recently for the west coast of Africa.

He will first visit Lagos and after travelling through Nigeria hopes to go on to the Gold Coast, Sierra Leone and Gambia

"I shall wander about West Africa with the natives and hope to meet all kinds of people, Europeans and natives, in their several walks of life, on equal terms," said Mr. Grey.

He has made all his previous journeys alone to know the people and understand their conditinos.

HOPE OF MAKING NOVEL FIND LED COLLINS TO CAVE DEATH

Attention of Millions Focused on Obscure Explorer Through Entombment.

LOVER OF BEAUTY.

CAVE CITY, Ky., Feb. 18.—Perhaps never in modern times has any one man sprung from the seclusion of a common life into national attention for two weeks as did Floyd Collins through the accident that pinioned him in the depths of Sand Cave.

Through some psychological appeal to human nature, probably the commonly abhorred situation of being buried alive, the entombment of Collins drew the attention of virtually every citizen of the United States and Canada, and even aroused interest in many other countries.

Had the boulder crushed him to death instead of pinioning one foot, his fate probably would have been recited in a line or two in a few local newspapers, but as soon as it became apparent that his rescue would be difficult, if at all possible, newspaper correspondents flocked to Cave City by the dozens. There were upwards of 150 correspondents and photographers at the cave by the time the excavators finally reached Collins, only to find him dead.

During the 16 days that almost super-human efforts were exerted by those tunnelling into the earth in an attempt to rescue Collins, virtually every newspaper in the country printed from one to five columns about him daily.

When the miners finally broke through the roof of Collins' prison and word of his discovery was shouted to the top of the 55-foot shaft it was merely a matter of seconds before virtually every newspaper knew that the lost man had been found, but too late to save his life.

Was Trapped Before.

Collins, a native of the cave country, had spent his life as a guide and explorer of the caves that honeycomb the hills of Barren County.

A few years ago he was imprisoned by a falling boulder and was held captive for forty-eight hours. This accident occurred in Crystal Cave, which he is credited with discovering and which he owned jointly with his his father.

Believing that other beautiful caverns were awaiting a discoverer, Floyd spent much time in the mole-like passageways beneath the surface of the earth.

His present predicament is unique in many ways. Unknown at the time of his accident except to his neighbors and those tourists who remember the name of the enthusiastic guide who pointed out the beauties of his underground world, Collins' name and story attracted national attention within a few days after he was entombed.

Persons flocked to Sand Cave from far and near. Others, unable to come, sent messages of sympathy and encouragement, or made suggestions to the rescuers. Others contributed money to the rescue work, and in many churches prayer services were held for him.

Geologists and scientists in widely different parts of the country delved into their records and issued statements covering one phase or another of the situation.

The State, headed by Governor W. J. Fields; the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, cities and towns within a wide radius to the cave, and individuals and corporations bent every effort to rescue Collins. Fast trains, which do not ordinarily stop at Cave City, stopped and unloaded every conceivable kind of tool and apparatus that it was thought would help rescue the man.

The Collins family owns Crystal Cave, and compete with owners of other caverns in the vicinity for the tourist trade.

Floyd and two brothers, Homer and Marshall, live in this section, while another brother, Andy Lee Collins, now makes his home in Kewanee, Ill., but rushed to the aid of his brother days ago.

Forsaw Danger of Latest Trips.

Floyd's mother is dead and he was devoted to his stepmother. Mrs. Collins repeatedly begged Floyd to give up the hazardous work of exploring for new caves.

Lee Collins said his son had told his stepmother shortly before he was trapped that he was to undertake two days of the most dangerous cave exploring he had ever done. He told her he had dreamed he had been caught under a rock and that angels had carried him away.

She told Floyd it was a warning, Mr. Collins said, and asked him not to go into the cave again.

Collins was born on a farm five miles from Sand Cave, where the Collins family lives, and as nearly as his father can remember, Floyd has seldom been away from the cave country.

When just big enough to handle a plow, the mule one day sank to his knees in what has since been known as mule cave, and Floyd's cave enthusiasm was started. Mule Cave never developed into anything which would attract tourists, but Floyd was determined to find a cavern which would.

A few years after mule cave was discovered, Ed Turner, a civil engineer from New York, spent eight to ten months exploring the cave country, and taught Floyd the elementary geology he found useful. Between them they located an Onyx Cave, which also was inconsequential, and in Salt Cave, they found an Indian moccasin, one of the prized souvenirs of the region.

Groundhog Leads to Find.

By this time, he had started spending his spare time after farm duties in cave hunting. Lee Collins, his father, had taken up trapping, and in the bitter winter of 1917, Floyd saw a groundhog disappear into a "sink" on his father's farm.

This led to the discovery of Crystal Cave, one of the popular lesser caves of the region.

Floyd spent many days working in the snow enlarging the opening down which the groundhog disappeared, and finally opened the tunnel sufficiently to permit access in comfort to the main cavern, long afterwards, he found inside the entrance his trap with the foot of a groundhog still fast in it.

"Floyd kept me scared all the time," his father said. "I told him that some day he would be buried deeper than ever I could bury him, but he kept on exploring."

For three weeks Floyd had been working on Sand Cave, his father said. At first there was nothing but a small crevice, but Floyd enlarged it into the psesent entrance, about six feet high.

Evidences of fires built in Sand Cave by Floyd were found by the first rescue parties, showing he had tried to dry it out as he worked. The knowledge that he was working on Sand Cave led to his discovery about twenty-four hours after he was trapped by the fall of a boulder on his foot. Otherwise, buried sixty feet under ground, he might have remained hidden forever.

On his last trip down Sand Cave, he had taken along 72 feet of rope with which to lower himself into the huge cavern he said lay behind him.

Geological experts and old residents say Floyd's Sand Cave tunnel is the remnant of a greater cavern which once occupied the spot where the little ravine leads down into the mouth of Sand Cave. Many years ago it collapsed.

BOY DIES "PLAYING COLLINS."

BARNESBORO, Pa., Feb. 18.—Thirteen-year-old Frank Grankowsky lost his life while playing "Collins in the cave." The boy was caught under a heavy fall of rock and dirt in an abandoned mine to which he had led a number of companions on an "exploration" trip. The companions escaped and summoned aid.

Rescuers dug for several hours before the crushed body was recovered.

In choosing partners for the contest and games, the boys were given paper hearts to which a string was attached. They then stood behind a curtain and threw the hearts over and each girl wrote her name on a heart. The contest was to answer fifteen questions, the answers being words that started with the syllable Mrs. or Miss. The winners were Miss Edna Bullied and Mr. Lorne Hooper. Group games were then enjoyed until lunch was served, after which Miss L. Saunders favored the gathering with a recitation, and a sing-song concluded a very jolly evening.

How Opinion Changed On Science Of Heredity

MONTREAL, B.C., Feb. 18.—(Canadian Press).—The Science of Heredity was discussed by Dr. Richard Cabot, Professor of Medicine in Harvard University showing how opinion had changed in the last 20 or 30 years.

Among theories now rejected were these of hereditary insanity, cancer and tuberculosis, and the belief, still commonly held by many people, that the inter-marriage of cousins brought dire results in the matter of progeny.

Speaking of the latter Dr. Cabot said this theory represented a survival now shown definitely to be untrue. If cousins were both bearers of bad stock, their child would be more likely to perpetuate bad stock than others, he said, but that was all that could be said on that score.

MR. ALAN SMALL

Troubled For Years With Indigestion

Mr. Allan Small of 607 Greene Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "I have always lived in fear of heart trouble—my father, as well as my mother's sister, died from this dreaded affliction when I was a child. As it was on both sides of my family and I had often heard it was hereditary, I lived in dread and fear.

"As I have had at intervals severe abdominal pains, heart-burn and pressure on the heart, I felt there was no relief so I became reconciled to the horrible truth I was doomed, nothing could be done and must await my time to go as my father and mother's sister. I never dreamed I might only have intestinal indigestion, and my trouble was sour and acid stomach, causing gas pressure on the heart. Thanks to a friend who suggested Carter's Little Liver Pills as a remedy for faulty intestinal elimination, I am now free from the dreaded fear and around good health. Such pleasant way to take and relieve [illegible] in a rational way, without [illegible] effects."

Fashionable Church Has Dressing Room For Brides

The Dean of Manchester, one of England's most prominent ecclesiastics, has just been denouncing Miss 1925's habit of powdering her nose, —not a new question, but one always sure of raising the dust. But the Dean can't possibly know of a convenient little dressing room in the fashionable Church of St. Columbus, London, where the bride can retire to powder her nose and arrange her veil before going up the aisle. Every bride makes use of it, and Miss Octavia Lebourdy of Ottawa who married Captain H. S. Brown of the Grenadier Guards, last Tuesday was no exception. Miss Lebourdy, by the way, was a 'green' bride, and even her ornaments were of jade. Prince Henry, who at one time was a fellow officer of the bridegroom, went to the reception afterwards at the Berkeley.

Lonely White Bear Offers Comfortable Home To Mate

VICTORIA, B. C., Feb. 18.—(Associated Press).—An attempt is to be made to capture alive a mate for Ursus Kermodei, a lonely white bear, the only one of its species known to be in captivity, now housed in a new $1,000 home of its own at Beacon Hill Park. A report has been received from Princess Royal Island, on the northwestern British Columbian coast, that bears of the same species are at large there. Smaller than polar bears, they have a limited habitat and, owing to the isolated and rugged character of the islands, it is almost impossible to capture the animals alive.

ONLY THE MOTHER KNOWS ABOUT THE COUGHS AND COLDS OF THE CHILDREN

It is hard to keep them from taking cold; they will run out of doors not properly clad, or have on too much clothing; play too hard and get overheated and cool off too suddenly; get their feet wet; kick off the bed clothes at night, and do a dozen things the mother can't prevent.

The prompt use of

will check the cough or cold before any serious lung trouble can possibly develop.

Mrs. Everett E. Keetch, R.R. No. 2, Fredericton, NB, writes:—"My little boy, age nine years, had a dreadful cold which left him with a bad cough I tried Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and after using three bottles he was completely relieved. I would advise all mothers to use this remedy for their children as it is an excellent medicine."

RAINEY SEES LIQUOR INTERESTS

of the Prime Minister of Ontario. "In 1916, the Premier got off the beer waggon and went on the political water waggon and he remained there more or less steadfastly until exactly three years ago today, when he addressed a meeting in Hamilton. That was the beginning of a long ride on the beer waggon. He was then not only the rising hope of the Tory party but also of the liquor interests. He reached the crescendo on the beer waggon just before the general election of 1923 and just immediately before it he got back on the water waggon by saying that the party would do no injury to the O.T.A., its own child. The temperance Conservatives took him at his word, and the liquor interests knew their man, and here he is now." (Progressive applause).

Changes Waggons.

"But the Premier could not restrain himself. After being elected and just before the plebiscite he crawled back on to the beer waggon again. He commended his system of government control, which was to be far better than that of any other province. In the wet centres the Conservative organizations became the Moderation League, and then came the vote. The government was disappointed with the result of the plebiscite, but the Premier went back on the water waggon and remained there obviously uneasy until last week. In ten years he was on the water waggon four times and on the beer waggon three times."

Mr. Raney said that the dark ominous clouds of the liquor interests were in the background seeking to get control of the Legislature. "Those interests are trying to coerce this government into a disregard of the vote and the pledged word of the government, for all members of the government must take equal responsibility with the premier. One would have thought that after the vote the liquor interests would have said to the Premier, 'You have done your best, but the game is up,' and accepted defeat in a sportsmanlike manner. But they believed they owned the government of Ontario body and soul, and are trying to dominate this Legislature and its weak vascillating government. In this government with the exception of one, every member is against the O.T.A. personally or represents a riding that voted wet."

Says It Intoxicates.

The Progressive leader said there was no doubt that 4.4 beer was intoxicating if the dictionary meaning for intoxication was taken. He said that a quart of the new proposed beer would be equivalent to two and one-half ounces of 40 per cent. whiskey. He also quoted the public school hygiene that any alcohol was bad for people. He quoted a remark made editorially by The Montreal Gazette, that the proposal was the "latest blow in the stronghold of dry power" declaring that this explained the whole objective in a nut shell. He said that the introduction of the old license system was a little too raw for the government to propose, so they tried to argue that the new beer was non-intoxicating. The next step, he argued, was to go back to the bar room. There was such a more serious charge that he could see little use in the Liberal amendment charging breach of pledge because Ontario people were in no mood for hair splitting.

Mr. Raney argued that, if the foreign vote were eliminated and that thousands had not been put on the lists who were not entitled to be on, the majority in favor of the O.T.A would have been tremendous. He claimed that names were illegally added to the lists in Toronto.

"Did the judges of Toronto debauch the Election Act?" asked Mr. Nickle.

Mr. Raney said he would refuse to answer, as he did not want to call any one names. He maintained that the pledges of the Premier were only incidental to the real blunder of the government and appealed to the forty-two Conservatives representing dry ridings to maintain the present law. He predicted that the government would not be sustained in the division.

Mr. Nickle's Speech.

Mr. Nickle said that the government this year had announced all its intentions in the Speech from the Throne, so the people would have an early opportunity to see what was contemplated. Previous governments, he said, hadn't the courage to do it. He criticized the Liberal leader for neglecting to make constructive criticism or proposals on the Eastern Ontario Hydro situation and, referring to the Settell letters, said that Sir Adam Beck was now in the south because of the strain of the burden on his shoulders. He made a plea, "that this sniping of the Hydro cease, so that Sir Adam Beck, as the long shadows fall on the hillside may realize that he has the confidence and good will of all the people in this province."

He also criticised Mr. Sinclair's proposal that part of the revenue from the gasoline tax go to the municipalities to help roads. He pointed out that the government was already giving huge grants to municipalities for roads. The Ontario government, he said, was not trying to pass the buck to Ottawa on unemployment.

"The cities that are suffering mostly from unemployment are those where the tariff tinkering of the Ottawa government has spoiled the agricultural implement industry," said Mr. Nickle. He also reminded Mr. Raney that he had not forgotten the "devious" ways of the late Drury administration, and how it always got private members, to introduce legislation for which it did not like to accept responsibility.

Temperance Problem.

Touching lightly on other matters, Mr. Nickle then went into a discussion of prohibition and temperance, starting early in Biblical days when "Noah went on a beastly spree." He said that he could trace all through history the struggle between temperance and over-indulgence in all things. He pointed out that the amount spent on drink in Britain was equal to the national debt and that, therefore, the problem did not seem to be confined to Ontario. He declared that as far as the liquor question was concerned, the attitude of the Liberals had not always been "trust the people," as the leader now claimed. There had been two plebescites in the days of Liberal government in which the people had voted for prohibition, but they had not got it, and there had been one Federal plebiscite in which the people also voted for prohibition, but were not given it by the then Liberal government.

Raney's Mission.

Mr. Nickle also told the history of two and one-half per cent. contained in the present act, stating that there was conflict in the legislature in 1916 as to whether it should be two and one-half per cent. proof spirits or two and one-half weight content. He agreed that he had found enforcing the O.T.A. "no joke." He believed that the first big reduction in the votes from the original one on the O.T.A. to the one on importation was because "a lot of people believe in temperance when they can get all the liquor they want." He drew tremendous applause from the Conservatives with the remark "I really believe that the former Attorney-General (Mr. Raney) thought he was the Lord annointed to do a great work."

Mr. Nickle said he was convinced a year ago that there was great change in sentiment regarding the O.T.A., although the 33,000 majority came as a great disappointment, because "we had not consolidated our advances and public sentiment was not educated to the radical change." He argued that there had been sexual difference because the majority of women voted for the Act and the majority of men against, and there had been sectional differences because the rural parts were loyal to the Act, and the urban "slipped back dreadfully."

He argued that there was a sustained conviction in urban places that the Act was undemocratic. He said that something must be left to the conscience of the people and not imposed as a crime by law.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 18, 1925.

ONE EVERY MINUTE.

The Examiner has more than once advised its readers to consult their bankers before embarking upon an investment—or rather a speculation—in something about which they had any reason to feel doubtful.

High-pressure stock salesmen, however, seem to be able to present such alluring pictures of fabulous returns that any thought of seeking advice is driven from the mind of the victim.

Thus we have a score of Middlesex farmers asking the Ontario Government to assist them in recovering $288,000 invested by them in a Texas oil stock scheme that they now believe to be a huge swindle.

One lamb that was shorn is said to have paid over $17,000 in Victory Bonds and mortgaged his home for $4,000 to hand over this amount to the smooth operators.

The chances are that if this man and his fellow-victims had made use of the judgment and experience of the bank managers in their district their money would still be safe.

The counsel of the executives of the banks is always at the disposal of their depositors, and it is a pity that it is not utilized more often.

If it were peddlers of fake oil stock would have difficulty in getting away with a quarter of a million dollars—which seems to have been a very easy feat in this particular case.

GET SOME BUSINESS DONE.

It is unfortunate that the fuss over Premier Ferguson's stronger beer proposal makes the O. T. A. agitation appear to be the whole show at Queen's Park.

The Speech from the Throne contained other proposals in regard to agriculture, education, the power situation, the fuel question, and other matters that in the long run are of much greater import than the amount of "punch" there may be in 4.40 beer, and it is to be hoped that the legislators will recognize that fact and get down to business.

The change in the O. T. A. is not of sufficient moment to justify the attention it is receiving both in the House and outside.

It may be an issue at the next election, but until then there is no use in wasting the time of the Legislature in quarreling over something that is bound to carry when a division is taken.

There are many problems that need attention, much important legislation to be considered.

The O. T. A. battle should be given a change of venue to the sideshow tent and let the main top be devoted to a consideration of the business of the Province, which threatens to be held up while extremists on opposite sides of the question revile each other and generally impede the smooth working of the Legislature machinery.

Let us get some business done.

A FITTING RECOGNITION.

One item in the estimates that should receive the hearty support of all parties in the Federal House is that providing for a fitting recognition of the national service rendered by Dr. Charles Saunders in the development of "Marquis" wheat.

It is proposed to give Dr. Saunders an annuity of $5,000, and the people of Canada generally will applaud this belated testimony of the gratitude of the country to a servant of the people who has made a most valuable contribution towards the national wealth.

To have allowed Dr. Saunders to drop out of the service on the mere pittance of a retiring allowance for superannuated civil servants would have been a lasting reproach.

His discovery of "Marquis" wheat extended the wheat belt of Canada hundreds of miles to the north, and the benefit in dollars and cents cannot be evenly approximately estimated.

This country owes him much more than could possibly be expressed in a monetary way, and it is the least that could be done to make sure that he is in receipt of a yearly allowance large enough to enable him to spend the autumn of his life in comfortable circumstances.

The item should be carried in short order when it comes before Parliament.

THE SALARY GRAB.

The Farmers' Sun is frank in its opposition to the proposed salary increases for Ontario Cabinet Ministers and larger sessional indemnities for members of the Legislature.

"The salaries of the Ministers," declares the official organ of the U. F. O., "are not out of line with the possible earnings of any of these gentlemen in private life; they are in excess of the earnings of some at least of the Cabinet Ministers, and are fully equal to what any wise corporation would pay the best of them."

With that viewpoint the Examiner is in thorough accord.

There is no reason to believe that the majority of the Cabinet Ministers are making much of a financial sacrifice in accepting the positions they hold, and some ground for believing that some of them are better off than they could hope to be if in private life.

As for the members, the mistake is often made of viewing the sessional indemnities as salaries, but the original intention was to guarantee the members against loss while attending the Legislature, and surely $1,400 for a two months' session is ample for this purpose.

If the members of the Legislature have their ears to the ground they should have no trouble in detecting the strong hostility that exists in all parts of the Province and among all classes and parties to the proposal of adding $80,600 to the cost of government overhead.

It seems almost a waste of time for Hon. W. E. Raney to tell the Legislature that he is opposed to stronger beer. That speech might just as well have been taken as read.

WHY THEY MARRY CHINESE.

Within the last few days there have been three weddings celebrated in Toronto, in each case Chinamen marrying white girls. The minister who has performed the ceremonies has some interesting comment on the reason for such marriages. He is frank enough in giving his own opinion, for he states "personally I object to such unions myself, as the experiment is too dangerous."

Going outside his own prejudices, and looking for the causes for these three marriages, the minister concludes they were made because the girls in each case were tired of the sort of life that had been theirs before; they were anxious to have a home and believed that the Chinamen would provide it.

There is something worth thinking about in what the clergyman says, says the London Advertiser. He analyzes the situation farther and remarks: "Men offer the theatre, an automobile ride, and all those things that help make up the lighter side of life, but too seldom do they offer a home, even a poor and a little one. What a girl yearns for is a door that she can lock behind her, a house that is her own. Dispirited with the hollowness of city life, she chooses a Chinaman. He offers her a home, and can you blame her if she forgets racial differences in the knowledge that she is kindly treated, provided for and respected?"

There is plenty of truth in what the clergyman says about the dangers of these marriages, but there is also a point that should not be overlooked on the other side. There are girls who are forced to make their own way, and they must detest at times the miserable attentions that are forced on them by some of the so-called smart young men. Parties, so-called "good times," a cloak that is used to cover all manner of things, suppers, late hours—these are the programs too often mapped out by the young men and agreed to by the girls of today.

The time is not far past when a father used to consider it his duty, when he found a young man making calls on his daughter, to inquire frankly what his intentions were, and the vague direction in which we are moving today leads to the conclusion that that plan had much to commend it.

THE TWO OFFICIAL LANGUAGES.

R. R. Hall of Peterboro has been telling the people of the Province of Quebec, through the Montreal Reform Club, of the advantages which a Canadian must inevitably derive from a knowledge of the two official languages of the Dominion. With greater profit he might have addressed himself to an Ontario audience.

A descendant of those who originally settled Canada and proud of their exploits, the French-Canadian is naturally jealous of his tongue and is anxious that its right to respect as one of the two official languages, a right safeguarded in the British North America Act, shall be preserved. But he is equally anxious to acquire a knowledge of the sister language, and it is a fact regrettable but true that a great many more French-Canadians are masters of the two languages, often to a surprisingly fluent degree, than are their Anglo-Canadian brothers. Practical bilingualism has not made such strides in any part of the Dominion as it has made in the Province of Quebec, the inhabitants of which believe in practising what they preach. They are not slow to realize the advantage which must come to them in a business way as well as in a sentimental way through knowledge of the two languages, for it is patent that in proportion to the degree of his familiarity with both tongues is the Canadian able to improve his business dealings and social relationships with a very large proportion of his fellow-citizens. And no effort to create a Bonne Entente between the two peoples can hope of complete success until those of English-speaking origin make a more conscientious effort than is now visible to acquaint themselves with the speech of the French-Canadian.

La Presse makes this the more clear in its editorial reference to Mr. Hall's address. The truth that a knowledge of the two languages, French and English, procures a marked advantage for the people of the Dominion is, it says, one that of all others is perhaps the most difficult to obtain a practical knowledgment. "It can be affirmed," La Presse goes on to say, "that most of the past differences between the two principal racial groups of the Dominion arose because the one was ignorant of the language of the other. It is not a question of mere sentiment, but a matter of business. The brutal fact remains that, separated, we can develop the resources of the Dominion only very slowly, whereas, on the other hand, unity of forces will bring about that co-operation of effort which will profit not only ourselves individually and in groups, but the country as a whole."

This unity so desirable would be the more simple of attainment if it were not for the activities of the extremists and agitators both in Ontario and in Quebec who profit by racial and sectional emotions to foment ill-will and strife. Stirring up bitternesses and resurrecting differences will not help the situation. If some power could be invoked to curb these firebrands and place them where they would be unable to carry on their malicious machinations, there would come an end to feeling and distrust.

There are those in Ontario who, under the influence of such agitation and propaganda, are willing to regard the French-Canadian as an enemy rather than as a compatriot, and French might be the language of Satan for the manner in which they avoid contamination with it. How senseless and futile is this attitude of splendid isolation! The very language which these people commonly employ has been enriched by liberal borrowings from that which they eschew. And, moreover, they are denying themselves the pleasures of a great and lasting literature and contact with an equally great and historic people when they decline to have either truck or trade with anything which bears the stamp of French origin or French approval.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

If the Peterboro Hockey Club can make a better showing by playing away from home than they can here, every real fan will wish them luck in their transfer.

The debate on the Address is over. The best thing that can be said about it is that it was finished a little quicker than usual.

From the tone of Mr. Donald Sutherland's remarks in regard to Mr. W. T. R. Preston, one gathers a faint impression that the former has no particular use for the latter.

A new fraternal society is to be called the Hidden Empire of the Midnight Sun. There are a lot of midnight sons who might be eligible for membership.

A THOUGHT.

The snow purifies the air and puts pep in your body. The wind that blows gives you the necessary battle to make you strong. The rain that falls freshens the earth and gives you food, but the shadows are all made by sunshine.

When shadows cross your path, you know that the sun is shining.

Snow, wind and rain should not bother you half so much as to know how you stand in the sunshine, that you may not cast too great a shadow

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Feb. 17. — Wheat scored gains in price at the last today despite a previous setback of five cents a bushel. Export business and curtailment of primary receipts, together with unfavorable crop conditions in Texas, were largely responsible for the late upturn in values.

Closing quotations on wheat were firm at the same as yesterday's finish to 1 7-8c higher, May 184¼ to 184 3-4c and July 155 3-4 to 156 with corn 1-8 to 7-8c up; oats showing 1-8 to 3-4c gain and provisions varying from 17c decline to a rise of 5c.

At the outset the wheat market showed pronounced weakness which became more and more acute until shortly after the beginning of the second hour, the May delivery showed an extreme fall of 5c under yesterday's latest figures. The drop in values had been accompanied by a general rush to sell. Offerings how ever were mostly in small lots, and were associated with discouragement of miscellaneous holders influenced by an increase of the United States visible supply, a sharp decline in Liverpool quotations and by apparent slowness of export demand as well as by the big quantity of wheat on ocean passage.

EGG PRICES.

OTTAWA, February 17. — The market was easier to-day and indications point to a further decline in prices. Three cars of United States fresh are reported rolling Toronto, and other shipments are rolling Montreal.

The British Columbia market is reported weak and during the past week has declined 12c.

Toronto unchanged.

Montreal easier; extras jobbing 56, firsts 52.

Winnipeg, jobbing extras 55 to 53, firsts 50 to 52.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, Man., February 17.—Uninteresting cables, easier United States market, and a lot of export demand generally gave the wheat market a heavy draggy tone through out to-day's dealings, prices fluctuating 2c to 4 5-8c under Monday's close on a moderate trade. At the close, which was fairly steady, and around the high point of the day, May was 3-4c lower; July 5-8c and October 1c.

There was very little outside news to influence the market while Liverpool cables, after a weak opening, closed about 4 1-2c to 6c lower.

The trade in future coarse grains was light with no particular feature beyond heavy offerings of oats early in the session.

MONTREAL GRAIN.

MONTREAL, Feb. 17. — No export business in Canadian grain was reported here to-day.

The trade in coarse grains in the domestic market was slow, there being little demand from any source, although the tone was steady. Ontario No. 3 white oats were quoted at 65 and No. 4 grade at 63c per bushel ex-store.

The weakness in the market for millfeed on Monday was again in evidence to-day and a further reduction of $1 per ton was made for all lines, which makes a net decline of $5 per ton within the past few days. A moderate business was transacted in rolled oats.

An easier feeling developed in eggs and wholesale jobbing prices were reduced one cent. per dozen.

The butter market was inactive but steady. Prices were well maintained in cheese with fodder made No. 1 white and colored goods quoted at 20¼ to 20½c per lb. and No. 2 grade at 19 1-4 to 19 1-2c per lb.

Owing to the small demand for beans now prices are fluctuating.

The average price was about $2.75 per bushel.

STERLING RATES.

Sterling demand $4.77 1-8.

Sterling cables, $4.77½.

Get rid of constipation by internal cleanliness

HEADACHES, biliousness, sleepless nights, heaviness, are Nature's warning that intestinal poisons are flooding your system. If this is allowed to continue, you may become a victim of serious organic disease.

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favour Lubrication

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

ENNISMORE COUPLE CELEBRATE JUBILEE

Mr. and Mrs. John Conway Honored on Fiftieth Anniversary.

The celebration of the golden jubilee of Mr. and Mrs. John Conway in Ennismore on Monday, February 9th, was recognized as a rare event in that township.

The family and relatives present were: Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Conway, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Conway, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. O'Donnell of Lindsay, Mr. and Mrs. Matt. Foley of Kirkfield, Mr. Leo Conway, Miss A. Sullivan, Miss L. Sullivan and the eight grandchildren.

At five o'clock in the evening a dinner and reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Conway, at which forty guests were entertained.

The clergy present were: Rev. Fathers McAuley, Garvey and McGuire. Messrs. Killen, MacIsaac and MacDonald of St. Augustine's Seminary were also present.

At the close of the dinner, toasts were given by the clergy, who expressed their appreciation at being present at such an unique event and extended their congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Conway.

The following address was read by Miss A. Sullivan, on behalf of the family, while little Mary Conway presented a purse of gold:

"Dear Father and Mother,—

"We, your children, grandchildren and friends, have gathered this evening to celebrate with you this fiftieth anniversary of your wedding.

"It is very fittingly called 'the golden wedding,' for, like gold, such events are very precious and rare.

"It is a long time since the happy day when you, a young and happy couple, stood before God's altar, where the sacrament of matrimony was conferred on you. Very few are privileged to celebrate such a happy occasion as this day brings forth.

"As we have grown up, we can in some measure understand what it must have meant to you to take care of your family.

"We can never fully appreciate your loving devotion to us through the years of our childhood and youth.

"Now that we do more fully understand, there comes to us a great sense of indebtness and love to you for your untiring love and affection to us through all the years.

"We are grateful to a kind Providence that we may rejoice with you on this your golden jubilee.

"We desire you, on behalf of your family, to accept this purse of gold, by which we desire to show you that our love, honor and respect are golden. We pray that the Great Father may ever bless you, sparing you for many years to live together in this life, and in that great 'golden jubilee' in heaven you and all your loved ones may gather as an unbroken family, to praise Him, without whom the earth would be one dark wilderness.

"Signed by the family."

The grandchildren also remembered their grandparents during the evening, when Miss N. Conway read the following address and Master John Conway presented the grandparents with a gold piece:

"Dear Grandparents,—

"As your oldest grandchild, I feel it an honor, and I must say that I esteem it very greatly.

"You see around you most of the immediate members of your family here, who have gathered together to give the honor and respect which you should receive on your fiftieth anniversary.

"We wish you many more years of that health and happiness which you have enjoyed so well together.

"We ask you to accept this small gift in token of the many kindnesses which you have shown us.

"Signed on behalf of your grandchildren."

Mr. Conway responded on behalf of himself and Mrs. Conway, thanking the guests for their kind thoughtfulness. He also thanked the family and grandchildren in a special manner for their affectionate remembrances.

The remainder of the evening was passed very pleasantly in music and games.

Among the gifts received by Mr. and Mrs. Conway was a beautiful gold crucifix, presented by Rev. J. N. McAuley.

Valentine Social.

A very enjoyable Valentine social was held in the parish room on Friday evening, with a concert rendered by the Community Choral Society, under the direction of Rev. C. Spence. A trio, "Evening Bells" from the operetta Pauline was especially well rendered, and was very effective, as also was the chorus, "Hail the Morning," from the same work. The Rev. J. Ogden's inimitable rendering of Drummond's "When Albani Sang," was too good to be missed. A feature of the evening was the sale of valentines made by the ladies, which realized $16.85. First and second prizes for the prettiest valentines were awarded to Miss Burns and Miss Phyllis Spence respectively, Mrs. W. Johnston being the judge.

The Rev. J. Ogden acted as chairman. The total proceeds amounted to $24. The programme will be repeated on Thursday night at the Community Club Room at Lasswade. The programme was as follows:

O Canada, Choral Society; piano duet, Mr. Spence and Mrs. Kilborn; chorus, Hail the Morning, Choral Society; violins, Peggy O'Neil; song, Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep, Rev. J. Ogden; song, Mrs. Kilborne; violin solo, Mr. Spence; trio, Evening Bells, Mrs. Reid, Mrs. Kilborne, Miss P. Spence; song, Oh Fair, O Sweet and Holy, Mr. Spence; chorus, Come Where the Lilies Bloom, Choral Society; violin solo, Herb. Lean; song, In Happy Moments, Rev. J. Ogden; song, The Bells of St. Mary's, Miss P. Spence; reading, Rev. J. Ogden; quartette, Home, Sweet Home, Spence Family.

FIRE AN ACCIDENT.

Fire Marshall Heaton Investigates $100,000 Blaze in Kingston.

KINGSTON, Ont., Feb. 18. — (Canadian Press).—Fire Marshal Heaton of Toronto, who yesterday conducted an investigation into the fire which recently damaged the store and stock of Robertson, Limited, crockery dealers, to the extent of one hundred thousand dollars, after hearing several witnesses, announced that it had been clearly established by the evidence that the fire was purely an accident but that the cause was unknown. He added that at this stage of the investigation had there been a suggestion of anything but an accident he said that he had received an anonymous letter signed by "One who knows," criticizing the fire department work at the fire, but after referring to the cowardice of the writer, he warmly commended the department for the effective way in which it had tought the fire.

In Girlhood and Womanhood

"My first experience with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription was about the time I was growing into womanhood," said Mrs. Hilda Hodgins of 504 Aylmer Ave., Windsor, Ont., whose picture appears above. "I had become rundown, my nerves were bad and I got very weak and trembly. My mother gave me Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it completely built me up in health, strengthened my nerves and made me feel well and strong. Since I married, whenever I have felt myself going down in health, or my nerves beginning to bother me, I have taken the 'Favorite Prescription' and every time it has done for me just what I expected it would do—built me up in health and strength, quieted my nerves and made me feel fine. There isn't any medicine a woman can take for her ills that can compare with 'Favorite Prescription.'"

CANADA FACES GREAT FUTURE SAYS SPEAKER

Rev. J. M. Whyte Says People Should Not Be Disgruntled.

GREAT GRANARY.

Problem is to Assimilate Incoming Races to True Canadianism.

MARMORA, Feb. 17.—Rev. J. M. Whyte, of Eldorado, who is just back from attending the World's Missionary Conference in Washington, was the special preacher at the Methodist Church on Sunday evening. In lieu of a sermon the reverend gentleman gave a very eloquent address. "God," he said, "has given us a wonderful heritage in Canada. The eyes of the world are upon us because of our abundance.."

Rev. Whyte then made interesting comparisons of Canada with other countries. He continued by saying that the Northwest was destined to be the greatest granary in the world. Yet there is an immense amount of untouched territory in this Dominion. In the days to come there will be a tremendous population. What shall our own people do to cope with the problems increased immigration will bring? At the present time forty-five per cent. of the children attending Protestant schools in Montreal are of Jewish parentage. These parents are asking for representation on the school boards and the preacher felt they had a right to a certain amount of this. While he would not advocate intermingling of the races through marriage, he was an advocate of peace between the races everywhere. While on the matter of racial problems confronting Canada at home, Rev. Whyte also referred to the fact that there were only ten to fifteen English-speaking families in the large Ukrainian area. He next pointed out that the three things which had made Canada what she is to-day, were Confederation, the school system and the saddle-back brigade.

Conditions are Better.

There is much decrying of the conditions of to-day, yet they are not to be compared to the old ones. He had no use for the propaganda of to-day which said that there was more drinking than ever. Proceeding, the Rev. Whyte asked, "Do you not think God has put a great task upon us and made the programme of Christianity world wide?" While the preacher was in Washington recently, he inspected the various Lincoln relics, and the greatest of these he considered was that short, brief statement made in Lincoln's presidential address: "I would rather be assassinated on the spot where I stand than deny my principles."

"Was it mere accident," he, continued, "that Jesus was born or did He come at the appointed time?" Was it an accident that Wolfe defeated Montcalm, or was it an appointed triumph for the Anglo-Saxon race? It was no accident that the Gospel came west before going east. If we are a follower of that Gospel, Jesus means to us more than we know of. He, the preacher, would have suffered the fate of the "down and outs" but for the Gospel of Jesus Christ. As a church, Methodism had done her bit in carrying the Gospel to the heathen in far-off lands.

Home Dictates Type.

The early labors of Crosley, Ryerson, Young and Carpenter, among the Indians, were next touched upon. The trading in whisky for furs was going on then. The same thing is going on still. Amongst present-day missionary labor among foreigners might be mentioned the establishment of social centers. From these children were occasionally taken to our cities and shown how we do things. If our own children are trained in church matters and parents have no regard, very little definite work can be accomplished. In our home circles we need a better type of Christianity than often exists, so that people who come over here get the example of Christian lives to follow. A Chinese delegate to the Washington Conference said, "When I came over to the United States, after knowing of the amount of money expended by their people on our missions, I expected to find a saintly people by the thousand. I was dumbfounded to find thousands professing to be Christians, blaspheming God's holy name at the same time, and gambling and cheating in business." We may have the name of being Christians but we do need the genuine article. A delegate from India to the same Conference said, "We don't want any more religions, but we do want Jesus Christ. The best loved man among Hindu Christians is one who never trod on India's soil, Jesus Christ." Rev. Whyte remarked here that we ought never to speak of home and foreign missions because the whole world belongs to God. God floats no national flag. He has made us of one blood. We pride ourselves wrongly. Character is the only thing we should pride ourselves upon.

Flu Starts in China.

Rev. Whyte then gave interesting statistics as furnished at the World's Missionary Conference after a century's operations. The "flu" had been discovered to have originated from China, so from an economic stand-point, it paid to send medical missionaries there. In closing, the preacher quoted John R. Mott as having said, "The world is surcharged to-day as never before with strife, hatred and suspicion."

STOLEN.

Wall Street gets careless when the picking is easy. Again you're reading news items about messenger boys disappearing with large bundles of negotiable securities. One lad vanished with $40,000. He had been hired the day before and was at large on suspended sentence for stealing an auto.

Weak character should be screened from temptation as much as possible. Good way to begin would be to penalize employers who are not cautious enough in selecting employees to be entrusted with securities or cash.

Urging Co-operation.

T. W. Bird (Progressive, Nelson) asked what was being done by the government to put the Canadian dairy business on a co-operative basis in order to meet foreign competition. The minister replied that the department was carrying on educational work, suggesting the advantages of co-operation.

Referring to the proposed treaty with Australia, Donald Sutherland (Conservative), thought that the out look was rather gloomy when we would have to look to Australia and New Zealand for butter. "Is it the intention of the minister of agriculture to bring foreign products into this country in order to reduce the cost of living?" he asked.

Mr. Motherwell replied that certain concessions had been given to Australia under the proposed treaty, and in return Canada had to make some. The province of Saskatchewan had successfully competed with butter importations from New Zealand. The only remedy was to make better butter."

problem is whether the states shall return to pre-war parity or stabilize on the present level."

After pointing out that Austria, Hungary, Germany, Poland, Danzig and Esthonia have all adopted new parities, with Finland probably about to decide on one, the communique adds that some countries, like France, Italy and Belgium, have not yet formally decided upon their action. It explains that the new League mixed commission appointed to study the economic crisis will deal with this question in May, and it is hoped will succeed in laying down certain principles.

PARIS THIEF IN HARD LUCK.

Starving, He Breaks Two Teeth on Stolen "Chocolate" Bar.

PARIS, Feb. 16.—Without food for forty-eight hours, Marcel Marrin, 34 years old and homeless, grabbed a tablet of chocolate from a sidewalk stand in front of a grocery store and ran away with it.

Although he started well, he failed to show the enduring powers of a Nurmi, and the police collared the thief after a desperate run. On the way to the station the starving man, afraid that his loot would be taken from him, bit ravenously into the tempting-looking tablet and broke two teeth. The "chocolate" was a display advertising tablet made of wood.

The menu that night for Marris was thin soup and his address the Sante Prison.

MILLBROOK BELL IS WAR TROPHY

Captured in Rebellion of 1885 and Hung in Millbrook Fire Hall.

CRACKED IN FIRE.

CAVAN, Feb. 18.—At the Cavan Institute at Miss McNeil's on Thursday afternoon, the following clipping was read by Mrs. J. D. Hunter. The clipping had been taken from a Toronto newspaper a couple of years ago.

Although living in Cavan, in the Millbrook vicinity, the information contained in the clipping was new and interesting tothose present. The majority of the ladies had not known that there was such an interesting history associated with the bell.

Old Bell at Millbrook.

There is an interesting story in connection with the bell which hangs in the tower of the firehall at Millbrook, Ontario. The bell was originally sent from France to Bishop Grandon for use in the Roman Catholic Church at Onion Lake in the Northwest territory. At the time of the Rebellion in 1885 this church was destroyed by fire and the bell left attached to two posts—all that remained of the building.

Jack Steinthorpe, Ira Nattrass and Ed. McCorry, members of the old Durham Regiment, then on active service in the locality, climbed up and took down the bell, afterwards bringing it home with them to Millbrook, where it was placed in the firehall tower. Later, Bishop Grandon wrote to Ottawa demanding the return of his bell, and Harry Ward, M.P., of Port Hope, came to Millbrook about the matter. It was claimed, however, as a trophy of war, considerable indignation aroused, and its return emphatically refused. Old Sergeant McCorry declared he would stand guard with a rifle and serious harm would result to anyone attempting to carry it off.

The tower of the hall was then some feet higher than at present and when the building was damaged by fire the bell was cracked; but it is still used for fire alarm purposes, although the town bell is now rung on such occasions as well.

CHURCH STATISTICS.

Toronto, Feb 18.—Stories have been going the rounds of the country newspapers to the effect that, while Methodism increased its membership by only 79,566 in the decade 1911-1921, Presbyterianism added 294,083 members in the same period.

Rev. S. W. Dean, general conference statistician of the Methodist Church, states that these totals are enormously exaggerated and unfair to both denominations. The numbers, he says, were taken from the Dominion census of 1921, but refer to populations rather than to memberships. The latest membership total of the Presbyterian Church in Canada is 374,951 and of the Methodist Church 414,047. Presbyterian "population" is in round numbers 1,450,000 and Methodist 1,150,000.

Explanation of these discrepancies is so uncertain a matter, according to Mr. Dean, that anyone drawing conclusions is merely inviting fruitless controversy.

DOWNEYVILLE HAS HARD TIME SOCIAL

Clever Costumes and Jollity Marked Pleasant Occasion.

DOWNEYVILLE, Feb. 17.—A very successful hard-time social was held in the hall here Friday evening and was attended by a large crowd, as both the weather and roads were all that could be desired. Some of the costumes caused a great deal of merriment and fun, while others were splendid. Mr. Leslie Lucas won the gentlemen's prize (a pack of cards in a leather case). His suit was made of bran sacks; while Miss Ruby Perdue won the ladies' prize (a set of wine glasses); her suit was also made of bran sacks.

The Ellwood orchestra, from Lindsay, supplied the music and was enjoyed by all for their generosity in responding to the many encores. An excellent supper was served by the Catholic Women's League which was also enjoyed by all. The officers of the League were well satisfied with the proceeds.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Murray, Mrs. Thos. Harrington, Mrs. Chas. H. Lucas and son, James, attended the funeral of their cousin, the late Thos. O'Connor, in Ennismore.

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Lynch were business visitors to Lindsay on Saturday.

The Misses Lillian Herlihey and Phyllis Meehan have returned home after a pleasant three weeks' visit with friends in Peterboro'.

The Misses Agnes and Hazel O'Neill, of Lindsay, spent the week-end the guest of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael O'Neill.

Miss Ethel Gooselin left on Monday for Rochester, N.Y., where she will be the guest of friends for a few weeks.

Mr. Austin Scully, of St. Augustine's Seminary, Toronto, returned to that city after spending a pleasant visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. B. Scully, here.

The recent rain was a great blessing this locality, as both well and cis terns were completely dry and the people had to draw water in barrels a long distance to water their stock.

Mrs. Thos. Carroll left on Friday for Rochester, N.Y., where she will spend a month the guest of her sister, Mrs. Merron, and from there to Clarence Centre, N.Y., to visit her brother, Dr. R. Harrington; then she will go to Cleveland, Ohio, to visit her son, Dr. Joseph Carroll. She expects to be gone about three months.

CANARIES BARRED.

Pet Mouse Sent Girls Climbing; Canary Is Musical Instrument.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—(Canadian Press).—Canaries are barred as "musical instruments" at Johnson Hall, the new dormitory for women graduate students at Columbia University. Mice as pets are beyond the pale too.

Miss Frances Hawkins, of Denver, Col., brought her pet mouse when she took up quarters in the dormitory. Nine graduate students hit the ceiling when they saw the mouse so he had to go.

Miss Hawkins then adopted a canary, but the student governors of the dormitory have ruled the bird out under the section prohibiting musical instruments. The decision was that the canary might keep the students awake after 10.30 o'clock, the retiring hour.

TOYS ARE BOUGHT BY PARENTS TO PLEASE THEMSELVES ALONE

Reform Needed in Purchasing Playthings, Says Kindergarten Director.

TOO MUCH REALISM

By ETHEL WALTON EVERETT.

Do parents, in buying toys for their little ones, guide their choice not by what the children will like, but by what they like themselves?

Do they stop to think what results miniature lip-sticks and vanity cases, and dolls with "vampy" eyes, marcelled hair, pajamas and cigarettes may have on child minds?

These are a few of the questions raised by Miss Anne Seymour Blake, Director of the Kindergarten-Primary Department of the State Normal School, Geneseo, N. Y. Miss Blake, who has always at least a hundred young women taking special courses in educational play materials under her direct charge, is necessarily interested in the psychology of playthings. Discriminating between what is good and what is bad and choosing and adapting toys wisely for children are considered in the courses she supervises.

Miss Blake says that careful observation of modern toys has given her food for thought. She finds that most toys are too expensive and too complicated for the child and that other toys are entirely unsuited to children. She dislikes the ultra-realistic dolls and the doll with the seductive, half-closed eyes, marcelled hair, decollete dress or abbreviated bathing suit or pajamas. She shudders over a red and ugly doll meant to represent a very young baby.

"Very young babies should be beautiful," says Miss Blake.

The vamp doll with a cigarette comes in for her particular disfavor. Miss Blake said the other day that more toys are bought because adults like them than because they are really suitable for children.

"Little real thought is given to the child's need. The donor enjoys the excitement produced in the child at first sight of the toy more than he considers the use the child can make of the toy. He likes to see the child clap his hands and hear him shout: 'Goody, goody!'" she added.

The kindergarten director also found many toys that were too fragile for children. She conceded that it was good for the toy manufacturers and for further production, but thought it was not so good for the child. She thinks the child's bump of destructiveness is developed by easily broken toys. She believes, too, that the mass of toys owned by the average child is too great. "The child suffers," says she, "through having too many toys as well as through not having the right kind."

Too Much Realism.

Miss Blake spoke decidedly against the too realistic doll; the doll that frowns and cries, and has eyelashes of real hair; the new-born baby doll that she found "ugly"; and the doll vamp with the come-hither eyes and the cigarette. She did not like the doll known among the toy department people as the "drug store doll," having earned its name because it is sold in quantities in drug stores. She spoke of its "too red cheeks, staring large eyes, painted hair," and said: "When thrown over the shoulder, the drug store doll emits a heart-rending cry such as no human being ever utters. A post office employee tells me of great numbers of these dolls sent through the mails. They are easily detected by the weird sounds issuing from the packages."

In a recent search for the right kind of doll, not for professional demonstration purposes but merely to give to a child, Miss Blake says she did not find the one she wanted. She astonished a saleswoman by pointing an accusing finger at the two large front teeth proudly displayed by the smile of one dolly and said: "Look at those teeth. They are all wrong. The teeth come in first in the other jaw."

Another doll, she told the saleswoman, was "an adenoid doll," holding its mouth open as if it breathed through that orifice in the way that health authorities strive to prevent the child from breathing.

Dolls' accessories provided a new field for Miss Blake's disapproval. "Here we see," she said, "all the latest phases of fashion. There are slicker raincoats, hats with trimmings crested with tassels and what-not, fur coats of any length, covering or not covering the extra sheer chiffon stockings and galoshes; toilet articles and cosmetics, manicure sets, some of them initialed; perfume, handeaux for evening wear and jewelry.

"One doll house I studied was priced at $150 and was so completely furnished that no small owner could insert another chair or dish, if she wished—and it is child nature so to wish. The furniture was so out of proportion to the doll occupants that the effect was ludicrous. There was a bed shorter than the doll who would presumably be put to sleep on it. The hair brush was half the length of the bureau top. The bag of golf sticks was higher than the doll man of the house.

A Constructive Plaything.

"I could not help contrasting this doll house with one presented to a little friend last Christmas—one that had four empty rooms, with spaces cut for windows. With this house went bits of yarn to weave into rugs, fancy papers to decorate the walls, materials for curtains, thin pieces of wood and tacks to make furniture, a whole family of dolls to dress, and various materials with which to express individual taste. This is the right of every child."

Miss Blake spoke her heart-felt opinion of the kind of taste displayed in the furnishing of some too thoroughly furnished dolls' houses. She pointed out that the actual contents, the chairs, tables and sofas, were the sort of thing almost universally known today to be the acme of poor taste. The bits of coarse lace pasted up at the windows came in for her disfavor on that same count, and also on another—the child knows or should know that curtains are not affairs with cut edges pasted on windows, but finished and put up.

"Why buy so many unsuitable toys?" she asked. "There are beautiful wooden and stockinet dolls with child-like faces, simple enough to have read into them any expression of love, grief or joy. There is furniture to be painted by young owners. There are constructive toys of every description. A safe question for the grown-up to ask when purchasing a toy is: 'Will it involve activity on the part of the child! Will he think, plan and create with it?'"

Miss Blake spoke a good word for the carefully thought-out constructive toys that lead children to think, plan and execute, but she said that she did not find them in some of the shops where large numbers of people go for toys, and when found they were usually tucked away behind others supposed to present "greater attractions to the eye or ear." She considered the greatly decreased number of war-like toys this year significant.

Birds Find Greenbacks Growing On Maple Tree

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 18.—(Canadian Press).—Do Canadian sparrows bring dollar bills to housewives who spread crumbs for them? Amongst the stories told in Europe by immigration agents for Canada is said to be one of this kind, W. F. Garland, (Conservative—Carleton) told the House of Commons yesterday afternoon. He was urging better supervision and restriction on immigration from Europe.

One plausible gentleman advertised Canada to prospective emigrants in Europe with a story of a woman who was wont to scatter crumbs on her doorstep. One day a grateful sparrow winged its way to the little banquet bearing a dollar bill in its beak, and thereupon many may have hastened to Canada to share in such a harvest, Mr. Garland concluded.

FAMILY FOOD BUDGET HAS VARIED SLIGHTLY

January Costs About the Same as Year Ago.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 18.—(Canadian Press.)—The average weekly family budget of 29 staple foods was $10.77 for January, according to labor department returns. For December last, the budget was $10.58, and for January a year ago, $10.78. A similar weekly budget for January 1923 was $10.52 cents and January 1922 $11.03 cents. The peak for weekly family budget was reached in June 1920 when it totalled $16.92.

The wholesale prices index number calculated by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics showed a substantial advance, being 165.2 for January as compared with 160.9 for December 1924, and 156.7 for January 1924.

OBITUARY.

ETHEL B. JEWETT.

OMEMEE, Feb. 17. — The death of Miss Ethel B. Jewett, which occured in the Ross Memorial Hospital, Lindsay, Thusday night, came as a sharp shock to many friends.

Miss Jewett had been suffering for the past two years from a leakage of the heart and had gone to the hospital a week ago Monday for rest and treatment. Death came unexpectedly on Thursday night.

The late Ethel Jewett was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Jewett of Lindsay, a grand-daughter of the late Mrs. Bradburn. Her great-grandfather on her mother's side was the late Lieutenant-Colonel Davidson of Her Majesty's Service, while her great-grandmother on her mother's side was the late Mr. Dixon, all of whom were among the first settlers in this locality.

Early in life Miss Jewett had the great misfortune to fall down stairs, when visiting her grandmother, receiving such injuries as to necessitate the use of a crutch all through life. Notwithstanding her great physical disability she was an indefatigable worker in the various organizations of her church, as well as in the Women's Institute. Her work during the war was varied, for one part of which she was presented with a naval medal.

The esteem in which Miss Jewett was held was manifest in the large gathering which filled Christ church on Saturday afternoon, when the funeral service was held, ministers of the three churches being present.

The Rector, Rev. Mr. Weir, spoke feelingly of her good works, and paid a glowing tribute to her worth when he said, "She was a brave woman, ever at the post of duty; if not she did not give an excuse but a reason."

The beautiful service was enriched by the singing of "On the Resurrection Morning," "Jesus Lover of my Soul," "Hush! Blessed are the dead," which was led by the gowned choir.

The following beautiful floral tributes were placed on casket as an evidence of the esteem in which she was held:

APPALLING WASTE.

MONTREAL, Feb. 18.—(Canadian Press).—Miss L. E. F. Darry, speaking before the Catholic Social Service guild said that what might be termed the national weakness-extravagance or the delusions of grandeur—was responsible for much suffering from unemployment. Every visitor to the homes of the poor saw evidence of appalling waste and useless expenditure, much of which could be laid at the doors of those dealers who exploit this well-known weakness of the poor by inducing purchases on the instalment plan.

PRISONER CUT THROAT.

Guilty of Non-Support—Wound May be Fatal.

HULL, Que., Feb. 18.—(Canadian Press). — Slashing his throat from ear to ear and cutting his windpipe so that he was unable to speak, Eugene Beaudry, painter and decorator, of Deschenes, near here, who was a prisoner in the Hull jail, was at the point of death in a local hospital last night.

Beaudry, who is 38 years of age, was found guilty yesterday of non-support and had been remanded until Monday for sentence. He borrowed a razor from a fellow-prisoner who was shaving, retired to the lavatory and attempted suicide.

HOLD UP DRUG STORE.

Two Men and Revolver in Raid at Hamilton.

HAMILTON, Feb. 18.— (Canadian Press.)—Two young men stepped into Dunnigan's drug store last night, and backing the clerk, J. McNabb, to the rear of the store with a revolver, emptied $50 from the till. The men were not masked. Officers were on the scene in a few minutes and made a thorough search, but the pair had escaped.

The Women Are Smoking Because It's Fashionable

VANCOUVER, Feb. 18.—(Canadian Press).—Probably seven out of every twelve women in Vancouver smoke, according to a cigarette vender, who asserts that more than one-third of his customers are those of the fair sex. From his observations it may be concluded that that women are no longer smoking for effect or because it is fashionable, but rather from the pure enjoyment that they get from the weed. This is proved by the fact that women these days hardly ever buy the fancy graded cigarettes or scented ones that were so popular at first. Like the men they have their own brands and prefer them to any others. The cheaper brands of cigarettes seem to be the most popular. Women in the nursing profession are said to perhaps smoke more than any other actual section of the sex. A nurse—a regular customer of a city tobacco merchant—admitted to him the other day that there was nothing in her day that she looked forward to with more pleasure than her after-dinner cigarette in the quiet of her room.

A tobacco salesman, however, who has sold tobacco in every city in Canada and many in the United States, declares that Vancouver women do not smoke as much as Eastern Canadian and American women. Here they smoke more openly. They smoke where ever they happen to be, but in Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg there is, in his opinion, more actual tobacco consumed per head than in Vancouver. In Vancouver women smoke to a fairly large extent in public. In a taxi on Hastings street a few days ago a modern young lady with her hat off, her head thrown back against the cushions, was enjoying a fag.

SHATTER TRADITIONS

Emerge From Seclusion And Signal Freedom by Working.

LISBON, Feb. 18.—(Associated Press).—The women of Portugal slowly are emerging from the almost Moorish seclusion in which they have lived for so long, and the first thing they do, under the new freedom, is to go to work. The shops and offices of Lisbon are besieged these days by girls eager to follow in the footsteps of their sisters in other countries, and earn their own livings.

Much had to be overcome by these Lisbon girls. There was the resistance and ill-will of the masculine element, grounded in the precedent of many centuries, and a large group of minor state officials, in fear of their own jobs, voiced violent opposition.

In the schools also Portuguese girls have won their victories. They have exploded old traditions, and today are taking their places on the benches along with their brothers.

SPICY EVIDENCE IN A BREACH OF PROMISE SUIT

Plaintiff Claims Defendant Made Improper Proposals on One Occasion.

FOUGHT HIM OFF.

Couple Slept in Same House But They Occupied Different Rooms.

NAPANEE, Feb. 18 (Canadian Press).—A breach of promise suit was tried yesterday at the court house during sittings of the supreme court. Mr. Justice Kelly heard an action by Miss Marjorie Van Dusen, of Oshawa, against Frank Dettor of the Township of Sheffield for alleged breach of promise of marriage. The defendant has since married another young woman, and Miss Van Dusen asked for $5,000 damages, but a decision against her was given with costs.

Fought Him Off.

Miss Van Dusen told of their courtship during the past three years. She said that on one occasion he had made improper proposals to her when she was at his house, after a walk in the evening when they were in the house alone. She fought him off and claimed she bit the back of his hand. She remained at his house, however, all night and until the evening of the next day.

Nothing Improper.

Frank Delter, defendant, gave evidence in his own behalf, and stated he had always been ready to marry plaintiff, and had repeatedly asked her to marry him. But difference in religions proved an obstacle, she being a Seventh Day Adventist. He denied that he had ever made improper proposals to her and that on the occasion which she referred to, she came to his house without an invitation from him to do so. The door was unlocked and she could have gone home if she had wanted to. He said nothing improper had occurred. She went to sleep on a lounge in the living room, and he went to bed in another room. His Lordship gave a verdict for defendant with costs.

Pope, on behalf of the Conservative Senators, presented their leader with a walking stick, on which was engraved, "To Sir James Lougheed from his Conservative Colleagues in the Senate."

Sir James is recovering from his illness, and expects to leave for the South within two weeks, and also expects to take his place in the Senate again in April.

WHY UNITY SURVIVES UNION

VICTORIA, February 18. — Reasons why Methodists have come through the Church Union controversy united are given in the current issue of the Western Methodist Recorder, published here. The editor says:

"On our part, while inheritors of the liberties the earlier reformers fought for, we came immediately from a fervent evangelism, which, though happily guided by scholarly insight and a well-defined doctrinal system, placed the emphasis neither upon this or that form, or upon theological beliefs, but upon the necessity of personal consciousness of religion. And though the warmth and evangelistic glow may have broadened also into advanced education and service, yet that original emphasis has persisted as our chief characteristic. Hence our fusion with others is less difficult. 'Is thine heart right with my heart as my heart is with thine heart? If it is, give me thine hand,' is really the Methodist attitude. It is not their virtue; it is simply their inherited nature."

TRINITY CHURCH ORGAN RECITAL

(By Jeannette.)

The return visit of Horace Lapp, the talented young musician, who made such a splendid impression on his audience when he made his initial appearance in Peterboro some weeks ago, was hailed at Trinity Methodist Church last evening by an audience of between four and five hundred people, who received with renewed enthusiasm the offerings of this youthful virtuoso.

Mr. Lapp, who confined his attention exclusively to the organ last night, treated his hearers to a surprise by bringing with him from Toronto, Mr. Ted Cuthbertson, a Cleveland, Ohio, youth, who is studying in the Queen City under Von Kunits. The violin playing of Mr. Cuthbertson added immeasurably to the success of the programme which was also made especially attractive by the songs of Mrs. W. Reesor of Lindsay, soloist at Cambridge street Methodist church.

Mr. Lapp's organ numbers were outstanding in an excellent programme. The virility and youthful brilliancy which are marked attributes of his execution of difficult music, are backed by a thorough knowledge of his instrument. The ease and fluency with which he varies his effects are remarkable. To Mr. Lapp the organ, with its multitudinous variations, appears to be just as easily played as a piano would be. Several of his selections were arrangements by himself and carried the impress of a brilliant interpretation.

Mr. Lapp's programme, after his accompaniment for Doxology, opened with a forceful overture, in rapid tempo, which was followed later by a trio of paraphrases, bewitching arrangements of old, familiar airs.

The first was "Loch Lomond," commencing in a thrilly, far-away melody that merged finally into a louder burst of music, with the "vox humama" stop paramount. The haunting, lovely "Londonderry air," the tune from County Derry, with its Celtic, delicate sweetness, and a vivacious little Irish jig followed the latter a bit of finely-spun melody that ended in a vigorous splash of quickening sound. To the applause which followed these three morceaux, Mr. Lapp played in soft effect "Annie Laurie."

A very effective trio, was an Oriental suite, in which the verve and powers of interpretation of the young musician were very apparent. From the swift flying fingers, with their elastic softness and firm touch, came the odd descriptive music that pictured for his hearers the vague, mysterious desert, in slurring cascades of tinkling pianissimo notes.

An Oriental love scene was the second portion of this offering, with sensuous, captivating music, and the third selection was a dance of the dervishes, with the low beat of the drums working up to the mad dance of the whirling religious devotees.

Mr. Lapp's own composition, a Scherzo in E Minor, closed his organ programme.

Mrs. Reesor, whose high, sweet, vibrant soprano, has an added charm by reason of the artistic handling by its possessor, sang several lovely selections, including "Light," a sacred number, "Some Sweet Day," and "Will o' the Wisp," the latter particularly charming, and rendered out of the ordinary by reason of its effective organ accompaniment, played by Mr. Lapp, who accompanied each of the singer's solos. Mrs. Reesor was presented with a bouquet of roses by small Rolph King, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. King.

The violin playing of Mr Ted Cuthbertson captivated his hearers immediately. This youthful musician, like his companion, Mr. Lapp, has a very evident future before him. His tone is remarkable. It gives the impression at first of being muted, so very sweet and rich is its volume and low pitch. Mr. Cuthbertson must be the fortunate possessor of a violin of beautiful tone or else he himself has achieved something that very few men violinists possess, in a tone of soft, rich, full brilliance. Possibly there is a combination of both. This attribute, added to his very evident mastery of his instrument, and an odd, unstrained method of playing, were extraordinary and made an instant impression on a pleased audience. Mr. Cuthbertson played Brahms' "Hungarian Dance," the gay Magyar music rippling from a facile bow. This was followed by Kreisler's "Midnight Bells," a dreamy, delicate thing that blended beautifully with the organ accompaniment, and had an encore in Kreislers "Scho Rosmarin.' Mr. Cuthbertson's final numbers were "Senenir de Weiniawski" and "At Dawning."

While not very confident, wheat bulls, after the close yesterday, appeared satisfied that the market was in better shape than it had been for some time and that further good advances in prices might be expected. The shorts, particularly their resorters, are believed to have fair profits and to be in a position to combat an immediate advance, but as the market has resisted their efforts the ultimate upward return will be all the more reason for their presence.

Julius Barnes wires that a close analysis of Buffalo stocks showed 11,500,000 bushels American wheat at that point instead of the reported 13,250,000 bushels. This would make the United States visible for last week show an increase of 1,691,000 bushels instead of an increase of 59,000 bushels.

An encouraging development in wheat was the switching over from the bear side to the bull side by leading commission houses.

The Canadian report is expected to show very meagre reserves as compared with those of previous years.

HELPED 85,925 TO SETTLEMENT

Empire Settlement Act Covered Many Migrations During Year.

CANADA MENTIONED.

LONDON, Feb. 18. — (Canadian Press)—Replying to a question in House of Commons last night, L. C. Amery, Secretary for the Colonies, stated that 85,925 persons were assisted under the Empire Settlement Act up to December 31 last, of which 41,584 were handled in 1924. The expenditure for 1923 and 1924 was £447,000 out of the estimate of £1,159,000, while up to December 31, £227,000 had been spent out of the estimate of £853,000 for the years 1924 and 1925. The unexpended balances, he said, reverted to the Chancellor of the Exchequer in accordance with the usual practice.

Replying to a further question as to how many persons migrated from Canada to the United States since the armistice, Mr. Amery said that the Dominion Government had no statistics of such emigrants, but in considering any figures unofficially published it should be borne in mind that there was a constant crossing and re-crossing by temporary visitors from both sides of the international boundary.

After a long conference Sunday with Hussein Ali and other Persian notables who arrived from London and Paris, the Shah is reported to have decided to resist any pressure upon him to abdicate and to have sent strong instructions by telegraph to the Regent in Teheran.

The hair dressers and beauty culturists are not seeking to limit the power and breadth of activity of the barbers but odd as it seems the barbers are seeking to limit their own scope. For this purpose a bill has been drafted and placed in the hands of a Toronto members in the Ontario Government in introduction in the Legislature this session. This bill if passed, will to a certain extent elevate the barbers to the plane of professional men, will compel them to pass examinations and secure a license before being permitted to practice and arrange for a strict supervision and inspection of the barber shops as to their sanitary conditions and the ability of the men they employ.

Roumania Breaks Negotiations and Business Relations With Germans.

SITUATION TENSE.

BY CARL D. GROAT,
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

BERLIN, Feb. 18.—The Roumanian government has ordered its officials to discontinue all negotiations and business relations with German citizens and officers, as the latest drastic step of reprisal in the Roumanio-German reparations dispute, according to reports from Budapest.

Being Brutally Ejected.

This report, apparently authoritative, following close on the heels of one stating that Germans were being brutally ejected from Roumania, has caused an even more tense situation here. Germans were dragged from their beds without warning in the middle of the night, and rushed, half clothed, across the border, reports from Hungary stated.

Communism a Factor.

While the reparations dispute is thought to be the principal cause for the expulsion of Germans, reports stated that much of the trouble was due to politcial differences. Communism was reported as being partly responsible for that controversy.

HARRY'S TOTAL ECLIPSES.

London lost the sun last Saturday for an hour or two, but it also found a new cocktail to make up for it. Harry Cradock of the Savoy, who has devoted his life to studying eclipses of another kind spent the darkest hour in trying to find something to celebrate the sun's effort. The result, "Total Eclipse" is beautiful to look upon, and unlike eclipse in the firmanent which are apt to be half-hearted affairs, is of the hundred per cent variety. Its colour is a cross between an angry sky and the colour of melting rubies and a black olive gleams significantly in the centre of it. Since then Harry has not been able to make "Total Eclipses" quickly enough.

STRENGTH AND VITALITY CREATED BY RED BLOOD

The strength, vitality and nerve power of every man and woman depend on the blood. Red blood is the supreme driving force of life. When we lack strength we should think first of our blood. When we have rich, red blood we quickly regain strength. Weak, thin-blooded men and women can find an easy, safe way to create red blood.

Wincarnis gives to the blood the very elements from which red blood is created. For fifty years this blood builder has restored men and women who were lacking in life power.

VILLAGE DOCTOR AT KNOX CHURCH

There was a packed house at "The Young Village Doctor, given in Knox Church Lecture Hall last evening, under the auspices of the Volunteer Bible Class.

It was a decidad success. The scene is laid in a country village where a talented and large-hearted young doctor opens up a practise. He rents his office from Mrs. Crane, who is very garulous and over interested in the doctor's patients.

The landlady has a daughter, Jane, who is a handsome and clever nurse, and who on her return home makes a strong impression on the doctor.

A variety of patients visit the doctor's office, and during their conversations many striking sentiments are expressed.

Howard Hall (Simon Grabbe) was a scream, and Ethel Kennedy (Belinda Clinger), the village vamp, added much to the merriment of the play, in which a refined humor prevailed.

A young lawyer rivals the doctor for the hand of Jane. A number of old time songs are sung, and a pleasant evening spent.

The lighting effect was very pretty, and added much to the success of the play.

"The Young Village Doctor" is being repeated tonight. Any one not seeing this clever little play will miss a real treat.

Timely Hint For Drys Of Canada And States

RUTHENIA, Czecho Slovakia, Feb. 18.—(United Press).—A cure is believed to have been discovered here for the deady habit of the peasants drinking methyiated spirits. The government officials found that it was necessary first of all to wipe out this evil. It is impossible to prevent the people from buying it for legitimate burning purposes, s othe latest scheme is to have all methylated spirit colored with blue dye, so that a drinker (if he survives) will have a blue stain on his lips.

Anyone in Ruthenia stained blue in this fashion is subject to immediate arrest.

PEARLS GROW UNMOLESTED.

MANILA, Jan. 18.—(Associated Press).—One-half of the pearl banks around the Sulu archipelago will be closed for a period of three years beginning January 1, 1925, for the purpose of protecting the pearl industry of the Philippine Islands.

Insular officials, after an investigation, became convinced that the pearl banks would be exhausted within a few years unless steps were taken to protect the industry by establishing a closed season for a long period. The Bureau of Customs and the constabulary have organized a patrol to protect the banks.

W. LONDERVILLE'S BIRTHDAY PARTY

Hastings Makes Community Affair of Celebration—Presentations Made.

HASTINGS, Feb. 18.—On Monday evening, Mr. William Londerville, of Hastings, celebrated his sixty-second birthday in a joyous manner at his residence on Albert Street.

About 6.30 the guests commenced to gather at Mr. and Mrs. Londerville's home, and at 7 o'clock about forty guests, including school mates and friends, sat down to a well furnished table, with Mr. and Mrs. William Londerville at the head.

The eldest lady of the village, in the person of Mrs. Caroline White, was also present, and was as hale and hearty as the youngest person present, and told many interesting stories of the early days of Hastings. Mr. John Coughlan was also present, he being the first white male child born in Hastings. After all had partaken of the repast, Mr. Alex. Wilson, who has been clerk of the village of Hastings for thirty-six years, read an address to the host and hostess, and Mr. P. M. Howard and Mrs. Harry Lambert presented Mr. and Mrs. Londerville with a beautiful pair of oak and tapestry cosy chairs, and also several minor presents. Mr. and Mrs. Londerville responded in appreciative manner.

The address read:

Dear Friends,—We are met here on this auspicious occasion to do honor to those who have invited us to be present and to enjoy the sumptuous repast to which we have each and all done ample justice.

Meredith, the poet, has well said: "We can live without music, poetry and art,
We can live without conscience and live without heart,
We can live without learning and live without books,
But civilized men cannot live without cooks."

Mrs. Londerville is one of our famous cooks, and there is no doubt whatever that it is owing to her good cooking that her esteemed husband is with us to-night enjoying in health and strength his sixty-second birthday. We all join in hearty congratulations and wish him many returns of the day.

It seems but yesterday since we were boys together, enjoying both school and play, especially the play part of it, for "Billy" was always a first-rate sport. Like a duck in the water, enlivening our sports at the water front; on the lacross field with our friend, Mr. Pat Howard, who is with us to-night, with the famous "Ironclads," who were invincible.

If Hastings was fortunate enough to have a band it was no band at all without the big drum, and there could be no big drum worth the beating without "Billy" behind it. How the drum resounded we all remember, and we are glad to know he is as able and willing as ever to make it resound again.

We wish that his good wife and he may long be spared to each other and from year to year keep adding to the number of candles on his birthday cake. Please accept these chairs as an expression of our goodwill and appreciation.

The balance of the evening was spent in games, speeches, singing and story-telling until the wee small hours of the morning, and concluding by singing "Auld Lang Syne" and "He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

Mr. Charles Londerville, an uncle, and Mr. John J. Londerville, of Peterboro, were present.

CHAPTER XX.

The Storm.

Probably an hour elapsed before anybody spoke. The Wreck's soul writhed under the torture of inactivity. Time after time he calculated the chances of a spring at Denver's throat. Even with his hobbled feet he believed that he might achieve a success but he could not be absolutely sure.

Denver was watchful. Sitting across the camp-fire from the two prisoners, he did not permit their least movement to go unnoticed. And the rifle was always at his hand. The Wreck hoped that he might become drowsy even an instant's nod would be sufficient. But Denver was apparently a person who could dispense with sleep when he chose, and this was obviously one of the occasions. He was a black-haired, saturnine person, apparently rather stupid, yet smart enough to devote himself single-minded to the vigil that had been ordered by his chief.

Sally and the Wreck made an effort to pass time in conversation, but they felt no freedom of speech in the presence of Denver, who listened but offered to take no part. His presence discouraged talk, particularly as the one subject they wished to discuss—escape—was prohibited because of his inevitable eavesdropping. But they boggled along for awhile, half-heartedly, because there was nothing else to do, until a deep-toned, rumbling noise interrupted Sally in the middle of a sentence.

"Uh-uh," said the Wreck, gloomily.

He could imagine nothing more uncomfortable than sitting there in a downpour. The camp did not even boast a tent.

There was more rumbling from back in the hills, and twice there were flashes in the black skies. Denver added a couple of sticks to the fire and huddled back again, still with the rifle between his knees.

"I suppose we'll get wet," remarked Sally, in a resigned tone. "Well, there's nothing on me that will get hurt."

"Let it rain," said the Wreck.

There was a stirring of leaves on the topmost branches of the trees, followed by an atmospheric sluggishness that became oppressive. The lightning was growing more brilliant and frequent, while the noise from the skies was multiplying itself. Just one more discomfort to be endured, the Wreck reflected they seemed to have encountered nothing but bad luck since they left the Bar-M.

A fresh roll of thunder, and a second later Sally touched his arm. He glanced toward her, and found that her eyes were watching Denver across the fire.

"What?" he asked.

"I didn't say anything," answered Sally.

There was a faint frown on her forehead which he interpreted as an order not to ask questions. Yet he knew there was something she wanted to say to him. She was still looking at Denver, and the Wreck also looked. The study brought him no enlightenment. Denver sat stolidly and watched them without interest, yet with a diligence that was admirable. Presently the Wreck's attention wandered.

More thunder and another touch of his arm. Sally was still staring at the man on the other side of the fire. What did she mean? The Wreck also fell to staring, although he tried to do it in an unobstrusive manner. Apparently it had something to do with Denver.

An instant later he had a glimmer of understanding. There was a brilliant flash, then an interval of three or four seconds, then a deep bellow that echoed heavily through the woods. Denver's head twitched, his glance lifted itself for an instant toward the tree-tops, then he huddled back and glared again at his prisoners. The Wreck settled himself to watch.

He had not long to wait. A vivid play of light in the skies, a series of rolling crashes. Denver's head twitched again in involuntary accompaniment, his shoulders stirred and there was a restless movement of one hand. Once more his eyes sought the blackness overhead, only to wince when it was gashed with a white, irregular streak.

Sally and the Wreck exchanged glances, the latter making a faint movement of his head, to signify that he understood. Denver was afraid of a thunderstorm. It seemed so absurd that for an instant the Wreck wanted to laugh. Stolid insensitive to human contact, with a jaw fashioned perfectly for a heavyweight champion and a physique that matched it, Denver was the ideal bully and bad man. Habitually he wore an expression that told of his inurement to violence. Without fear, he would take his chances with a sheriff or anybody else. But he was afraid of thunder and lightning.

The heavens crashed again, flaring in two different directions. Denver responded automatically, with a twitch that affected his whole body. The pair of watchers saw him tighten a quivering lip. He favored them with a look of defiant suspicion—a warning that they would better keep out of his private affairs. Sally turned her eyes upward.

"It's getting nearer every minute," she told the Wreck.

"Yes we're going to catch it."

"I only hope it rains, too," said Sally. "The dry storms are the worst."

"You bet they are," agreed the Wreck. "I don't know why, but it's always so."

"And it's always worse in the woods, on account of the trees. Why, I remember——"

The sound of her voice was swallowed up in a roar. Something had been struck, and not very far distant they could feel a tremor in the ground. Denver's head seemed to shrink behind his shoulders and for a second his eyes closed tightly. Then they opened with a jerk of terror as he remembered his prisoners.

"That was close," said Sally, in an awed tone and with a meaning glance at the Wreck. "I'm afraid we're going to be right in the centre of it. If it would only rain!"

"Well, we've got to take our chances," declared the Wreck, solemnly. "What can we do?"

"Nothing," she sighed. "Only——"

Denver was biting savagely at hi underlip and the fingers of one hand were drumming nervously on the ground.

"Does it hit much in the woods?" he asked suddenly. There was a sort of emptiness in his voice.

"More than anywhere else," answered the Wreck. "But it doesn't do any good to run. If it's going to get you it'll get you, as sure as a gun."

"I'm—I'm afraid I'm getting nervous," whimpered Sally.

The skies flared and detonated again and, with a little shriek, she threw her arms around the Wreck's neck.

"Henry!" she cried.

His eyes were steadily watching Denver and his hand was creeping cautiously toward a stick of split wood that lay near the fire.

"Not yet—wait!" Sally was whispering with her lips close to his ear. "Give him a minute or two more. He's slipping fast."

The Wreck waited. He found it difficult to believe what he saw with his eyes. Denver's big body had sagged loosely and his shoulders were trembling. He was a man on the verge of a panic, but nerveless. His lips twitched grotesquely, his eyes seemed to be staring at nothing. He wanted to shut them, but he did not dare.

"I—I don't like it," he mumbled, in a petulant voice. "I——"

"It's awful!" cried Sally.

"God help us!" groaned the Wreck.

There was a lull, a sudden blast of wind in the trees, then a fresh onset of fury from the skies. Flash and crash were blended in a terrifying ensemble. Sally, still clutching the Wreck, kept her eyes on the man beyond the camp-fire.

His body swayed, his hands clasped themselves in a sudden paroxysm and there was a dull agony in his eyes.

"I can't stand it!" he whined, in a lihgt falsetto.

Suddenly he crossed his arms on his knees and buried his head. He was sobbing.

"Now!" whispered Sally.

The Wreck's fingers had closed on the split stick. He rose swiftly to his hobbled feet, balanced himself, took aim and flung it furiously at Denver's head. Instantly he followed it, leaping clumsily across the fire and hurling himself on the huddled figure.

Denver went over on his back and the Wreck clutched for his throat.

"Grab his gun!" he cried to Sally.

She was scrambling toward it when she saw him roll off the recumbent figure, hitch himself into a sitting posture and begin the task of untying his feet.

"No hurry," said the Wreck. "He's out cold. I don't know whether it was the stick of wood, or whether he just fainted. Get your feet loose before we do anything else."

Sally went to work at the cords that hobbled her. The Wreck cast a contemptuous glance at the flabby inert form of Denver, the bully.

"The big simp!" he said, as he shook his feet free.

"Oh, I don't know" said Sally, working feverishly. "It's horrible when you're afraid like that. You can't help it. I've seen ma when she was just as bad. And we had a cowpuncher once who was even worse, although he was a terrible fighter. And——"

The bellowing storm obliterated the remainder of the sentence. As she stood up, free of her bonds, she shook her head, as though to throw off an unpleasant sensation.

"You can say what you like," she declared, "but it's a pretty mean storm, just the same. I'm not claiming to enjoy it myself."

The Wreck had rolled Denver over on his face and was tying his hands behind his back. He worked quickly and roughly, but he made the job thorough. Then he reached for the cord that Sally held and began tying the big creature's ankles.

"But look what it did for us," said the Wreck, as the storm shrieked at them again.

"Is he hurt much?"

The Wreck began exploring the skull of his victim.

"I can't even find blood," he said. "He had a hat on when I hit him. There's a big welt on top of his head. When he comes to he'll think he was struck by lightning."

"You don't think he's dead, Henry?"

"No!" answered the Wreck, scornfully. "I can feel him breathing. Come on, now. We'd better get out of this."

He picked up Denver's rifle, examined the breech, then threw it across his shoulder. Sally bent over the loose figure and stared at it curiously.

"We all have our weak spots," she said, solemnly. "I'm honestly sorry for him."

"We did him a kindness," averred the Wreck. "He won't worry about the rest of the storm. Come on!"

"Where?"

"We're going to get the car, of course."

He seized her hand and they plunged into the brush that surrounded the small clearing where the camp lay. As they did so, the rain came. It did not begin gently, with widely scattered drops, but came in an abrupt rush, with a roar that resembled the voice of a cataract. Even through the trees it beat down on them from the darkness, carried on the wings of a squall that fairly howled. Almost as abruptly the electric phase passed, so that now the flashes were fewer and dimmer.

NEW ADVISORS OF LEAGUE OF NATIONS MEET

Advisory Commission on White Slavery Convenes at Geneva.

TO PROTECT YOUNG

International Association for Protection of Youth Joins Body.

GENEVA, Feb. 18 (United Press).—With the convening here of the League of Nations Permanent Advisory Commission on the White Slave Traffic, the International Boy Scouts and the International Girl Guides' Associations began an official connection with the League of Nations.

From now on both of these organizations will be officially represented on the League's Advisory Commission on the White Slaves Traffic and the Protection of Children by two experts whose duty it will be to help the League in its world-wide campaign for the protection of youth.

The meeting today of the League's advisory commission constituted the first session of that body since it has been reorganized for the purpose of taking over an entirely new field of activity for the League of Nations—that of the international protection of the child.

The control of the white slave traffic and which was formerly the one field of activity of the above commission, was entrusted to the League by the Versailles treaty. The additional question of the protection of the youth was taken over only by the last assembly.

Formerly the international association for the protection of youth had its headquarters at Brussels.

New Advisors.

In addition to these regular members there are two panels of experts to assist them, one for questions dealing with slave traffic and the other for questions dealing with the protection of children.

The experts on the white slave traffic consists of representatives of the five leading international associations to that end, namely the Jewish Association for the Protection of Girls and Women, the International Bureau for the Suppression of Traffic in Women and Children, the Women's International Organization, the International Catholic Association for the Protection of the Young Girls and the Federation of National Union of Friends of the Young Girl.

In a simliar manner the panel of experts for questions dealing with the protection of youth consists of rrepresentatives of the leading international organizations in that field, namely the International Boy Scouts and International Girl Guides organizations, the International League of Red Cross Societies, the International Union of Help for Children, and finally Major Bascom Johnson of New York, on behalf of the American Bureau of Social Hygiene.

With the appointment of Major Johnson, American participation in this particular league activity is given unusual recognition, as the United States government is also officially represented on the Commission by Miss Grace Abbott of the Department of Women and Child Labor.

The principal task of the Commission which met today will be to outline a complete campaign of work to be undertaken by the League on behalf of the youth of the world.

Ex-Kaiser Wilhelm On a Jewellery Expedition

Here is a bit of news from Holland. The Ex-Kaiser and his wife have been recently to inspect the German Crown Jewels which remain intact and have reposed in a Dutch bank since the war. William's second wife is very anxious to wear these marvellous jewels as Empress. She is quite fed up with the dullness of the little flat country of canals, and the expedition to admire the jewels was undertaken to mollify her. Not very much satisfaction in that, one would imagine for of course, William has not any authority to remove them.

"JAZZ" KILLER IN COURT, ASKS DELAY

Attorneys for Dorothy Ellingson, "jazz slayer," who killed her mother after an argument over dances, demanded a continuance when she appeared in Court in San Francisco. Left is Alexander Mooslin, chief defence counsel. Right is Judge Sylvester McAttee, for the defence.

JAILS HER SON AS A BURGLAR

Mother Says She Wrestled With Thought For Hours.

BROKE INTO SHOPS.

Robert Garrabrants, a 16-year-old boy, who lives with his mother and sister at the La Rochelle Apartments, was held in $1,500 bail yesterday in West Side Court for examination, charged with theft of radio apparatus from the Ansonia Music Shop, at 2130 Broadway.

The boy's arrest was caused by his mother, who appeared in court. She told Magistrate Henry M. R. Goorman that when her son refused to explain how he came to have so many radio parts more than she knew he could obtain legally, she debated inwardly for hours, then asked the police to arrest him as a burglar. He is her only son.

She said in a low voice that she had tried hard to make him a good boy. She believed, she said, it would be better for him to be punished mildly now than grow into a criminal.

Involved in the case with young Garrabrants was Roy Cooper, the 14-year-old son of Joseph C. Cooper, President of the American Bankers' Corporation of 65 Wall Street. He was arraigned last Saturday in Children's Court on a charge of juvenile deliquency and was paroled in his father's custody for examination February 24th.

The fact that young Cooper had been arrested in his father's apartment at 30 Riverside Drive did not become known until his friend, Garrabrants, was arraigned. A radio set in the apartment was identified, according to detectives, as a stolen one. The detectives say the Cooper boy admitted receiving the set, but declared he did not know it was stolen. He said he had been intending to pay his friend, Robert, for it.

Young Garrabrants, appearing before the Magistrate, was jauntily dressed, but pale and nervous. The Magistrate expressed surprise at the mother having caused his arrest.

Detectives testified they hd quizzed the youth without much success in his mother's presence. Then they identified some of his radio apparatus as having been stolen from the Ansonia Music Shop on February 11. This shop was entered from a rear window and radio apparatus worth $600 was taken.

Taken to the station, they said, he broke down and confessed a series of radio shop robberies. He said Roy Cooper, his friend, had come with him to one shop, and waited outside the window while he stole a large set.

The detectives related how they had gone to the Cooper home on Riverside Drive. The boy's father at first refused to let them enter, the said. After they identified a radio set there as a stolen one Mr. Cooper accompanied his son to the police station and there, they said, the youth admitted receiving the set from a window, but insisted he did not know it was stolen.

At the request of Assistant District Attorney John Flood, bail was reduced from $10,000 to $1,500, a sum which the mother was sure she could obtain in cash for her son's release. Chester Abelowitz, proprietor of the Ansonia Music Shop, who was in Court, said he was inclined to be lenient with the boy, although his place had been robbed twice within a month. He suggested to the mother that it would be a good lesson for her son if he was allowed to remain in jail for a day.

Therefore the youth was not released on bail.

Joseph C. Cooper stated that his son was not implicated in the theft of the radio apparatus, that he had received the set from young Garrabrants, and expected to pay for it, and was only being paroled in his custody as a witness.

THE QUICK AND THE DEAD

A Sunday School superintendent while instructing a Sunday School class, asked the children the meaning of the "quick and the dead." This seemed to puzzle them somewhat, but suddenly one small boy piped out: "Please, sir, the man as gets out of the way of the motor car is quick, and 'im as doesn't is dead."

FREE SPENDERS.

HAMBURG, Feb. 18.—(Associated Press).—More than 200,000 Americans visited Europe during the year 1924, it is estimated by the Hotel Proprietors' Federation, and each traveler spent, on an average, the sum of $2,000. This means that a golden trail of some $400,000,000 was left behind by these visitors from across the Atlantic, and mostly in England, Switzerland and Italy.

Swiss tourist business around the Lake of the Four Cantons has almost reached pre-war dimensions, according to a circular issued by the Lucerne Cantonal Bank. There was an increase of 22 per cent. in 1924 over the number of guests registered in 1923. The bulk of the business was furnished by tourists from England.

CIRCUS POSTERS BUILD UP TOWN

Ringling Brothers Increase Sarasota, Florida, to 12,000 in a Year.

A MAGIC BOOM

SARASOTA, Forida, Feb. 16. — This is the city which circus posters built.

The Ringling brothers, John and Charles, applied the methods used to make their show famous, to attracting real estate buyers here.

The result is evident.

One year ago the population of Sarasota was 2800.

To-day it is 12,000 and the total is increasing with the arrival of every train.

Twenty years ago Sarasota was a small fishing village. Handicapped by lack of rail facilities and roads, it stayed a village until a year ago, when Florida became the mecca of land seekers and playground hunters.

Now it has rail connections with nearly every city of importance in Florida. In common with all other west coast cities and with Miami on the east coast, Sarasota still lacks mail service.

Adequate mail service, that is.

Mail Late.

Crowds stand in line at the general delivery windows, because there is no space for boxes and no adequate delivery service.

Then they receive packages mailed one, two and three months ago, delayed because the mail cars are clogged just as the pullmans and the day coaches are.

There are 25 millionaire citizens in Sarasota, all active in civic affairs. Charles Ringling is the principal banker.

The magic boom here, about 50 miles south of Tampa, rivals that of Miami on the east coast.

The boom is not confined to Sarasota. It takes in the entire coast coast from north of Tampa to south of Nakomis.

A street scene any day rivals that of a country fair. Free rides, concessions, sandwiches, and sideshows of every description run as an inducement to buyers.

Recently all food in the city even down to sandwiches, was consumed by the hungry horde of real-estators and their customers.

Whole Coast Active.

Millions are being spent in the building programme. Probably $6,000,000 is going into hotel projects. A Ritz Carlton is being constructed by public subscription. John Ringling contributed $100,000 in stock. The public subscribed $400,000.

In another hotel project the public bought $700,000 in stock. A newspaper here bought a 50-foot lot for $20,000 and was offered $30,000 at once. He built a house on the lot, and is now asking $50,000.

Eighty acres of land three miles from the water front were to have been sold in 1923 for $4000. Court procedure delayed the sale. The same property was sold a short time ago for $45,000.

The buyer cut it into allotments, and obtained $240,000.

John Ringling filled in 27 acres and sold it for $13,500 an acre.

Altogether a total of 33,000 acres of key land with 36 miles of water front has been acquired.

A causeway costing $1,000,000 is being constructed. Eighteen pillars for the causeway entrance are being "transplanted" from Madison Square Garden in New York City, also owned by the Ringlings.

Dr. Fred H. Albee, New York surgeon and authority at Franklin Institute, Philadelphia, has bought 5000 acres, 16 miles south of here at Nakomis.

He plans to expend $5,000,000 to $10,000,000 for the enterprise, which has four bays arranged like a four-leaf clover. He plans also to establish a clinic for convalescent patients.

What Sarasota is doing the rest of the west coast is doing also.

Land on the main road between St. Petersburg and Tampa is booming as the result of completion of the Gandy bridge, seven miles long, over the old Tampa bay.

$3,000,000 Bridge.

This bridge cuts off 30 miles between the two points. It cost $3,000,000. Land along a new sea wall being constructed at Tampa already is quoted at $5000 a foot.

Developments planned for the next half score years would make almost a solid west coast city like the solid eastc oast city projected from West Palm Beach to Miami.

NURSE GRIEVANCE.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—(Associated Press).—The wireless "howler" which so seriously interfered with reception from the United States during the recent wireless week, has been discovered. It is the old wireless station at Northolt. CONTROL WORLD'S WHEAT TRADE

England Proposes to Build Giant Elevator And Hold Its Supply at Home.

By JOHN GUNTHER
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, England, Feb. 18.—Will Britain succeed America as the wheat center of the world?

That she will is the prediction in many quarters following the testimony of J. Hay Thornburn, economic expert, before the Royal Commission which, under the leadership of Sir Auckland Geddes is investigating food prices here.

"Great Britain can, if she likes, become the Wheat Center of the World—at the expense of Chicago and the United States."

That was what Thorburn, giving the commission one of its biggest thrills, said in his testimony.

He said that the step could be accomplished by the establishment here of an elaborate system of granaries—elevators. For at present England has no real means of storing grain. She is entirely dependent on the outside world for her wheat supply—and she consumes that supply as fast as it arrives.

For years this has been known as the greatest single weakness, perhaps, of England's economic and domestic structure. During the war it was particularly a crucial problem. Now Tohrburn says he has solved it.

His plan comprises four main features:

1. The construction of a system of granaries and elevators at English seaports and to link these up with the great elevator systems of Canada, other British dominions, and possibly the Argentine.

2. Appointment of a board of grain commissioners, non-political, to be composed of experienced merchants and shippers, to take complete charge of the entire British wheat industry.

3. Creation of a system of grain certificates for use as legal wheat tender.

4. Government ownership and operation not only of the elevators, but of the whole industry.

By his scheme it thus becomes aparent that wheat brought for England in Canada or elsewhere would be concentrated, not in Canada, but inside Britain itself, always ready for use—with the British consumer in immediate control of its movement.

Thorburn says his system will concentrate in England much of the world wheat store, will give England what she has always desperately needed, a permanent wheat supply, and will inevitably serve to give Britain control of the world's wheat price.

The scheme was carefully investigated by the commission, with Sir Auckland Geddes presiding, and received wide publicity in the London press.

Some significant questions and answers from his testimony are as follows:

'How would this plan of yours reduce the price of flour in this country?' asked Sir Auckland.

"It would eliminate," replied Thornburn, "the controlling interst of Chicago."

"How would the grain commissioners under your plan co-operate with American producers?"

"They would not co-operate at all," was Thorburn's succinct reply. "The advantage would be to keep this a purely British transaction, and to keep the transport of the great western harvest over Canadian lines. We do not wish to encourage the United States railways."

"We eat a certain amount of Argentine wheat—would there be any relation between the grain commissioners and the Argentine wheat"

"There would be only if we chose to open the scheme as wide as all that."

"Fundamentally, then," concluded Sir Auckland, "your plan is this—to move the center at which grain dealings are carried on from Chicago, with its satellities, to Liverpool and London; that is the heart and soul of your proposal, really?"

"Yes, that is it," was the reply. "As a very eminent city man put it, this plan wil serve to make this country the center of the grain trade of the world, because, being the principal buyers, and in view of our control of supply, we would and could rule the whole market price."

The commission will further investigate Thorburns' suggestion. The decision will be announced later.

FIND FOOT FROZEN.

Girl Went Six Weeks Without Telling of Her Plight.

FREMONT, Neb., Feb. 17.—(Canadian Press).—While on a trip to South Dakota where she was called to testify against the men who had murdered her grandmother and wounded her father, one of the feet of little Emma Jessup, 12 Fremont school pupil, was frozen. Her plight was not discovered until six weeks later when she began crying in the classroom and her teacher questioned her.

During the six weeks the girl had gone without medical attention, never uttering a word nor showing pain.

A serious condition had developed from lack of attention, but with the proper care, physicians said, the foot could be saved.

WHEAT PROVES FICKLE MISTRESS; BEGGARING KINGS IN AN HOUR

Speculators of Odd Degrees Won Fortunes, While Others Lost and Wept.

WOMAN'S $1,000,000

By JAMES C. YOUNG.

A NEW race of "kings" reign in the wheat pit—messenger boys, taxi drivers, average citizens and women speculators. For the first time in the annals of wheat, the public had controlled a flood market, well above the $2 line. Everybody seems to have made a profit, while eagerly waiting for more Out on the edge of things the professionals have stood, watching the upstarts as they milled about in the full tide of a grain rise. Until the tide turns the public rules.

Such a wave of grain speculation has not been seen in many a day. Two Winnipeg messenger boys pooled their tips and won $6,000. A Chicago taxi driver staked his savings and took out $10,000. An uncounted number of modest buyers harvested profits in the thousands. Ethel Comstock, Chicago advertising agent, made $20,000 in a week and perhaps $100,000 in the flood market. Mrs. Scott Durand, a social figure, is credited with winnings of $1,000,000. So run the stories of the Chicago wheat pit.

After some years of relative quiet wheat again has caught the imagination of the world, and despite efforts to educate the novice against speculation that same little man has gone into this market as never before. Grain houses have seen much of him in the last few days, sometimes with only $15 or $20 to risk on wheat. His anxiety to take a flier is reminiscent of the days when a man could lay his bet on the next race in almost any cigar store and perhaps take his winnings along with his change.

The new order of things has been proved once more by the number of women present in the market. Experienced grain men say that every fourth speculator is a woman. They plunge deeper and yearn harder for winnings than any man, according to the dealers, and bring a vivid touch to wheat. Few of them are content to buy by telephone on a busy day. They crowd into brokerage offices and get the best place alongside a ticker. Their eagerness would carry them into the pit itself if the pit were nearer.

One Woman Who Lost.

Last week a heavy percentage of wheat orders handled through New York houses came from uptown brokerage offices, many of which are patronized by women. There is the story of one woman who lost the last of her margin and offered a necklace as security for more. Her broker refused. Sad-eyed, she sat and watched the board. An hour later her particular choice in wheat reacted and she saw it sweep upward two points—literally before her eyes. The broker is still unhappy over the way his customer wept.

But this is merely a sidelight. Who would talk of losing when profits are in the making? Daily the newspapers publish tales of new coups by those who have risked and won.

Certainly none of these stories has equaled that of Mrs. Durand, the first "queen" of the wheat pit. Mrs. Durand owns a show place on the fashionable North Shore of Chicago. She writes a bit, raises blooded cattle, and has a position in society. Six months ago she began to play wheat according to a system of her own. Almost daily since then she has lived with a telephone to her ear. With a million to her account, she advises against speculation for others, especially those of slight means. And she is positive that women should not meddle with wheat, although she has predicted that it will touch $2.50 a bushel.

"The present market has merit," she said the other day. "I don't think there is anything speculative about it. But clerks, stenographers and others with a few hundred dollars, or even thousands, should stay out of the grain market. It is too risky."

Old and the New.

Consider the contrast between this modern plunger and those of yesterday. If it were possible to call back the "wheat kings" of other times they would not credit such things. They were hard-bitten men and did their plunging in a grand fashion. To conceive that a woman might stand in their place would be beyond the purview of their day and generation. But Mrs. Durand has risen almost to their stature and by no means is alone in her rise.

But this sort of acumen is not confined to the upper social strata. Ethel Comstock, who conducts an advertising and letter service in Chicago's Board of Trade Building, might be said to have caught the urge at the fountain head. From her desk to the wheat pit is but a few steps. We may think of her, hard at work in her office, fancying just how it would feel to make a "killing" in wheat. That urge proved strong, indeed, for she embarked as Mrs. Durand had done, according to her own deductions from the tape, and has prospered.

Last August Miss Comstock decided that there was going to be a shortage of wheat. She withdrew $150 from the bank and began her campaign. Wheat went up and her account thrived. Then she had a bad week and lost $700. But the market favored her anew and the bank account has grown steadily since that one reverse. She added some $20,000 to her holdings a few days ago, as the high point of her campaign, and has materially improved the financial standing of her friends. Intimates say that she acts by intuition. One New York grain man smiled at that suggestion.

"Intuition is a poor guide in the wheat pit," he said, "but, of course, women are funny that way. You can't always tell about their hunches."

This estimate of "funny" just about sums up the average judgment of wheat men where women buyers are concerned. They admt that the rules do not always apply to women.

How Miss Comstock Played.

Miss Comstock, in summing up her experiences, told how close she had come to ruin. Her first venture in grain took place as long ago as 1914, when she made a profit and went overseas. "Last August," she said, "I bought 5,000 bushels of wheat and put up $150 as margin. There was an advance of 5 cents a bushel and I took my profits, drew down my margin, and bought more. I have had as much as 100,000 bushels at a time. Once when the market broke I came near being closed out, but it turned quickly and saved me. The money I have made is in the bank and much of it has been invested. When I get through trading I will quit the market."

Whether the women who win really will quit is something that remains to be seen. It has been the experience of the pit that the big winners never quit unless a shadow falls across their fortunes. The outstanding figure in wheat today has been reported on the verge of retirement many times. He is Arthur W. Cutter, and the gossips credit him with profits of $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 in the wheat rise. If that figure is accurate—and any wheat man will prove it by means of pad and pencil—it means that Cutten has amassed a greater fortune in one series of operations than any of the "kings" who went before him.

Cutten's career is a genuine romance of the pit. He came to Chicago as youth from Canada and went to work in a broker's office, keeping books. It took him five years to save his first thousand dollars. When he had $3,000 he began to double in stocks, and now that $3,000 is represented by many millions. Cutten acted in reverse ratio to all the usual advice about the man of small means keeping out of the market. Breaking rules has been the distinguishing trait of his career. He is said to wave aside the usual charts about crops, demand and such things in studying the market. He reaches conclusions by himself, and just how he does it is a matter also confined to himself. The result may be viewed by he world.

Cutten is a slight, wiry, gray-eyed man, who wears a cap much of the time and has a fancy for cattle. He is known for silence, courage and pertinacity. The biggest estimates of his operations credit him with carrying 20,000,000 bushels of wheat for December and May delivery, at an average profit of 75 cents a bushel. Every time there that he has started to sell. So far there is nothing to show that he has "got out from under," in the parlance of the pit. If that event should come about at an early date the results would be worth observing.

Cutten inherited the mantle of James A. Patten, who is still an occasional factor in wheat. Patten never operated on the same scale as Cutten, although he enjoyed more fame in his day than the reigning monarch. Back in 1910 Patten made $1,000,000 out of a wheat corner that forced the grain from $1 to $1.34. That was regarded as a record achievement, one of the largest profits in the history of wheat, because Patten's partners made other millions.

This series of operations, beginning in October and ending in May, brought about national activity to regulate exchanges controlling commodities. The legislation resulting from the Patten corner has filled many tomes, but it still is possible to realize millions from these markets.

The Patten corner, like the market of the present day, depended upon May wheat. That is the month when Spring deliveries begin, and the upward drives usually have their inception around the first of the year, or even earlier. The movement now holding the eyes of the world got under way in August, 1924. From the first time it has been the public's market, with the professionals compelled to follow the general trend. Even Cutten has kept step with public estimate of the way wheat will go. And the public has shrewdly used the great stocks belonging to such operators as levers to keep up the market and force Europe to pay. On the day that one of the big stocks breaks—that is to be the day of reckoning.

Another colorful figure in the line of wheat kings, and the immediate predecessor of Patten, was Joseph Leiter, a spectacular plunger, who kept the world on the anxious seat for some years. Leiter's famous corner brought him only bad luck and threatened the family fortunes. He had come home from Harvard and gone into business with the fresh bloom of enthusiasm. Ostensibly he was to manage the great real estate holdings of his father, Levi Z. Leiter, who gave him $1,000,000 to start with. But Chicago awoke one morning to learn that it was young Leiter who had been running up the price of wheat, and almost had cornered the market.

Whatever the elder Leiter may have thought about the wisdom of the matter he was drawn into the market and millions became involved. Gradually the fight narrowed down to a struggle between the Leiters and P. D. Armour. Armour had abundant grain in the Northwest and many additional tons in lake freighters tied up for the Winter because of the ice. Armour sat down with a pencil and computed just how much of that wheat had passed through the straits from Superior. It was enough, he decided, to break the Leiter grip if he could get it into Chicago. But virtually every one of those vessels was frozen tight in lake harbors and would stay there until the Spring thaw.

That was the ordinary course of events. Armour chartered tugs and ordered them to get the ships out at any price. The tugs went to work and the nation watched as day after day came reports of the ice-breaking job. Each time a cargo was freed wheat paused in its upward flight. Then came the day when it not only paused, but tumbled from $1.85 to $1.25 and the Leiter corner fell through, costing its backers many millions. No drama of the kind has been played against the background of wheat since those stirring days in '97.

Beyond Cutten, Patten and Leiter stand the shadows of other wheat kings. All but two were Chicago men. Wheat and Chicago seem indissolubly united. The greatest increase ever brought about in a wheat corner took place in 1888 when "Old Hutch," otherwise B. P. Hutchinson, drove prices from 90 cents to $2, and did it within about two weeks' time. Crops in the Northwest had been deficient and the stage was set for a corner. "Old Hutch," noted for sagacity in market matters, picked the right opportunity and bought wheat so fast that he more than doubled the price.

His profits were large, but wheat is a fickle mistress, and not long afterward he dropped most of his winnings. That corner brought about the first important legislation to check market manipulation. The fact that such a necessity as wheat could be doubled in price by the shrewdness of one man was something that made the whole nation think. And the Hutchinson corner followed hard on the heels of another disastrous episode, enacted the year previous, when E. L. Harper, head of a Cincinnati bank, endeavored to corner wheat, forcing up the price fourteen points from 80 cents. A slump followed quickly and wheat reverted to 68 cents, ruining the bank and dragging down numerous grain houses.

Those were the intensive days of speculation. It is doubtful if later movements ever have reached the fever heat of the latter '80s and early '90s, just before the great panic, when the idea that millions could be made out of corners was the ruling passion of many big figures in American affairs.

The wheat corner had come into prominence as a device for getting rich quickly in 1879, when James R. Keene engineered the first of the big wheat movements. That movement sent wheat from $1 to $1.65 and caused suffering here and abroad. In the end Keene lost because he held his wheat too long and the European crop turned out well instead of badly, as expected. But the price of bread meantime rose sharply all over the world.

Price of Bread Advancing.

Once more than phase of wheat operations commands national attention. As a result of the soaring price millers are advancing flour and bakers in many cities are increasing bread from 1 to 3 cents a loaf. This will take a great sum of money from the pockets of the people. The Agricultural Foundation, maintained in Chicago, has figured in dollars and cents, as well as barrels and pounds, the final effect on the family of the present rise in wheat and flour. Proceeding on a basis of an advance of 25 per cent. in the price of bread, the average family's food expenditures will be increased by $13 a year.

The typical family annually uses 600 pounds of bread and butter in addition to half a ton of other wheat products, milk an eggs. Each year Americans eat more than 12,000,000,000 loaves of baker's bread. Ten years ago $1 would put in the family market basket 15.9 pounds of bread, 29.4 pounds of flour, 2.8 pounds of butter, 11.2 quarts of milk or 2.8 dozen eggs. Today, under present conditions, $1 will buy 11.4 pounds of bread, 18.6 pounds of flour, 2.1 pounds of butter, 7.2 quarts of milk or 1.7 dozen eggs.

Approximately 50 cents of the dollar the consumer pays for bread is absorbed in the cost of distribution. The farmer receives about 30 cents out of the dollar for wheat in the local market. Transportation to the miller and conversion into flour take another 9 cents of the consumer's dollar, and the cost of manufacturing into bread costs another 10 cents.

With the prevailing high price of wheat it would seem as if the farmer must surely be satisfied. This, however, does not seem to be the case. An authority on the subject asserts that 80 per cent. of America's grain growers frown, while 20 per cent. of them grin, over the fact that the price of wheat has climbed beyond the $2 mark. The bulk of the wheat crop in the United States left the farm at a price averaging 65 cents a bushel under the prevailing price. Hence the dissatisfaction. Four-fifths of the grain has left the farm and a large amount is now being tossed about by speculators, with the public ultimately paying the bills in terms of higher-priced flour.

Such is the drama of wheat, now holding the stage in the Chicago pit; a drama in which messenger boys may achieve fortunes as well as the kings of the royal line who have dominated the stage in this and other years. Presently the winnowing will begin, and woe to him who has pyramided his wheat too high.

Rate Of Wages Up 79.3 P.C.

Average Pay of Skilled a Workman Has Increased Over 1923.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 18 (Canadian Press).—Dealing with the rates of wages paid to the various workers in Canada, a review published by the Federal Department of Labor shows that the average skilled workmen, not including lumbering and factory workers, are paid an average of 79.3 higher than in 1913. For that year a basis is fixed at 100. The average fluctuations in wages of six main groups runs from 67 in 1901 to 179.3 in 1924.

The greatest increase is in the miscellaneous factory trades where the index number stands at 197.6; the lowest, 157.4 is to workers on steam railways. For common factory labor the index number is 183.2 and in lumbering 183.1.

The six main groups for which the average figure is given as 179.3 are, besides steam railway workers, the building trades, 169.7; metal trades, 175.5; printing trades, 191.9; electric railway workers 185.4; coal miners 192.4. The highest average for the group of six, 192.1, occurred in 1920, since when there is an apparent decline of 12.8.

FAITH AND WORK TO HELP PRAIRIES

Two Tales of Farmers Who Made Good When All Seemed Lost.

An illustration of the hardships through which the early settlers had gone was recently cited by President Murray, Saskatchewan University Extracts from a diary recently sent to the university by a resident of the Moosomin district told of the threshing of the first wheat crop with "sweep power" which offered considerable difficulties as the oxen and horses did not work well together, the wheat grading No. 2 frosted and selling for 38 cents a bushel. Two years later the wheat crop brought 45 cents a bushel, but we found the settlers forming a "Farmers club" meeting in Tom Dickey's shack with a program of songs, recitations and a brisk debate on whether a man gained more knowledge from reading or from traveling.

"When things are at their worst we find the agricultural societies stepping in to make things bright," he said.

President Murray then spoke of visiting one district in Manitoba last year while on the education commission, and which had suffered from a number of bad crops. Wise men declared the land was played out and should be abandoned. One of the farmers could not buy seed wheat, but was able to get hold of some barley. His credit was exhausted, he was heavily in debt, but he had faith and showed his faith by careful preparation of the soil and putting every acre he could into crop. His barley he sold for $1 a bushel which brought him in $15,000. With an old Ford car, a roll of money and a box of cigars he went around among his neighbors and other creditors and after paying out twelve thousand dollars had three thousand left to his credit as well as the Ford car after his triumphal debt-clearing trip.

"This is the kind of stuff that Western Canada wants and that Western Canada may well be proud of," says Prof. Murray, adding: "You do well to believe in the country, to have unshaken faith in our country, for I believe that a better, brighter day is dawning for us and that Saskatchewan will yet be the leading province of our great Dominion of Canada."

ASPHODEL

By Mrs. REUBEN MOORE
Birdsall, Ont.

Oh, Asphodel! thou lovely place
When Nature shows her smiling face,
Where birds and bees their anthems sing,
When the first flowers bloom in Spring;
Thy shady nooks I love full well.
Oh, Asphodel; sweet Asphodel.

Oh, lovely lake; oh, lake of dreams,
The moon upon thy bosom gleams;
Thy wavelets murmur soft and low,
And whisper tales of long ago;
Round thee my memory loves to dwell,
Oh, Asphodel; dear Asphodel.

The painted savage comes once more,
They gather round thy sandy shore.
On Gaby's Point their lamp-fires gleam,
Then vanish, silent as a dream;
Their birch canoes thy waves divide
And on thy dancing waters glide.
On sandy beach their children play,
And sing wild songs on moonlight bay—
On moonlight nights they may be seen,
Elusive as the pale moonbeams.

* * * * *

Oh, lonely house, on lonely shore,
I stand outside thy bolted door,
Through tear-dimmed eyes I look in vain
For those who never come again.
The young, the lovely, all are fled—
The aged mother, long since dead;
The noble son, whom honor led,
Lies in the city of the dead.
He comes no more to Asphodel—
He joined the choir invisible—
His memory shall forever dwell
Round lake and woods of Asphodel.

CHOICE OF HENS FOR BREEDING PURPOSES

Prize-Winning Racing Pigeons Are a Real Treasure in the Future.

Nothing more important, nothing more difficult than the choice of hens for rearing purposes!

Possessors of good hens must indeed value these as a real treasure, because with tact and cunning their hens may produce a lot of prize-winning racers and guarantee for years the fame of the fanciers. All hens of good blood may occasionally produce good youngsters, but if it is only exception these hens cannot be entitled with the name of good rearing hens the quality of the offspring, as a rule, being inherited known that the number of male racers is far more considerable than that of racing hens, but also for rearing purposes the number of suited cocks exceeds that of the hens.

At first sight it is difficult or better said impossible to pick out the rearing hens. All fanciers are aware of that fact. Only the well made up resort of previouo rearing results can help to choose. Not seldom we notice that the offspring of a hen we considered as worthless become marvellous racers, so that sometimes a lucky experiment shows out the rearing qualities of a hen; that will never be the case if the parents of that hen are not of the best breed, because "decent breed" is the first and most necessary requirement for a good hen.

But how to distinguish good breeds? If the origin of the hen is known outer signs are of very little importance, if, of course, no physical defects exist Hens with partly unknown origin are best not used for reproduction unless they can be ranged between the exceptional subjects showing all the outer indications of good blood; exceptionally strong and beautiful form; broad in the front, thin at the back; long, strong, straight and well-formed breast-well closed, shiny flight; clever eyes, nicely closed in and with clean white edge.

Some fanciers choose their breeding pairs by judging the eye, and more especially the sharpness of the eye-circle. Must it be said that such practice is faulty? Thousands of experiments have been made for that purpose and the unlucky results all those who adhered to that erroneous system prove enough. But what we like to see in the eye of a hen is cleanness, nice shape, dark color and shine, without making any difference between various shapes and color. Hens showing not only the same shaped and colored eye, but also all the other special indications their parents possessed, hens colored the same as the best racers of colored the same as the best racers of the breed they belong to are to be preferred.

Identical outerly particularities are easily reproduced with the coupling of pigeons belonging to the same blood. Qualities, having instinct, sense or orientation, will power, are also improved by such coupling. The same cannot be said for the crooning of blood. Particularities and qualities are only occasional and only reproduced in the second or third generations.

The present type of breeds are, as a rule, obtained after the summer, and that is why hens for rearing are best chosen between the late youngsters. The latter must then be as faultless as can be, and preferably of large shape. small hens may suit for rearing as well, but are not to be recommended, their eggs of reduced shape never producing the strong youngsters we require.

It is neither advisable to mate too old hens. Six years should be a very strict maximum; once above that age, notwithstanding the fact that every satisfaction was obtained before, a hen will not produce anything worth keeping. Exceptions to that rule exist, but in case of the mating of an old hen with a young strong cock.

I will also call to the attention of fanciers that mating too many hens causes overcrowding of lofts, so that in June, July or August the youngsters, beautiful, well feathered and promising, are, through lack of sufficient room, to be done away with.

To close, I advise to all liking to buy hens in sales, only to choose between young subjects, and as far as possible to limit their choice to the latest young. Old hens put in sales are generally worthless. Young ones are unknown either to seller or to buyer and cause surprises sometimes.

The chance of succeeding will be all the more considerable if some of the advice this chronicle contains is followed.

Man may dismiss compassion from his herat,
But God will never.—Cowper.

HELP IS SCARCE AT BAILIEBORO

Small Crop Predicted as Result of Shortage of Labor.

BAILIEBORO, Feb. 18.—From all parts of the world is heard the complaint of men being out of work, but the farmers of this community are getting anxious to know just where they are going to secure their help to run their farms this year.

Good farm laborers are very hard to secure this season, eveu at a high wage. It seems as though it has come to the time of day when men do not care to do farm work. The majority of laborers are holding off, trying to secure jobs on the highways, or most any place but on the land.

If the farmer can not get the help he is certainly going to grow a small crop. Large crops can not be handled without plenty of help. The tractors have helped out the situation considerably, but the man power is needed as well to keep the wheel turning on the farm.

At the last meeting of the U.F.Y.P.O. Club, which was held in their hall at Centreville on Thursday evening, it was decided to link up the South Monaghan Young Farmers' Association with the South Monaghan U.F.Y.P.O. Club, and to run the business of both associations under the one set of officers, adding only a new secretary to handle the business for the new organization. Dawson Rutherford was appointed secretary to look after the business of the young farmers' organization.

About forty new members' names were enrolled, and the officers and members are looking forward to making the organization an excellent success during the remainder of the year.

There was also a suggestion made that the South Monaghan Club affiliate with the Cavan Young Farmers' Association, and join them in their judging competitions, etc. This item of business was left over until the next meeting.

The members of the club also decided to hold a formal dance in their hall on February 20.

MARSEILLES TRAFFIC UP.

Freight and Passengers Exceed 1913 Business for First Time.

HAVELOCK Feb. 18.—The anated Press).—Freight and passenger traffic at the port of Marseilles in 1924 exceeded pre-war figures for the first time since the armistice. The total tonnage was 21,114,351, or 43,531 tons more than in 1913.

Passengers entering and leaving the port numbered 771,009, as compared with 566,165 in 1913.

BLUSHING LEAVES.

They were having a botany lesson, and the teacher asked the class why did the leaves turn red in autumn.

Up popped one hand.

"Well, Tommy?" asked the teacher.

"Please, miss," replied Tommy, "they blush to think how green they have been all the summer."

"Olaf" Hansen: Kasberger told me I had to cut out eating sugar during basket-ball season.

"Weinnie" Hutton: How come?

Hansen: He said it made a fellow lazy.

Hutton: What kind of sugar do you use?

Hansen: Loaf sugar.

Teacher: "Now, Tommy, what is the plural of man?"

Tommy: "Men."

Teacher: "Correct. Now tell me what is the plural of child?"

Tommy: "Twins."

British Act Against U. S. Bacon Branded Canadian

LONDON, Feb. 17 (Associated Press)—On the contention that they are being "hoodwinked" to the tune of 25,000,000 pounds of bacon a year—bacon which is cured in the United States and sent to Canada and then re-exported to England as "best quality Canadian"—the National Farmers' Union of Great Britain has started a movement here to put an end to the practice.

The union took steps here recently to call the attention of the public to disclosures made some time ago as the result of an agricultural inquiry promoted by the Ontario legislature which brought to light the details of the trick of sending the millions of pounds of bacon to Canada each month and then reshipping it here, the goods being sold in the British markets as a product of the Dominion. It is understood here that as a consequence of the revelations the Canadian government has been requested by various organizations to create a distinctive brand which is to be placed on all exportable bacon from Canada in the future.

The Farmers' Union also took a leading hand in bringing about the embargo on American potatoes which became effective some time ago, this action having been taken, it has been explained, to prevent an influx of the Colorado beetle, better known over here as the American potato bug.

WHAT DID YOU DO YESTERDAY?

Few People Could Recall Even a Day or Two Past.

KEEP A DIARY.

What did I do three years ago today? What was the weather like?

How many people have asked those questions and numerous other questions pertaining to their work in past years? And how many answer them accurately?

If there is one class of citizen who should keep a journal of the daily happenings in his life, it is the farmer. It is true that many a one makes brief notes in his old account book, or in the family Bible, when something extraordinary takes place, such as a disastrous frost or storm, and the majority mark down the gestation dates of their various breeding stock, but probably not more than one in every hundred makes a practice of chronicling events, day by day, in a book specially reserved for the purpose. Yet, to jot down a few important facts each day requires but a little time in the evening, and it is surprising how soon one becomes interested in a diary, especially after the first year has passed and it is possible to look back and compare notes.

Moreover, a well-kept diary is very helpful to a farmer. Seeding dates and particulars are entered in the book; crop yields are tabulated, and atmospheric conditions noted during the growing season. A comparison of results for two or three years aids him greatly in planning his work for the coming year. He knows from past experiences whether late or early-sown oats proved the better; whether the greater yield of corn per acre was produced on spring or fall-plowed land. The diary also stores up a wealth of valuable information in regard to the care of his livestock, and the best results derived from the different methods of feeding. In time, a farm diary becomes the owner's chief adviser, a reliable and indispensable reference library, based on actual conditions.

LOSES A COW.

Animal Owned by Tom Tyler Fell Into Spring.

TRENT RIVER, Feb. 18.—Mr. Tom Tyler lost a valuable cow last week. The animal fell in the spring a couple of weeks ago and had to be pulled out, and was unable to walk from the effects which caused its death.

It may be the woman always pays, but the man usually incurs a charge account which must be settled some day, even though the settlement be delayed for a time.

EGG CIRCLE HAS SOUND POSITION

Asphodel Producers Report Addition of Ten Members This Year.

GOOD TURNOVER.

The Asphodel Egg Circle held their annual meeting in the agricultural office, Norwood, Ont., on Thursday afternoon. Owing to the condition of the roads the attendance was not what it otherwise would have been. The reports presented show that the circle is in a sound financial position and is under careful direction and efficient management.

The manager's report shows a membership of	73
The number of dozen eggs shipped	35,298
Cash advanced at current prices	$8,267.20
Net profit returned to members	929.60
Average net price to members per dozen	.26
Average net profit per dozen	2.6

Already ten new members have been added to the above since the beginning of this year and there is every prospect for a large increase in membership and volume during the present year. The system being followed by this circle is an advance price when eggs are delivered and the profits returned monthly to the members. All members and the manager are under contract with the circle and the constitution and by-laws are carefully and consistently followed. Great credit is due to Mr. B. W. Squire, the manager, for the outstanding success being made. Not being content with presenting the above financial statement, he also prepared a statement of each member's transactions, showing the number of dozen delivered, the price advanced and the net gain. This report shows that four producers received over $30.00 net profit. Ten received between $20.00 and $30.00, while twenty-four more received between $10.00 and $20.00. Every member had some profit and this report was very interesting. There has been no spectacular increase in membership, just the natural healthy growth that would be expected under these conditions.

F. H. Buker, District Poultry Promoter, and F. C. McRae, the Agricultural Representative for Peterborough County, were present and addressed the meeting.

BELMONT CIRCLE ANNUAL MEETING

Handled 6,135 Dozen Eggs in Year—Edward Fennell is President.

HAVELOCK, Feb. 18.—The annual meeting of the Belmont Egg Circle was held recently at the residence of Mr. E. Fennell, when the officers for 1925 were elected: President, Edw. Fennell; Vice-President, R. Peoples; Secretary-Treasurer Mrs. Wesley Johnston. Directors—George Smith, Edw. Carr, David Burgess, Jas. McMillan. Manager, Rae Williams.

The report for last year showed that 6,135½ dozen eggs had been handled, and the average price paid the producer, 24.3 cents per dozen.

To Farmers Sweathearts

"If you are thinking of becoming a farmer's wife learn every trade and profession, as you will need them all," advised Mrs. McNeal, president of the women's section of the Saskatchewan Grain Growers' Association, at the opening of its annual convention. "The farm woman must largely be her own manufacturer," she added, speaking to the younger generation.

"And yet," she went on, "not many country women would change positions with their city cousins. They enjoy the life with its closer contact with nature and its independence, but wish to have some assurance that their labor is not in vain, and to this end economic conditions must improve."

To The Editor of Farm Page

To the Editor of the Farm Page.

Dear Sir: As the time is approaching when the farmers are laying out their plans for their seeding, I wish to draw their attention to the quality of seed they should use. It should always be the very highest grade obtainable from any source, and then it will be too poor. In order that the farmer can intelligently choose I just want to call their attention to the different grades laid down by our Canadian Seeds Act, covering alfalfa, clovers, timothy, etc. They are as follows, registered, extra No. 1, No. 1, No. 2, No. 3. The analysis of these grades are as follows:

Grade.	Weed Seed Per Oz.	Germination.	Purity of Variety.	Variety.	Weed Seeds Per Lbs.
Registered	30	90%	98%	Clovers	28,800
				Timothy	23,040
Extra No. 1	50	85%	95%	Clovers	48,000
				Timothy	38,400
No. 1	100	80%	No Standard	Clovers	96,000
				Timothy	76,000
No. 2	200	75%	No Standard	Clovers	192,000
				Timothy	153 000
No. 3	400	60%	No Standard	Clover	384,000
				Timothy	304,000

In the foregoing analyses of the weed seeds, the noxious weeds, both primary and secondary, are included. Now the farmer will easily see why his farm has become polluted with weeds, as many farmers do not reach any higher than Government Standard No. 2 seed, especially in timothy. Some firms carry a grade higher than is laid down by the Seed Act, testing as high as 94% germination and 99.50% purity. My attention was called to a corner store some distance from here who handles nothing but XXX seed, and he controls the business of the best farmers for miles around. The amount of good, strong germinating seed to sow to the acre runs from 8 to 10 pounds to the acre, mixed seed. The stronger the germ the deeper root the plant will have. Too much seed is worse than not enough, as there will be a mass of fibers and no root system, and the plant will winter kill. The other day I picked up a seed catalogue recommending 4 pounds of turnip seed to the acre, when ½ pound to 1 pound is sufficient. It reminded me of the Saskatchewan Government control liquor law: sell and sell all you can.

Yours truly,

W. H. MERRILL.

WILLS TO CLAIM DEMPSEY TITLE

Challenges Champion to a Match Through New York Athletic Commission.

SIX MONTHS' PERIOD.

NEW YORK, Feb 18.—(Canadian Press).—Harry Wills, negro heavyweight, through his manager, Paddy Mullins, filed a challenge of a match with Jack Dempsey with the State Athletic Commission Tuesday. Accompanying it was a certified cheque for $2,500.

In presenting the challenge, Mullins said that in the event Dempsey failed to accept within a period of six months, Wills would claim the heavyweight title. The Commission refused to act yesterday, deferring action until its meeting next week.

Frankie Carpenter, of Freeport, L.I., was suspended until April 1 for participating in a match with Mike McTigue in Massachusetts last November. McTigue is in disfavor in this state, and all who meet him anywhere out of New York State are blacklisted for six months.

Commissioner William H. Muldoon presented a new rule which would make it a foul for a wrestler to toss his opponent from the ring. Such offence will result in disqualification if the rule is adopted.

CAMPBELLFORD AND TRENTON ARE TIED

No Decision in Trenton—Return Game Thursday Night.

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 18.—The first of the home-and-home games in the second round of the Interscholastic Hockey League was played at Trenton Monday night between Trenton High School and Campbellford High School, and resulted in a tie, each team scoring five goals. The return game will be played at Covert's Arena Thursday night, and Coach Stephen's boys hope to qualify for the next round, but realize they will have to play their best hockey to come out on top.

"Gate Crashers" Fined.

As a sequel to last Friday night's hockey game at Covert's Arena between two Hydro teams, Sam. Flint and Harry Ingram, two members of the Junior O.H.A. team were fined $15.85 each, on a charge of evading the amusement tax. The two boys, as well as many others present, resented the action of the arena management in charging 25c to see a novice game, in view of the fact that the boys playing were paying for the use of the ice. Despite the efforts of the gate-keeper to block their passage, the two made their way upstairs to the gallery, where they witnessed the rest of the game unmolested. They were handed a summons on Saturday to appear before Police Magistrate Payne, who gave them the minimum penalty of $10 and costs, or $15.85 in all.

The American delegates have withdrawn from the Geneva Opium Conference ....It remains to be seen what effect this will have on the training camp predictions.

BROCKVILLE HERE FOR JUNIOR GAME TO-NIGHT

Tonight the local fans can watch the best two Junior teams in the eastern groups of the O.H.A. in action. The homesters face the task of pulling down a two-goal lead piled up on them in Brockville on Monday. The Brockville boys are out to win again right in Peterboro, to show they deserved their win at home. Both teams play a clean hard checking game and their performance in the Island City was regarded as the treat of the season. There should be a full house out tonight to encourage the boys in their fight.

LOUIS SABATINO RETAINS TROPHY

Won Strickland Cup for Third Successive Year at Lakefield.

LAKEFIELD, Feb. 18.—Last night was Sport Night at the Rink. The largest crowd of the season was out, and they had something to cheer for from start to finish of the programme. The first feature was a game of Broom-a-loo. This was a distinct novelty very much enjoyed. The contestants, armed with brooms and wearing ordinary shoes chased a football around the ice to hockey rules. Owing to the uncertain footing many of the players lay on their backs and made motions which were frog-like in their grace and agility. The teams represented the Grove School and the village, and the two scheduled 15 minute periods passed scoreless. In the first overtime of 5 minutes Loosemore obtained control enough to bat one in for the Grove, and the second overtime was scoreless. Braden Blewett was an acceptable referee. The members of the winning team received Eversharp pencils.

The line-ups:—

Grove.—Pedlar, goal; Christmas and Young, defence; Barnard, centre; Griffiths and Loosemore, wing; Little, sub.

Village — Wanamaker, goal; W. Hamblin and Trude, defence; Stabler centre; Sherin and H. Hamblin, wings.

After the excitement had died down their were two quarter mile foot races. That for boys under 15 was won by G. Sherin with G. Strickland, second.

The three mile skating race for the Strickland Cup was won by Louis Sabatino. This is his third successive win, so he retains the cup as his permanent property.

The half mile skating race for boys under 15 was won by Loosemore; 2. Stabler.

Half mile for girls under 15—1, Mae Irwin; 2, Lileon Stuart.

Quarter mile for boys under 12.—1, Gordon Kidd; 2, Robert Stenner.

Quarte mile race for girls under 12.—1, Theodora Elmsley; 2, Eileen Brown.

Partners' Race.—One mile.—1, T. Hampton and Luella Hamblin; 2, H. Stabler and Mae Irwin. After the races the prizes were presented by E. W. Bailey, president of the rink company.

OMEMEE TEAM SORE.

Allege Hughes Cup Hockey Rules Broken by Lindsay.

OMEMEE, Feb. 17.—The Omemee hockey team, accompanied by about fifty fans, journeyed to Lindsay on Monday evening, some by C.N.R., while others went by bob-sleigh. All were ready to cheer the home team who were to play Lindsay in the tournament for the Hughes Cup, but instead were there to see fair play, and before the game commenced the manager and others protested the game as they found themselves up against two O.H.A. players from Toronto. The result was that the score was 4-0 in favor of Lindsay.

The crowd returned home with not a good word for the mean deal they had been handed, and claim it will be the last should the game not be rectified.

"Don't take your troubles to bed," advises Thomas Edison .....But what are you going to do if you've lost your putting touch?

Perhaps yesterday wouldn't have seemed so incomplete to us if someone had thrown Strangler Lewis out of another ring.

NO REASON WHY MISS WILLS SHOULDN'T BE JUST

As Great a Golfer As She Is Tennis Player.

HELEN WILLS; MARY BROWNE IN BACKGROUND.

BY JOE WILLIAMS

Mary K. Browne of California last fall exploded the theory that golf and tennis like cucumbers and ice cream, present an impossible combination.

Miss Browne—and not meaning to get personal or anything but it seems to us she has been a Miss entirely too long—used to be the hot shot of the country's racquet wielders, which is a tony phrase for tennis wielders.

Ten years ago she was the national champion and the bright young birds who pounded typewriters in those days called her a "super-champion," and hinted that it would be a hot day in December when she was beaten.

Of course she was eventually beaten like all the invincibles are sooner or later, and then she turned to golf. At first she contented herself with purely local engagements in which she acquitted herself with what is known as distinction, but last year the urge to do bigger and better things seized her.

You recall, no doubt, how on entering the national championship for the first time she not only qualified handily but went right on through the field to the finals where she was finally knocked off by Dorothy Campbell Hurd's stead machine-like play.

The Two Games Blend.

Though defeated, Mary K. Browne demonstrated right there and then that a long and enthusiastic devotion to tennis does not necessarily bar one to greatness as a golfer. Indeed, Miss Browne's technique as a golfer was said to be even better than her old grip on tennis.

Inspired probably by Miss Browne's success, Helen Wills, present national tennis champion—the Mary K. Browne of today—has taken up golf and announcement is made she intends to compete in the local tournaments the coming summer.

There is no reason in the world why Miss Wills shouldn't get just as far in golf as Miss Browne has. Indeed she ought to get farther. She is, for one thing, younger and is beginning at an earlier age. She has a calm competitive temperament and that is important in golf.

May Win Both Titles

What's more, she is rugged enough for testing tournament ordeals and she has been through the mill often enough to face any kind of an assignment with perfect poise and confidence.

We hope Miss Wills goes in for golf with the same energy and interest she has lavished on tennis. If she does she ought to come mighty close in time, to winning the national championship.

It is not inconceivable that she might reach the heights in golf while still dominating the tennis field. Bill Tilden told the writer last summer Miss Wills was good enough to hold the tennis title for five or seven more years. If she is ever to be a great golfer it will be within that time.

A double title-holder in women's golf and tennis would be somewhat of a rarity, like a postoffice pen that writes without scratching, or a dizzy blond who prefers Child's to the Ritz Carlton.

EXAMINER AND C.P.C. PLAYED FRIENDLY GAME

Fast Game of Hockey Last Evening Ended in a 5-5 Score.

The Canadian Packing and the Examiner hockey teams, played a tie game of hockey last night at the Brock Street Rink, the final score being 5-5. It was a well-contested game, and the fans who were in attendance were treated to a great battle. Both teams showed some good stickhandlers and backcheckers who fought it out all the way.

The Examiner team were short their goal minder when the game was called and had to use one of the forwards, who played in the nets minus pads or any of the other paraphernalia that goes to make up an outfit.

Both teams were without subs, so the players had to go the full sixty minutes, which was kind of tough on some of the boys. For the C.P.C. outfit Freddy Graham and "Sailor" Maudsley were the stars. Both worked hard and showed some good stickhandling and speed. The rest of the team gave their best and were not far behind Maudsley and Graham in effectiveness. Delahays in the nets turned in a good game, turning away a host of shots. The C.P.C. team depended quite a bit on the individual work of their players and showed very little combination, the result of not having played together before.

It would be a hard proposition to pick any stars on the Examiner team as all the boys worked hard. The forward line broke away three abreast and showed some great combination. In the nets Harry Clarke turned in a good game, considering the fact that he had no outfit. On the defence Swanston and Grey were like stonewalls, and the forward line, Collins, Baker and Franks were all good.

The game opened fast and for the first twenty minutes both teams went at top speed, but from then on they began to slow up and near the last of the game the players were pretty well tired out, the result of having to go the full sixty minutes. Graham netted two goals for the Packing, Maudsley one, Oxley one, and Brunton the other. Collins, Franks, Swanston, Baker and Grey each got one for the Newspaper team.

The two teams will meet again.

The lineups:

Referee—"Scotty" McPherson.

SNOW SHOE TRAMPS BY LAKEFIELD STUDENTS

Older Set Entertained at Homes of Several of the Members.

LAKEFIELD, February 18.—The older set in the High School have ben taking advantage of the moonlight and the snow for jolly snowshoe tramps. On Friday evening, 6th February, Miss Ivah Hendren entertained her friends at a snowshoe party, followed by a bountiful supper. The remainder of the evening was spent in dancing and in singing. The guests all had a delightful time, and thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

On Friday evening, 13th February, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Kidd entertained a number of young people in honour of their son Donald. The house was decorated with hearts, cupids, etc., in honour of the Valentine season. Progressive euchre occupied the first part of the evening, and Mr. Stanley Darling was lucky enough to win the first prize and Miss Maude Nixon the consolation, which in its multitudinous wrappings took time to unfold, thereby causing a great deal of suspense. The result was a unique little souvenir of a pleasant evening. Following this the young people did full justice to the dainty supper which was served by the hostess. The remainder of the evening was spent in games, which were thoroughly enjoyed, probably "Secret Society" and "Cobblers' Shop," causing the most amusement. Before leaving for their homes, the young people expressed their gratitude to their host and hostess for the delightful evening.

Mr. Allan Watson, of Detroit, arrived in the village on Tuesday, called here by the critical condition of his father, Mr. Joseph Watson.

OTTAWA, Feb. 18. — (Canadian Press).—"Has the Minister during the recess reconsidered his harsh and altogether unwarranted attitude toward the production of oleomargarine?" asked Hon. H. H. Stevens (Conservative member for Centre Vancouver), when the Agriculture Department estimates were before the House of Commons Tuesday.

"I have been congratulating myself that we have knocked it out," replied Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture. "That is the only extent to which I have reconsidered my attitude."

"BOOKMAKERS" SENTENCED.

HAMILTON, Feb. 18—(Canadian Press).—The first indications of the police war on handbook operators, following Judge Gauld's attack upon the widespread practice, came on Tuesday, when Leo Golden and Charles Bridges were sentenced to six months in jail for bookmaking. The customary sentence has hitherto been three months.

MILLBROOK WON THE CAREW CUP

Home Folk Want to Honor Rink That Put Town on Map.

SCORE 20 TO 9.

MILLBROOK, Feb. 18 (Special to The Examiner).—The rink of local curlers which recently brought home the Matthews-Blackwell trophy from the Peterboro bonspiel, went to Toronto on Tuesday to compete for the Carew Cup.

The game began at 2.30 p.m., and shortly after 6 o'clock a telephone message sent along the cheering news that our men were bringing home the cup, having won out by a score of 20 to 9. The opposing rink was skipped by Rev. Robert Burns.

Millbrook is certainly finding its place this season "on the map" in the world of curling, thanks to the skill of this particular rink, and the good sportsmanship which leads the "victorious quartette," R. H. Edmunds, G. W. Sayles, W. E. Ball and H. J. Grassett, to seek fresh laurels beyond the community limits.

It is to be expected that the honor brought to the home town will receive recognition in some public manner, giving the citizens fitting occasion to express their appreciation.

TIGERS DEFEAT BRUINS.

Third Victory by Same Score —Cooper Helped Boston.

BOSTON, Feb. 18.— (Canadian Press.)—Hamilton Tigers increased their lead in the National Hockey League by defeating Boston Bruins 2-1 in an interesting game here last night. The advent of Carson Cooper to the line-up on the local ice speeded up the Bruin's attack, but did not improve the passing and shooting of the local forwards. The defeat was Boston's third at the hands of Hamilton by a 2-1 score. Herberts and Cooper led in the Boston attack.

FINDS ONE MAN IN 10 CRAZY

Berlin Paper Declares Women Lag in Genius and in Idiocy.

BERLIN, Germany, Feb. 16.—Germania, a local daily with a liking for statistics, has collected a lot of figures on German population from which it derives authority for the following statements:

Ten out of every 1,000 men and three out of every 1,000 women are idiots.

On the other hand, out of 1,000 men there are ten geniuses, whereas among 1,000 women there are none.

When it comes to average intelligence the women are ahead, 595 ont of 1,000 being in that category, while only 380 out of 1,000 men thus qualify.

LIGHTWEIGHT DIVISION MUDDLED

Small Chance of Leonard's Successor Being Selected at an Early Date.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—For the first time since Hector was an anemic, undernourished pup, the lightweight situation finds itself positively and pathetically on the rocks.

Benny Leonard, having grown too weight to scale in at the required poundage for a championship fight, and plainly indicating an aversion to a welterweight bout with the champion of that division, Mickey Walker, may be accepted to-wit and as follows: that he is definitely through with the prize ring.

Now who will replace Leonard?

The New York Boxing Commission announced plans for an elimination tournament featuring a dozen or so outstanding contenders for the title, the winner to meet the best of the European set for the world title.

This sounded simple enough. But then three of the principal contenders—Johnny Dundee, Sammy Mandell and Sid Terris—withdrew for various reasons.

Suppose the commission insists on holding the elimination tournament without a complete quota of challengers? Would the winner be accepted as the champion? He would not. And if the better-known battlers decline to participate in any sort of eliminations, who is there to make them?

Retirement Hurts Sport.

This gives you an idea of the complexities toward which the division is now headed. It may be years before the situation is satisfactorily straightened out.

Instead of helping the game, as many ventured, because of his accepted invincibility, Leonard, in retiring, has hurt it seriously.

Boxing champions are made in the ring, and championships should come to the challenger directly from the title-holder. Any situation that destroys the sequential transference of titles is bad for the sport.

The lightweight division has been singularly free of problems such as it now faces. In modern times, at least, the division has always had a champion who stood out undisputably.

The present generation goes back to Kid Lavigne, Joe Gans, Battling Nelson, Ad Wolgast, Willie Ritchie, Freddie Welsh and lastly to Leonard, who has stepped down after seven years.

No Real Contenders.

It is not going to be easy to accustom the eye or mind to reading daily accounts wherein Battling Goofus of Flaxseed, Nev., through the vocal eloquence of his manage, Mr. Otis P. Sapp, claims the lightweight championship for no reason whatever.

And what makes the situation all the more depressing — if you are easily depressed — is the fact th none of the present 135-pounders seems to possess any unusual amount of ability.

Mandell is not a hitter. Terris is too light. (He weighed less than 131 pounds for his recent fight in Madison Square Garden.) Dundee is too old. So is Chaney.

Jack Zivic would be this writer's pick of the lot if he were sure Zivic could do the weight. But the Pittsburgher is a junior welterweight and it remains to be seen if he can prun down.

SOCCER NOTES.

The selected committee on rules and constitutions of the Peterboro and District Football Association carried out their work very amicable and placed their report seriatium before the Executive who made alterations to meet present necessities in soccer circles.

A letter was received from the secretary of the Junior Association suggesting that a joint conference betwen the senior and junior executive with a view to amalgamation of the two bodies; also, discuss plans for the carrying out of football activities for the ensuing year. Both associations shall meet next Monday evening in a round conference at eight o'clock prompt.

All players and supporters of soccer must fully understand Rule 7 which reads, viz.: "In the event of any club withdrawing from the league, the compelte record of that club shall be struck from the league tables. Any club withdrawing shall be liable to a fine not to exceed ten dollars ($10.00). All clubs must study this rule from every point.

MORE MONEY ORDERS.

Hon. Charles Murphy Reports 25 P.C. Increase.

OTTAWA, Feb. 18. — (Canadian Press).—The House of Commons yesterday passed a vote of $1,123,729 for postal salaries.

Hon. Charles Murphy, Postmaster-General, explained that the increase of $34,211 in the estimate over last year's figures was largely due to the installation and operation of card punching machines for the recording of money orders and postal notes and for mechanical sortation. The increase was also partly due to salary revision approved by the Civil Service Commission.

"The money order business has increased 25 per cent., one of the most remarkable increases in connection with the department," explained Mr. Murphy.

SECRETARY RESIGNS.

CALGARY, February 18. — Rev. W. E. Galloway, B.A., Field Secretary of Religious Education for Alberta and British Columbia under Methodist auspices, has resigned, and may return to the pastorate in June.

"Home Manager—Purchasing Agent—Art Director—Wife"

JUST a slim girl, maybe, or a motherly woman with sweet eyes and white hair — but what a responsibility is hers!

She is the active partner in the business of running a home. She buys most of the things which go to make home life happy, healthful and beautiful. Through her slim, safe fingers goes most of the family money.

And wisely and well it is usually spent too—far better than the average man couldspend it himself. For women are better purchasing agents than men. They compare prices, weigh values and shop carefully.

They read advertisements regularly. Every day you'll find the wise little home manager searching the advertising columns for news that will add to the comfort, convenience and improvement of her home. You will find the same clever purchasing agent studying the advertisements to find where and when to buy, and what and how to buy most economically. The advertisements, too, tell this responsive art director how she can make her home more beautiful, more individual—the kind of home that a man appreciates but never knows how it is done!

Advertisements are the wise counsellors in the spending of money that the clever housewife heeds daily.

The business of running a home is made easier by reading advertisements.

ENGLAND WON MATCH.

Fourth Cricket Test Match Results in Visitors' First Victory.

MELBOURNE, Australia, February 18 (Canadian Press). — By an innings and 29 runs England to-day won the fourth test cricket match of the present series, and their first test match with an Australian eleven since 1912 at Kennington Oval.

The game was brought to a sudden and dramatic finish by the collapse of the Australian batsmen, which, considering the easy wicket, was surprising.

FITZPATRICK & GERAGHTY'S GROCERY STORES.

At the Water Street Alleys on Monday night the Rubidge Street and Charlotte Street stores of Fitzpatrick & Geraghty engaged in a strenuous battle for a chicken supper. Charlotte Street won two out of three from the Rubidge Street store, but Rubidge Street won on total points, and Charlotte Street provides the supper. This was the first time out for a majority of the ladies, and they feel so elated with their prowess that they are issuing a challenge herewith to any other grocery store in the city, the sky being the limit for the stakes.

SPECIAL TRAIN FOR HOCKEY FANS

Excursion to Toronto Arranged for Saturday Afternoon.

The Peterboro hockey club will run an excursion to Toronto via special C.P.R. train, leaving here at 3.35 Saturday afternoon, for the second game of the play-off series with Parkdale, and indications point to a big crowd taking in the trip. The special will leave Toronto at 12 o'clock Saturday night.

The Toronto Globe has the following hockey notes of local interest:

Interest has been revived in the O.H.A. Senior race, and indications are that two capacity crowds will attend the play-off games between Parkdale and Peterboro. Both teams are ready for the biggest test of all. They appear to be well matched, and each finished the group schedule with six wins and two defeats.

University of Toronto will be a hard team to beat in the Allan Cup hunt. The students showed their mettle when they defeated McGill at Montreal and Peterboro at Peterboro within three days. Shades of the U. of T. team that upset the dope and put the mighty Sudbury machine out of the running in 1920.

Irvin Bailey of Peterboro is being hailed as the best right wing in the O.H.A. Bailey has everything a star hockeyist needs.

The following all-star O.H.A. team has been contributed: Goal, Dwyer (Peterboro); defence, Fraser (Niagara Falls) and McLeod Peterboro); centre, W. Carson (Stratford); wings, Watson (Parkdale) and Bailey (Peterboro). Subs. Kelterborn (Niagara Falls). Farrell (Preston) and Starkings (London).

Tickets in Demand.

The Globe says: Memories of other days were revived yesterday morning when a long line of fans waited patiently at the Arena for the opening of the sale of the Parkdale-Peterboro reserved seat tickets for the group play-off games on Thursday and Saturday. It was a good-natured and enthusiastic crowd that arrived early in the morning to form in line outside the Arena doors. Indications are that the teams will play to packed houses, interest having been revived as the teams race down the stretch in the O.H.A. Senior race.

The defeat of the Petes by the University of Toronto at Peterboro on Monday night has not damped the spirits of their supporters who believe that the Lift Lock City players were not extended to the limit in a game which meant little to them. Coach "Conny" Smythe of the University of Toronto has taken charge of the Peterboro team, and the Easterners will likely arrive here to-day, and go into seclusion until just before the start of the battle to-morrow night.

Smythe will likely order a practice at the Arena, after which the Petes will await the test. They know what to expect, and they are confident that on the large ice surface here they can defeat the Paddlers. In the games at home the Petes never showed to advantage. They won two and lost two, but they were not defeated on the road in the O.H.A. or S.P.A. series.

Rumors were thick here yesterday than Harry Watson would not play, that Goalkeeper Joe Dwyer of the Peterboro team has a broken hand, and that there is dissension in the ranks of the Petes. These are probably the usual before-the-battle calamity yells. Dwyer has a sore hand all right, but he will be there as good as ever to-morrow. If there is dissension in the ranks the players have cleverly concealed it during the games. There is no more unselfish team anywhere than the team led by Dwyer.

Parkdale will be handicapped if Watson fails to stand up under the heavy grind. Watson's shoulder has been giving him trouble, but the P.C.C. officers think that he will be able to go the route to-morrow. The game will commence at 8.30 sharp.

Books and other records of the association were seized and Luciano Laprida, its president, was arrested.

The arrests of the Executive Committee and the editor of the Bakers' Trade magazine were ordered.

PUBLIC SCHOOL PLAY-OFF OPENS

King George and King Edward Open Tilt To-morrow at Brock.

FINAL ON SATURDAY.

There are three teams tied for first place in the Public School Hockey League, with the schedule finished. King Edward, King George and Queen Mary are the leaders, each having lost one game to another one of the three. The play offs will take place this week with the semi-finals beig slated for to-morrow afternoo, between 5 to 6, at Brock Street Arena, and the final game at the same rink on Saturday norning.

King George will oppose King Edward in the game tomorrow afternoon, while Queen Mary luckily drew - bye, and will meet the winner of the titlt.

These three teams are all speedy and for youngsters are playing clever hockey. What counts most, the games are all close and each kid on the ice is playing with his all.

Quee Mary has by far the heaviest team, with such hefties as Sowde, White and Dormer on their line up. These boys are all fast skaters, but Queen Mary is weak in combiation.

King George is composed of smalled chaps, literally midgets, but behind Tat Calladine's leadership they will prove a hard nut to crack. They play more combination and their stick handling makes one dizzy.

King Edward is a fairly heavy sextette and have never weakened in a game.

The game tomorrow when the Pewess from East City face off with the Exhibition Park champions should be a humdinger. The team emergginb victor will need to eat raw beef steak for the big battle with the West enders on Saturday.

LOCAL RINKS WIN IN TANKARD PLAY

Peterboro Rinks Reach Second Round in Ladies' Ontario Competition.

KINGSTON, February 18 (Special to The Examiner). — Peterborough and Queen City were the winners of the first round in the Ladies' Ontario Tankard, played at the Kingston Curling Rink this morning.

The Peterborough rinks, skipped by Mrs. W. H. Hill and Miss Gladman, won from the Toronto City rink, skipped by Mrs. Temple and Mrs. Segsworth, by a score of 16 to 14.

The Kingston rinks, skipped by Mrs. H. F. Moore and Miss Betts, were defeated by Queen City rinks of Toronto, skipped by Mrs. Nettleworth and Mrs. Moorehouse, by a score of 20 to 18.

An extra end had to be played to declare the winner and each of the Queen City rinks got a point which put them up two.

Peterborough and Queen City will meet in the finals, which will be played at the rink this afternoon, commencing at three o'clock.

Kingston and Toronto City will play in the Consolation event.

It had ben expected that Granites of Toronto, Oakwood, Toronto, and North Bay would have sent rinks, but at the last minute it was found impossible to make the trip.

The Grnaites of Toronto were so certain of coming that they sent their stones ahead, and they reached the city this morning.

On Thursday morning the ladies will play in the Point Competition, and the event will be concluded by noon.

RUSSIA FACES BAD HARVEST FAILURE

Abnormal Winter Causes Very Large Losses in Many Districts.

RIGA, Feb. 18—(United Press).—Russia to-day faces another serious harvest failure, laggely due to abnormal winter weather, reports from all sections of the country indicate.

Crops have failed completely in many districts, according to Commissioner of Agriculture Edintoff.

Khartoff reported that fifteen per cent. of its crop was lost in Berdiansk, and in the Volga district the percentage of loss was forty per cent.

Agricultural officials, fearing a serious food shortage, urge an increase in the summer crop areas.

THEATRES

AT THE ROYAL

FRONTIER THRILLS COMING TO ROYAL

Thrills of the old plains, as reproduced in a "Wild West" show, alternates with such modern thrills as wild races between cops and a racing auto in "The Sawdust Trail," Hoot Gibson's latest Universal starring vehicle, a swift moving story in which laughs, chase thrills and chuckles follow sensations. The new picture, coming Thursday to the Royal theatre, is a continual thrill, except where Gibson's whimsical humor lightens it with laughs.

Gibson plays the part of a college boy, whose scapegrace tricks are concealed from his parents and who, following an adventure with a speed cop, joins a Wild West show. His education in riding bronchos and racing stage coaches furnishes sensations and mirth; a romance with the "hard-boiled" cowgirl star adds laughs and finally a delicate heart interest story to the swift moving play.

A spectacular automobile chase, in which Gibson drives a racing car through a tent, through fences and into a lemonade stand in the show grounds is one of the high spots in the spectacular picture. A notable cast appears, including Josie Sedgwick, known for her work in "Jubilo" and other pictures and a sister of the director, Edward Sedgwick; Charles K. French, G. Raymond Nye, W. T. McCulley, who contributes the motor cycle thrills, and other well known players. A complete Wild West show was erected at Universal City for the new picture, and real Indians appear in the stage coach battle, the trapeze feats and other details of the programme, which is interpolated with action in the new thriller.

Last Night for Clever Comedy, "Reckless Romance" at the Royal. Hoot Gibson To-mororw.

"Reckless Romance," the rib-tickling Al Christie feature comedy, closes its run at the Royal Theatre to-night.

This is a domestic farce adapted from the famous stage play, "What's Your Wife Doing?" by Herbert Hall Winslow and Emil Nyitray. Many of the laughs are furnished by the futile efforts of a bridegroom to find his bride in a compromising situation with the hired co-respondent. Four or five plans are made to place her in his embrace at the propitious moment, but each time some meddling fool cries, "You don't deserve it, but I'll get you out of this!" and gums the works.

The cast includes T. Roy Barnes, Wanda Hawley, Sylvia Breamer, Tully Marshall, and Jack Duffy.

SPECIAL DIRECT WIRE THURSDAY NIGHT AT ROYAL.

For the Parkdale-Peterborough game in Toronto on Thursday night the Royal management have installed a special direct wire. A running description of the play will be announced by Mr. Roy Taylor.

SOUVENIR PHOTOS OF HOOT GIBSON GIVEN FREE TO KIDDIES, SATURDAY.

Each child attending the Royal on Saturday of this week will receive a souvenir hoto of Hoot Gibson. The added attractions for children's hour include Pal, the wonder dog, in "Mind the Baby," a Canadian travelogue and Albertini in "The Iron Man."

AT THE CAPITOL

1,800 PLAYERS IN SCREEN WEDDING

Norma Talmadge's New Picture Breaks Record for Film Scenes.

Norma Talmadge's "marriage" in "The Only Woman," latest photoplay, was the most gorgeous ever staged in Hollywood.

The scene was the most gigantic ever erected for Norma. All the medieval splendor of a vast cathedral, added to the wealth of costuming and decoration and the chanting of a specially selected choir, gave the filming of the picture a setting of unusual beauty.

It was estimated that, including actors, workmen and spectators, more than 2,500 persons crowded Stage Six at the United Studios while Norma's noon-day wedding was being filmed.

Norma Talmadge entered on the arm of her screen father, Winter Hall, while Eugene O'Brien was accompanied by his "father," Edwards Davis. The Rev. Neal Dodd, "Hollywood's favorite pastor," performed the ceremony and directed the wedding arrangements after the bridal party reached the altar with most realistic effect. Norma was followed by twelve bridesmaids and half a dozen pages and flower girls.

More than 1,800 players took part in the church ceremony. The men wore formal morning attire, and the 900 actresses wore expensive gowns designed by Clare West, costumer to Norma and Constance Talmadge. Page boys, flower girls, choir and altar boys in their picturesque costumes and maids of honor in the latest of filmy gowns contributed to the color of the scene.

"The Only Woman" is Norma Talmadge's first photoplay since "Secrets." It was produced by Joseph M. Schenck for release by First National. The story is one of a girl who marries a man she hates in order to save her father from disgrace. Aside from the heart interest, the picture presents some of the most vivid and thrilling shipwreck scenes ever screened. "The Only Woman" is the current attraction at the Capitol Theatre.

Many Amusing and Hilarious Surprises Await Audiences.

Vaudeville offerings at the Grand Opera House for the last three days of this week will include a double number by Lois Lloyd and Warren May, who are described as "the very different girls," in an all-comedy novelty radio, piano and banjo act, with a line of bright, up-to-date talk and special vocal offerings. There are also the Three Rianos who give a cyclonic whirlwind of tumbling and acrobatic features in able and excellent style. A newspaper report of their act says:

"Many amusing and hilarious surprises are assured patrons and all will delight in this unique offering."

The feature picture is "The Midnight Express," starring Elaine Hammerstein. Of this picture the New York Mirror says:

"The Midnight Express," a marvelous monster of steel, stars in the name part in the railroad thriller of that name playing B. S. Moss' Broadway with William Haines, Elaine Hammerstein, George Nichols, and Jack Richardson in prominent supporting roles.

"The Midnight Express" is frankly a "mad" melodrama, but it is a glorious film of an express train and its gigantic engine. Any one cherishing a soft spot in his heart for the chuggers of the rail and the men who care for the safety of travellers, will revel in this picture, even though the story is improbable, primitive in action and development.

William Haines does convincing work as the "yellow" son of the railroad president, who makes a man of himself and wins the love of a girl whose delicious cookies in turn win his father! Elaine Hammerstein, as the girl, hasn't anything to do, but she does it all right, George Nichols, the railroad president, typifies a "diamond in the rough."

The story reveals Jack Oakes (William Haines), son of the railroad president, as a wild youth minus courage. Infuriated when his father tells him he isn't any good, he leaves home and becomes a laborer for the railroad under an assumed name. He meets Mary Travers (Elaine Hammerstein), daughter of the engineer aboard the midnight express, and they fall in love.

While on the night shift of a nonstop but very important station on the upgrade route taken by the midnight express, young Oakes perpetrates a thrilling rescue, saving the express and passengers from sure death and winning the girl he loves by his bravery.

BEGGARS OF CITY REAP FAT HARVEST

Facts as to the Profits of Begging Profession in Leipsic.

LEIPSIC, Feb. 18.—(Associated Press.)—It seemingly pays to beg in Leipsic. The municipal welfare office of this city has unearthed facts as to the profits of the begging profession that would seem ianciful were they not borne out by first-hand testimony.

One blind woman, for instance, manages to scrape together 1,000 marks, about $250, a week. Daily earnings of $15 or $25 a day are not at all unusual with men and women beggars of experience. Two brothers who were offered jobs energetically declined them, saying they were making much more money with their concerts. These concerts consisted in singing before the houses of the middle class and following the performance with a sad story ending in a plea for alms. One of the brothers, it developed, spent his Sundays driving a motorcycle with his fiancee.

In another instance a beggar offered the owner of a certain clever dog $100 for the loan of the canine during begging hours because, he said, the animal would help his business. Another beggar engaged two cripples to beg for him. He paid them a regular salary, but claimed the entire earnings. In still another case a beggar who pretended he was a disabled war veteran paid two watchers twenty-five cents an hour each to warn him whenever a policeman appeared.

Investigation further developed that one of the most lucrative forms of begging was that of exhibiting children by way of winning public sympathy. It was discovered that there exists a school in Leipsic at which children are taught by experienced beggars what to say and what sort of doleful face to put up. Children thus trained are then hired out to professional beggars, who in return hand over a share of the proceeds to the director of the school.

TO HONOR PIONEERS.

HAMLINE, Minn., Feb. 14. — When Norwegians from all parts of the world come here for the Norse-American Centennial, they will see the story of the Little sloop "Restaurantionen" depicted in pageant. She was a vessel of 45 tons, manned by 53 Norsemen who left their fatherland 100 years ago this year to seek fortune in America.

The centennial is planned to commemorate the events of this first migration and to eulogize the Norwegian pioneers in America. Officials in charge are negotiating to make Norway's participation in the affair of an official nature, which would mean that Crown Prince Olaf would represent his country at the exposition.

To get the proper idea of Eternity, try paying for a thousand dollar automobile on the installment plan.

"Home Sweet Home" wasn't written by a man who had to go to the cellar to smoke. No boy.

GERMANS BEING PREPARED FOR ARMED SERVICE

Allied Military Control Commission Report to the Allied Governments.

BREACH OF TREATY.

German Pacifists Also Disclose Their Country's Evasion of Armaments Pact.

PARIS, Feb. 18. — (Canadian Press.)—A report of the Allied Military Control Mission, fifty pages long, on the state of Germany's disarmament, accompanied by twelve lengthy annexes, was delivered at offices of the Allied War committee, presided over by Marshal Foch, this morning.

Copies of the documents were immediately forwarded to the Allied governments. Premier Herriot received his copy during the forenoon, and at once began to study it. Absorption of long and detailed expositions of the commission's operations will require a great deal of time, it is said, in official circles, and the report may not reach the Council of Ambassadors before the end of the week or first of next.

German Obstructions.

The mission sets forth in full the difficulties under which it worked, declaring that obstructions placed by the Germans in way of its investigations absolutley prevented any discoveries by a direct search. Every disclosure made, the report states, was the result of denunciations by pacifist workmen in factories where material was being turned out, or by students who were aware of the military training operations in universities.

The most important of the twelve annexes, each dealing with a special feature of the mission's work, are those relating to military training and the number of men in Germany being fitted for armed service contrary to the Treaty of Versailles, and to German armaments. In spite of the obstacles placed in its way, the mission declared it succeeded, through suggestions furnished by German pacifists in obtaining detailed information of greatest importance on these two points. Most of the discoveries cited in the documents have already been made public, but a mass of new detail is given in the report, which, in the judgment of those who are aware of its contents, will prove abundantly the Allies' case against Germany.

RIDE BUMPERS; HAVE A PARTY

Chief Newhall Looks For Skirt in Case of Intoxicated Young Man.

LACK OF MEMORY.

Two youths who essayed to steal a ride on a C.P.R. train running out of Havelock were in Police Court this morning, and pleaded guilty to the charge. One was about eighteen years of age, the other a trifle younger. They explained that they had come from Winnipeg to Montreal with cattle and expected to get a pass back home on the railway. This was not forthcoming, so they thought they would go to Toronto to lock for work, and took the 'bumper special' for the trip. They thanked Magistrate Langley for the suspended sentence he imposed on them, and, after being queried as to whether they had any money or friends in the city, and denying the existence of either, they started out to find the quickest way out of town and resume what may probably be a cold tramp to Winnipeg.

One of Beer Party.

A young man who was the unlucky member of a beer party in the south end of the city last evening was fined $20 and costs of $6.50 as the aftermath of a charge of being intoxicated in a public place. He unfortunately chose a route which brought him within the clutches of the law when he started for the Munro House to get his horse and rig. His protestations of lack of memory as to the names of the other members of the convivial gathering in which a number of drinks were bestowed upon him and his companions free of charge by a hospitable host whose acquaintance he had made for the first time last Sunday drew from Magistrate Langley the remark that he (the Magistrate) had never been favored with such extraordinary hospitality, and that he was compelled to decline to believe the prisoner "the innocent young thing you are trying to make out." and therefore fined him twice the minimum amount for a first offence. The young man, who has spent the past year and a half in Chicago, made an earnest plea in his own behalf. Chief of Police Newhall, evidently remembering the "chersez la femme" or "look for the skirt" theory, made a resolute effort to find out the names of two ladies who took a minor part in the gathering, but was unable to discover them from the gentleman in the box, who remembered only that one was between "dark and fair" and the other was "a dark little girl," but in answer to a question, could recollect nothing out of the ordinary about the nose of either, or even whether they were talkative ladies. He admitted that he wasn't used to the beer that was handed out, and five or six drinks made him very drunk.

MEDIUMS PLAN TO BROADCAST SPIRIT VOICES

London Spiritualist Alliance, Ltd., Claims Communication With Northcliffe.

ADVISES EDITORS

Late Publisher Says Too Many Advertisements in Papers.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—(Associated Press).—Announcement that spirit voices from the other world soon would be broadcast by radio was made at the recent meeting of the London Spiritualist Alliance, Limited, members of which had assembled to discuss the question, "Is Lord Northcliffe dead?" Sir Edward Marshall Hall, K.C., a noted barrister, presided.

News that efforts were being made to hold seances by means of the wireless was made known to the members of the alliance by Miss Louise Owen, private secretary of the late Lord Northcliffe, who reported that "before long we are going to be able to broadcast the spirit-voices by radio." Previous to this announcement Miss Owen said she had a recent message from Lord Nortncliffe for the women attending the meeting and this was that the women everywhere should organize for the purpose of bringing about abolition of war and "let it be known that they would not bring boys into the world for the purpose of being massacred."

Sir A. Canon Doyle, the Rev. G. Vale Owen and numerous others told of their experiences at various seances when they had communicated with the former well known newspaper publisher. Rev. Owen asserted that four days after Lord Northcliffe's death he had been in touch with him, and that five days later a message came saying, "I want to thank you for your prayers for me. They helped me so much."

The principal speaker of the evening was Hannen Swaffer, one of the best known spiritualists in London and formerly in Lord Northcliffe's employ, who recited his experiences, saying that but recently he had been in communication with his former employer for two hours.

In one message Mr. Swaffer quoted Lord Northcliffe as saying: "Instead of holding up Bolshevism, tickle 'em." A later message according to Mr. Swaffer, said: "Too many advertisements, and leaders too long," this, it was taken, to having had reference to some of the former Northcliffe publications.

"I hear that Northcliffe has been reaching other circles, and that he is now a slightly different Northcliffe," Mr. Swaffer averred. "He can look down on suffering. He champions the endeavors of the League of Nations. He says that we cannot stamp out Socialism; it is too old and too strong. Northcliffe said, 'I made a mistake about Lloyd George which I regret. I let him down too suddenly.'"

Further, Mr. Swaffer quoted the late publisher as saying: "'I am out to stop war before anything. I intend to stop it. I intend to bring about equality for all men, and when every man and every woman is a spiritualist we shall not have to view the struggle between capital and labor.'"

A letter from Earl Haig, read to the alliance members, follows: "I am sorry I am unable to attend the meeting, I had a very sincere regard for Lord Northcliffe and I hope that your efforts to convince the world of the survival of his personality after death will meet with success."

Another meeting to discuss Lord Northcliffe is to be held in the near future.

SILENT 158 YEARS CLOCK NOW STRIKES

Year's Effort Needed to Put Brass Timepiece in Operation.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—(Associated Press).—An old clock that stopped working in 1767—158 years ago—recently was restarted after a year's effort by a member of the Admiralty staff. The clock is about 200 years old and contains more than 600 parts which weigh about 100 pounds. It is made of brass of such fine quality that an ingot of it could be beaten almost like gold leaf.

The clock was made by a carpenter named John Harrison for His Majesty George II. by order of the Board of Longitude which appears to have been an admiralty commission appointed to superintend the installation of chronometers and navigation apparatus on the ships of the British navy. The board gave Harrison $1,250 for the job and he took two years to make it. It is really a clock within a clock, the smaller one running for four minutes only, being wound every three and three-quarter minutes by the larger clock, which has to be wound daily.

DR. WAKE'S PATIENT AT ST. JOHN'S HALL

A.Y.P.A. Presents Sparkling Comedy to Appreciative Audience.

"Dr. Wake's Patient," a comedy in four acts, was presented for the first time last evening in St. John's Parish Hall by the A.Y.P.A. of the church, before a very appreciative audience. The gay little comedy was staged in sparkling style by a group of talented young actors from the society, and, produced under the direction of Mrs. W. McKee Bingham, in her usual effective style proved a satisfactory and entertaining dramatic offering. Each role was taken in splendid fashion and the young people outdid themselves in their delineation of the various tynes that are gathered together in "Dr. Wakes' Patient." The settings contrived for the various scenes were particularly effective, and contributed much to the charm of the presentation, which was made more attractive by the detail carried out in the costuming of each character.

Done in four acts, "Dr. Wake's Patient" opens on a bright morning in September, at "The Farm," Lavick, Devonshire, where Dr. Wake, a successful young London physician, comes to visit his country home and his parents. This, as with the other scene ,abounds in types which are delineated with excellent effect, both in dialect and attire, and there is an atmosphere of bright and snappy conversation throughout the entire offering.

In the second act, ten months later, Dr. Wake's waiting-room and consulting room are shown, with Mr. and Mrs. Murdock as invalid types that arouse much amusement. The heroine appears here as a patient of the doctor, and a case of love at first sight develops. Six weeks later, at The Bay Hotel, Seton Barr, Devonshire, they meet again, and the romance blossoms out in a pretty manner. Parental objections intervene in the course of true love, and the final solution, satisfactory to all, is not achieved until the fourth act, picturing the next morning, at the Devonshire farm again.

The cast of characters is excellent. Miss Mildred Morphet, as the pretty heroine, Lady Gerania Wyn Charteret, takes her part in splendid style ,and Gordon Ham makes a good-looking hero, in the role of Dr. Forister Wake. Miss Julia Nicholls is particularly impressive and convincing as the aristocratic Countess of St. Olbyn, and Bertram Budd is her consort, the Earl of St. Olbyn. The Bishop of Selby is enacted by Bert Graham, in a manner that presents the clerical gentleman to the life, and Ronald Fleming as Duff Wynterden, nephew of the St. Olbyns, adds much to the joy of life with his monocle and his "absolutely." Miss Florence Hutchinson is Harriet Bronson, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Wake are taken by Albert Hayter and Miss Phyllis Hood, Mr. and Mrs. Murdock, the waiting-room invalids ,are presented by Kenneth Brown and Miss Gertie Hood, and minor characters are all adequately filled, with Harold Hutchinson as Prescott, Dr. Wake's butler, Jack Collis as Antony, a farm hand, Harold Hutchinson as a hotel waiter, Isobel Vincent as Janifer, a farm servant ,and Winnifred Melton as a gipsy.

Pierrottes in the third act, singing off stage, are the Misses Hood and Horne, assisted by Mr. Dick Perry. They sing Mitzi's Love Song and the charming "Dreams."

Betwen acts, Bert Bugg's Bluebird Orchestra renders some bright and interesting musical selections.

Stage settings are looked after by Bert Graham, properties by Misses Helen Morphet and Betty Smith; while Albert Hayter acts as business manager Gordon Cornish as electrician, and Jack Marshall as stage manager.

"Dr. Wake's Patient" will be repeated this evening.

South Carolina Will Ask Changed Season On Ducks

COLUMBIA, S. C., Feb. 18. — (Associated Press).—Because warm weather in the south continues from 15 days to one month longer than in the northern States, Federal game laws applicable to the nation as a whole work a hardship on southern sportsmen, according to A. A. Richardson, State Game Warden of South Carolina and southern representative on the Federal Advisory Board on Migratory Bird Laws.

As a member of the board, Mr. Richardson said recently, he expected to advocate changing the open season for ducks about 15 days, so that they may be hunted in the southern States during colder weather.

When ducks first arrive in the south they are in poor physical condition, due to their long flight, Mr. Richardson said, and the weakness of the birds renders them less able to protect themselves, resulting in their slaughter in large numbers.

Enactment of amendments to the national game laws changing the duck season to open Nov. 15 and continue until Feb. 15, instead of from Nov. 1 to Feb. 1 as at present, will be proposed.

Another change sought by the southern representative will be to have an open season of one month for wood, or summer, duck. He said that these duck have become so plentiful as to permit a short open season, which should be from Oct. 1 to Nov. 1.

Mr. Richardson will oppose any attempt to secure a longer closed

CREAM PRICE DROPS IN TORONTO TO-DAY

Peterborough Price is Already Lower Than in Toronto—No Change Here.

TORONTO, Feb. 18 (Canadian Press).—Table cream, the "pick of the milk supply" took a drop in price yesterday. Customers of Toronto dairies found new stoppers on their milk bottles announcing change in prices of table and whipping cream. A cut of three cents has been made on a quarter pint of table cream and seven cents on a half pint. For whipping cream a quarter pint will now cost 13 cents, or 25 cents for a half pint. Previously 15 cents was asked for a quarter pint of whipig cream.

No Change Here.

Peterboro vendors of cream have not up to date made any reduction in their cream prices. However, local quotations are always less than those charged in Toronto. The regular price in Peterboro is 15 cents for a half pint of table cream and 20 cents for the same quantity of whipping cream. Vendors on the local market charge 30 cents a pint.

PRIVY COUNCIL AS FINAL COURT OPPOSED BY TORONTO MEMBER

Hon. W. F. MacLean Proposes Amending B. N. A. Act in Commons Debate.

PERENNIAL SUBJECT

Liberals and Conservatives United in Arguments Against Severing Link With Throne.

OTTAWA, Feb. 19. (Canadian Press).—Should the Canadian Parliament have the right to amend The British North America Act, Canada's written constitution? This was the question which held the House of Commons yesterday, the first private members' day of the present session. W. F. MacLean (Conservative) South York, had a motion that the Dominion Parliament should be given such a power, instead of amendments coming by way of the British Parliament as now.

Under Mr. MacLean's motion, the Dominion Parliament would not have the right to pass any amendment affecting the rights of minorities as guaranteed in the British North America Act.

Mr. MacLean urged that Canada should have the same right to amend her own constitution as had South Africa, Australia and the Irish Free State.

Opposed by Lapointe.

Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, was opposed to the motion. He took the ground that Confederation was a pact between the federating provinces. And, being a pact, how was it possible for the Dominion Parliament, which resulted from the agreement, to arrogate rights to itself without first consulting the provinces?

"The British North America Act," said Mr. Lapointe, is not only the charter of the Dominion of Canada. It is the charter of the provinces," and all the provinces should be consulted before the charter was amended.

Then J. S. Woodsworth, Labor member for Centre Winnipeg, moved an amendment to provide that consent of all the provinces should be obtained preliminary to amendment of the British North America Act by the Dominion parliament.

Mr. Lapointe thought the resolution as amended was an improvement, but still did not think it acceptable.

No Decision Reached.

The House reached no decision in the matter. Sir Henry Drayton was speaking when the House automatically adjourned at six o'clock and the motion went over. It may be reached again this session, but it is not likely unless special arrangements are made.

Opening the discussion on his motion Mr. MacLean said that the decision of the Privy Council in the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act "seemed to be an invasion on the rights of Canada." It was time to find out just how long Canada would submit to the findings of a court in which it had no voice. Mr. MacLean agreed that the Privy Council decision was right in point of law. Canada, however, would have the power to amend its constitution as had Australia, South Africa and the Irish Free State.

"We have the right to have our own constitution," said Mr. MacLean, "to amend it and to interpret it in our courts."

Have Right Law.

"My Hon. Friend,' interjected L. H. Martell (Liberal, Hants.) "has stated that the judgment of the judicial committee of the Privy Council in the Industrial Investigation Disputes Act case was correct. Supposing we had followed the decision of the Ontario Court in that matter, which was absolutely to the contrary effect, we would not then have the right law in this country."

"That may be so," replied Mr. MacLean, "I want to stop this conflict of jurisdiction. I want a real settlement of the constitution of this country. After 57 years experience with the British North America Act, I think it is time that the Canadian people had what the British Parliament has, what South Africa has, and most of all what Australia has, the right to make our own constitution and amend it, and have it inter-

UNEMPLOYMENT RELIEF BILL LESS LAST YEAR

Federal Treasury Disbursed $4,273 Through Labor Dept.

OTTAWA, Feb. 19. — A great decrease in the payments out of the Federal treasury for unemployment relief during the last fiscal year, as compared with 1922-23, is shown in a return tabled in the House of Commons yesterday.

In 1922-23 total disbursements by the Federal government for unemployment relief, amounted to $1,963,040. Of this $924,827 was paid by the Department of Labor, and $1,038,163 by the Department Soldiers' Re-establishment.

The total payments for unemployment relief in 1923-24 were $316,281 Of this amount but $4,273 was paid through the Department of Labor, and $312,008 through the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment.

CAROUSALS AT HOME OF RELIEF OFFICER

One Alderman Said to Have Been Present—Guelph Sensation.

GUELPH, Feb. 19. — (Canadian Press).—The judicial inquiry of Judge Spotten into the alleged wrong-doings of the city relief officer, James Cassidy, is nearing a close. The last of the evidence was heard yesterday and an adjournment made until to-day, when counsel for all parties will address the judge. The principal witness Wednesday was Ald. W. P. Evans, who made a point blank denial of all the allegations of the star witness, Mrs. Sarah Collins, who swore he had been the recipient of relief on many occasions, and that he had visited Cassidy's house sometimes to get a drink. On Tuesday Cassidy charged one of the witnesses with being a bigamist, but yesterday the witness brought a certificate of death of her former husband, which was accepted as proof by the judge that she was in reality a widow. It was reiterated again that parties were held at the relief officer's house, in which drinking and carousals were indulged in, and that one alderman had sometimes been present. The addresses of counsel are expected to be intensely interesting.

FAMILY'S MOURNING WAS TURNED TO JOY

Telegram of Death Was Destined for Another Home.

GUELPH, Ont., February 19. — A curious misunderstanding occurred at Guelph, Kitchener and Mount Forest on Tuesday, that created considerable sadness and annoyance until the matter had been straightened out.

A short time ago a Mr. John McPhee was brought from nea Mount Forest to the general hospital, at Guelph, for an operation of a serious character.

About the same time another man a Mr. McFie, from the same district, was taken to the Kitchener Hospital.

Mr. Fie died on Tuesday, but in the course of the relay the message was sent to Mrs. McPhee.

Hurried messages were sent to Guelph for verification, but Dr. Howard, going to the hospital to ascertain the facts found his patient well, and in his own words "well enough yet to lick a hundred dead men."

His family was immediately communicated with, when the mourning was turned into joy by the good news.

MANITOBA'S BIG LIQUOR PROFIT

Commission Realized 70 Per Cent. Profit on Turnover of $3,639,179.

BOTTLE COSTS $2.82.

WINNIPEG, Feb. 19.—(Canadian Press).—Manitoba's Liquor Commission realized a profit of 70 per cent. on the sale of Scotch whiskies during the past fiscal year, according to the annual report of the commission released yesterday. On the total turnover of $3,639,179 for the twelve months, the laid down cost in Winnipeg of all goods sold was $2,270,122.

The track price of a bottle of Scotch in Winnipeg is $2.82. The consumer pays $4.90 out of the profit, $1.07 goes to the distillery, while the duty paid to the Dominion Government, $1.43, is considerably more than the original price of the whiskey. The Federal authorities get an additional 18 cents per bottle, representing the sales tax. Transportation charges amount to 14 cents. The gross profit on a bottle of real "hootch" therefore, amounts to $2.08.

ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S. MONTHLY MEETING

President Local Council of Women Outlines Work.

The monthly meeting of St. Andrew's W.M.S. was held on Tuesday, in the church parlor, the president in the chair.

The meeting opened with the usual devotional exercises and Scripture reading by Mrs. Tremaine after which the business part of the meeting was gone through with, the secretary and treasurer reading their reports.

Miss Craw gave a very interesting talk on Mission work as given in the "Messenger," in her very capable manner, followed by a paper read by Mrs. Niven.

A vocal solo by Mrs. Parlour was then rendered which was much appreciated by the ladies.

Mrs. Stevenson, president of the Local Council of Women gave a most interesting address on the work done by the Women's Council.

The speaker said that the Women's Council dated back over thirty years, and pointed out some of the privileges and advantages such as medical examinations in the schools, domestic science, juvenile courts, mothers' pensions and many others enjoyed to-day, due to the efforts put forth by the Women's Council.

She also urged the ladies to take a keener interest in the Women's Council and would ask the representatives of the different affiliated organizations to put forth effort to be present at the local council meetings.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served and a social half hour spent.

CLINIC FOR CRIPPLED CHILDREN AT SUDBURY

Service of Specialist Secured By Rotary Club.

SUDBURY, Feb. 19.—(Canadian Press). — Sixty-five cases from all points in Sudbury district were brought to the Clinic for Crippled Children held by Sudbury Rotary Clubs, and for which the services of Dr. Harris, surgeon-specialist of the Sick Children's Hospital, Toronto, had been secured. No child was turned away, and Dr. Harris labored from 9 a.m. right through to his departure on the night train, with only a brief respite for luncheon and dinner.

As an act of mercy, the event will stand long in the history of Sudbury as an outstanding event. Many parents whose means had not permitted the advice and opinion of a specialist have now received the opinion of one of the foremost surgeons and specialists, and a line of action indicated which will bring about partial if not complete, cures in many cases, and ameliorate the distress and disability of these unfortunate children.

ESKIMO TO BE FREED SHORTLY

Serving Sentence in "Big Snow Hut" at Winnipeg for Killing Trapper.

PRISON TERM CUT.

QUEBEC, Feb. 19. — (Canadian Press). — Private advices received here are to the effect that Noo-Kud-Lah, the Eskimo from Ponds Inlet, who was over a year ago sentenced to ten years in Stoney Mountain Penitentiary for the killing of a Newfoundland trapper named Janes, has already been advised by the Federal Department of Justice that he will have only four or five more months to serve in prison. It is said that the dusky native will receive his official pardon a few days before the sailing of the Arctic from this port and that the pardon will take the form of a written document so that he may be in a position to show his fellow-natives the majesty of the white man's law when he returns to his igloo.

Cried For His Skins.

One year ago last October Noo-Kud-Lah was stripped of his sealskins, clothed in the raiments of civilization and travelled thousands of miles in the white man's canoe to Quebec. He cried all the way, imploring the members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police to dress him in his beloved skins, but this could not be done. His sealskins had been left in the care of his squaw at far off Ponds Inlet.

Noo-Kud-Lah was taken from the ship here, and as he afterwards described it to an interpreter, "the white father's children with the red skins (Mounted Police) put me on a big sled. I travelled across many inlets, passing big igloos, on that sled without dogs, until I reached the big snow hut where I was put with the bad white men."

Wrote His Wife.

Now Noo-Kud-Lah is looking forward with great longing to the time when the great white father will give him his "ticket." He has sent word to his waiting spouse only once since he has been incarcerated, and has received only a single crudely written message in response.

But the native has learned his lesson, and it is safe to assume that he will have a wealth of information to impart to his relatives and friends when arrives back in his native haunts.

BRITISH WOMAN RETAINS NATIONALITY UNTIL SHE ACQUIRES HER HUSBAND

Proposal Submitted to Dominions and if Accepted Will Be Made Law—Women Get Their Way, Says Lady Astor.

LONDON, Feb. 19. — (Canadian Press).—The status of English women who are married to aliens was discussed in the House of Commons last night. Special reference was made to those wedded to citizens of the United States, also Argentines, Brazilians or Chileans.

Major S. E. Harvey moved that "in the opinion of this House a British woman should not lose or be deemed to lose her nationality by the mere act of marriage with an alien, but that it should be open to her to make a declaration of alienage."

Major Harvey said the existing law distinctly penalized a British woman married to an alien. For example, if a British woman was married to an Argentine she ceased to be British but did not become an Argentine. Thus she became an outcast with no nationality whatever.

United States Law.

Major Harvey then referred to the United States, where an English woman must live a whole year with her husband before she was able to become a citizen of the United States and for the whole of that period she is not entitled to protection or relief as a citizen of the United States.

Lady Astor, supporting the motion, remarked that where two people of different nationalities married, the woman usually got her own way. That was why they wanted the vote, in order to have responsibility as well as power which they have always had.

Woman, continued Lady Astor, had become an inconvenient necessity; but she was a necessity, otherwise she would never have been placed in the Garden of Eden. She would become more inconvenient unless the laws of the land went the way the thinking women wanted them to go. Women were moving with such rapidity that the difficulty was to pull the men along behind them. She hoped the House would pass the motion without division.

Two Proposals.

G. Locker-Lampson, Under Secretary of the Home Office, announced that the Government would not oppose the motion, but he thought it would be better to concentrate on two proposals—the first made by a sub-committee of the Imperial Conference in 1923, that a woman ought to be re-admitted to British nationality where the marriage state, though officially existing, had for all practical purposes terminated, and, second, the suggestion made by a joint committee of the Lords and Commons that a woman should not lose her British nationality by marrying an alien unless she acquired her husband's nationality.

These two proposals had been submitted to the self-governing dominions, and, if they unanimously consented, the Government, Mr. Locker-Lampson Lampson declared, would pass legislation on the subject.

After some debate Major Harvey's motion was agreed to without division.

PULPWOOD COMMISSION COST DOMINION $75,672

Members Paid $25 a Day, $15 Living Expenses.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 19.—(Canadian Press).—The Pulpwood Commission cost the country $75,672, according to information supplied by the Government in the House yesterday.

The commission was headed by Joseph Picard of Quebec, and the members were: A. B. Kerr of Toronto, Robert W. McLellan, Fredericton; Joseph E. Sutherland, Clyde River, N.S., and William Amstie, Vancouver.

The chairman received $35 a day while engaged in the work and the others $25. In addition, the commissioners were granted $15 a day living allowances as well as transportation charges.

SHIPPING PULPWOOD.

Heavy Exports of 100 Cars Daily to United States.

SUDBURY, February 19 (Canadian Press). — Traffic in pulpwood over the C. P. R. lines has been particularly heavy during the past several weeks, and is continuing at the rate of one hundred cars a day.

Shipments are coming from points throughout the district, and as far east as Chalk River. North Bay sub-division also reports heavy shipments.

Most of the pulpwood is being cut by farmers, and all of it is billed for points in the United States.

Irish Sedition Bill Is Directed At Usurpers

DUBLIN, Feb. 19. — Kevin O'Higgins, vice-president of the Dail Eireann, yesterday moved the second reading of treasonabel and seditious offenses bill which was introduced by the government last Wednesday, and which makes permanent the law against rebellion, and replaces the Public Safety Act, and other emergency measures, which have expired.

The bill is not retrospective. It provides merely for trouble in the future. Mr. O'Higgins said that such laws as are provided for in the bill existed in all countries, which punished offenders by death for war on the state. The government, he added, could not tolerate any usurpation of the functions of the government, and therefore desired to penalize the assumption of the title of president, and of other officers in rivalry to the state.

CONDITION OF KING IMPROVED

No Cause For Anxiety—Doctors Decide Bulletin Not Necessary.

STAYS IN BED.

LONDON, Feb. 19. — (Canadian Press)—Public anxiety on behalf of King George was much relieved yesterday. The morning's bulletin was an encouraging one, saying that the condition of the King, who is suffering from bronchitis, following an attack of influenza, had passed a fairly good night, while it was said last night that His Majesty had had a comfortable and cheerful day and that his condition showed considerable improvement.

The royal physicians again visited him last night, and were so satisfied with the progress of the patient that they considered it needless to issue a bulletin.

The bronchial attack is said never to have been really serious; but it was considered advisable to take every precaution. Therefore King George remains in bed, but is able to attend to business of state.

In view of his improvement, Queen Mary was out during the afternoon making a number of visits.

It is being recalled that the late King Edward, during the latter part of his life, used to spend a portion of each winter abroad in a warmer climate, and some persons in high political quarters are asking the question whether it would not be advisable for King George also to avoid the rigors of the English winters.

LAWYERS REBUKED.

Montreal Judge Walked Out on Noisy Solicitors.

MONTREAL, February 19. — Because those in court, principally the lawyers, continued to talk after he had thrice asked them to make less noise, Judge Monet yesterday morning abruptly adjourned the arrangment and enquete court until the afternoon, and picking up his papers and books, walked from the bench to his chambers.

A few mnutes later he left the court house for his home, after asking, "How can one expect a judge to apply law and justice if he can't hear what the witnesses say?"

His Lordship remarked that the lawyers were the worst offenders. "They should have more respect for the court," he said.

LABOR ANXIOUS ABOUT ONTARIO WORK NOT BEER

Peter Heenan Says Both Ottawa and Toronto Avoided Major Problem at Present.

AMENDMENT STANDS.

Sam Clark Disapproves Stronger Beer Since Decision of People Last Year.

TORONTO, Feb. 19.—The debate on the reply to the Speech from the Throne and its two amendments was carried on yesterday in the Legislature by Peter Heenan (Kenora), Labor member, and Sam Clark, veteran Liberal for West Northumberland. Speaker Thompson ruled that, with a change in the form but not in the substance, the amendment to the amendment proposed by W. E. Raney would be acceptable.

The Raney amendment was challenged and the Speaker took time to decide. His decision leaves the two amendments before the House. Before the debate was resumed, R. L. Brackin (Liberal) Kent, moved the adjournment of the House to discuss a statement made by Mr. Raney dhring the course of his address in the debate Tuesday. Mr. Raney referred to some districts where he claimed the entire industry seemed to be "whiskey distilling ,rum running and race course gambling." Mr. Brackin asked Mr. Raney to state positively what riding he meant so that all others would be freed from the stigma. Mr. Brackin was supported by Wilson of Windsor. Mr. Raney, however, refused to make reply, and the matter dropped.

Beer a Minor Issue.

Mr. Heenan, resuming the debate, said that the matter of four per cent. beer and the pledge of the Premier were minor matters in Ontario when compared to the much greater problem of unemployment. He said that the government proposals were not sufficient to look after the problem and that the Liberals did not even make a suggestion as to how they would handle it. He stated that when the unemployed went to Ottawa and asked for bread they were given the British North America Act, and when they came to the Ontario government they were given the tariff. At the same time that the government was confessing it could not handle unemployment, it was bringing in immigrants to swell the ranks of the unemployed, he said.

Mr. Heenan declared that the last two years had been bad for the settlers in Northern Ontario. He said that they were being persecuted by the government employees and instead of giving sympathy the government agents were gloating over their misfortune.

"Give me the names of those men and they won't be in the government service," said Premier Ferguson.

Mr. Heenan said that the appointment of a northern secretary had simply led to confusion. He suggested that the government should devise some means of making the pulp companies buy pulp from settlers.

Playing Politics.

He declared that the secretary for Northern Ontario was playing politics from morning until night. Mr. Heenan suggested an amendment to the Workmen's Compensation Act to provide compensation for industrial hernia and also a change in the Mothers' Allowances Act to provide for a widow with one child.

Mr. Clark took some time in discussing the Hydro, and backed his leader for a better investigation into the Settelle charges, particularly those dealing with the legal department of Hydro under I. B. Lucas. Speaking of the O.T.A., he reminded the House that last year he said he

SPRING IN SHOP WINDOWS

Winter Is Over So Far As Fashions Go.

By HEDDA HOYT
Fashion Editor of the United Press

NEW YORK, N.Y., Feb. 19—Every doggie has his day,
And even a groundhog, has, they say,
When he takes his groundgrippers
Out of his hole
And sees his own shadow
It's going to be cold.
But if Sol casts no shadow
And the wind's like a feather
He smiles an announces:
"Watch for B.V.D. weather!"

The groundhog came out of his winter lodging, glanced at his tail to see if it cast a shadow and seeing none did a marathon about the field, which meant that spring is not far off.

Little did he know that the shopkeepers on Fifth Avenue would be interested in his manoeuvrings. But with winter off their hands and an early spring in sight, they begin to retrim their windows with summery materials and frocks. Until now the few summery frocks displayed were meant for those who travel southward in winter, but from now on, thanks to the groundhog, the styles we see are put out for our own selection.

Already we see the return of lighter weight clothes. Many women have already cast off their fur coats and are wearing long cloth coats trimmed in fur. The first of these to appear were of bright reds and greens, but more recently we see light beige trimmed in lighttoned fur about collar, cuff and hemline. Real spring models confine their fur trimming to neck and collar or to the hemborder, but seldom to both. Kashas and English woollen materials are the favorite materials for the long coat. Fur-trimming includes yellowish shades such as krimmer, beige-dyed fox, fitch, leopard and gray wolf.

Hats match the coat or the ensemble suit this season and most of these are made of felt and trimmed with flowers at one side or on the top of the crown. Little bunches of flowers placed at the top of the crown are a bit more spring-like than the perky little bows of ribbon, although one sees much of both.

Skirts are shorter than they were earlier in the winter and necklines are cut a bit higher to give balance to the figure. Sleeves are very short or full length on frocks.

Shoes of pump shape are those most popular for spring and recently introduced are the ankle straps which are worn with pump-shaped shoes. Suedes are passing with the winter and satin again is a leading shoe fabric. Kid in light tans and grays are shown in all the shops and two-toned shoes of blending shades are shown for street wear. For dress wear there are brown satins which are several shades deeper than the blond shades which were popular this seaosn.

Melon-Shaped Sleeves.

Many spring frocks are made with melon-shaped sleeves with the tight-fitting cuff extending over the wrist. These are practical for street wear and since the sleeves are decorated in embroidery, they give a lot of color to the dark crepe or silk frock. The sleeves are always of the same material as the frock with the design carried out in contrasting colors which may be repeated elsewhere on the frock.

Full Skirts.

Silk frocks invariably have some fullness introduced into the skirts. Usually inverted tucks or fine shirrings confine the fullness at either hip. In cloth frocks pleats are stitched at the sides and released at the flounce to give fullness. Sometimes the pleats in semi-sports models are set in panel effect from the side pockets and they are released at the knee to give the desired full hemline.

Violet-Hued Bonnets.

Violet, fushia and cyclamen pinks are the shades one sees most of in millinery. Sometimes several shades of purplish tones are blended and those with pinkish cast are most becoming. Just at present one sees very few hats that are made of felt, since felt rules the millinery world. The purplish toned corsage is the one most popular with the wearers of the fushia bonnet. One sees many young girls with violet colored blouses or tunic, tan topcoats, violet hats and violet corsages. Even the border of the 'kerchief is kept in violet tones.

DERIVE A REVENUE FROM RADIO FANS

Europe, Although Hampered By Government Restrictions is Tuning In.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19 (Associater Press).—The United States leads the world in radio development but Europe, though still hampered by governmental restrictions, is beginning to "tune in," according to E. A. Brofos, European manager of the International Western Electric Company, who recently returned to this country.

"England is the only country which compares with the United States," Mr. Brofos said. "Germany, with 13 stations, is progressing rapidly. Czecho-Slovakia sees the radio as a means of establishing Prague as one of the outstanding musical and cultural centers of the world. The plan is to broadcast the national opera. Other countries are also considering musical programmes to knit the national spirit and to advance culture."

Installation of receiving sets is still illegal throughout continental Europe generally, but outlaw listening is being practiced on a wide scale, Mr. Brofos continued. The freedom with which the governmental regulations are being ignored, he said, indicated a trend of policy which forecasts acceptance of broadcasting on a systematic plan.

"Licensing of owners of receiving sets, and diversian of part of the proceeds to the broadcasting companies, is an almost universal characteristic of the expansion. Germany has under consideration a plan for renting receiving sets at a low price. Spain makes it profitable for the broadcasting companies by allowing publicity.

"Expected interference between broadcasting stations in the several countries is said to have been one of the reasons for governmental restrictions of radio. Italy has effected a combination of groups which has received the concession for the entire country. It is understood that Spain will follow this procedure.

"England's system centers about British Broadcasting Company which operates 17 stations. A license fee paid to the government by 800,000 people is partly diverted to the company. Holland has seven concerns, but no regular programs are as yet sent out. France has five stations, three of which are operated by the government with a license fee for receivers.

"Norway installed one of the first broadcasting stations on the continent and is considered among the leaders. Sweden with one station erected and two in prospect, has plans for a compehensive system of inter-linked stations. Switzerland and Ireland each have one station, but no organized broadcasting. The first station in Turkey began operation February 1. Hungary, Austria, Denmark and the Baltic States have just begun to awaken to the possibilities of broadcasting.

Fire, Water and Light Commission Turns Over Surplus Money

TO CAMPBELLFORD.

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 19.—At the regular meeting of the Water and Light Commission last week the following motion was carried. Moved by Councillor Caddy and seconded by S. J. Abernethy that the Water and Light Commission turn over six thousand dollars of the electric light surplus money to the town treasurer, Mr. F. W. Wood, the same to form part of the general funds of the town.

At the January meeting, S. J. Abernethy, the elected member of the Commission, was again appointed chairman for the year 1925. He thanked the members for bestowing this honor again on him, and he said he felt that with the some co-operation as was manifested last year, he was sure the board would have a successful year.

The matter of increasing the pumping capacity at the fire hall was discussed, as it was shown that with the extensions of the sewers, a great deal more water will be required. On motion of Mayor Meyers and Councillor Caddy, Mr. Scott, the engineer was instructed to prepare plans for the installation of a new fire pump of suitable size and to have his report ready for the first meeting of the board in March.

The matter of some consumers of the electric light and water being delinquent in payment was discussed and it was shown that some get supplies and are not paying promptly for same. Letters were sent out to those to request payment.

The following accounts were passed and orders drawn on the treasurer for same:

Swedish General Electric Co., $2.84; Campbellford Herald, $29.25; Grand and Toy, Ltd., $3.10; Grant and Thorpe, $352.08; Canadian General Electric Co., Ltd., $245.65; R. N. The 7 1-2 per cent. reduction affects the following charges:

On shipping: Dock dues and additional rent; discharging and extra charges.

On goods: Imports, landing and extra charges, other than rent; exports, charges, other than rent.

Interesting, Colorful Collection Of Words

OTTAWA, Feb. 18.—(Canadian Press).—The name of Canadian post offices given in the annual Postal Guide make up an interesting and colorful collection of words. The most ancient cities of the Orient and many of the famous Biblical cities have their counterparts in Canada and are listed in the Postal Guide. There are 630 Canadian post offices bearing the names "Saint," ranging from the cities of St. John, N.B., and Sault Ste. Marie, to the tiny crossroads stations of rural Quebec.

Authors and poets claim many nominal honors in Canada. Here are some of the names of the places bearing the names of writers: Kipling, Ontario; Kinglake, Ontario; Byron Island, Quebec; Browning, Saskatchewan; Ruskin, L. C. Dickens, Ontario; Bronte, Ontario; Shakespeare, Ontario; Morley, Alberta; Tolstoi, Manitoba; Milton Heights, Ontario, and Scott, Dumas and Drinkwater all in Saskatchewan. The names of Canadian writers are used for some places for example Connor Creek Alta; Parker Ontario; and Campman Saskatchewan.

Some of the names from the west have the ring of optimism and aggression, for example, the following communities are to be found in Saskatchewan: Forward, Excelsior, Success, Conquest, Canuck.

Cities of the old world with counterparts in Canada are: Khartum, Ont.; Khedive, Sask.; Cairo, Ont.; Troy, Ont.; Alexandria, B.C.; Bethesda, Ont.; Athens, Ont.; Beulah, N.B., ,and Bible Hill, N.S.

Some of the unusual names are: Temperance Vale, N.S.; Temperance Ville, Ont.; Spuzzum, Fraser Valley, B.C.; Skookumchuck, B.C.; Sea Dog Cove, N.B.; Penzance, Sask; Eureka, N.S.; Economy, N.S.; Gang Ranch, Cariboo, Nightingale, Alta.; Cinema, B.C.; Half Moon Bay, B.C.

FAMOUS ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL, ENG., IS CONDEMNED AS LIKELY TO COLLAPSE

S. O. S. Sent Out From London for Aid in Saving Burial Place of Noted Sons of British Isles.

Press).—"S. O. S. St. Paul's!"

LONDON, Feb. 19.—(United

To every corner of the globe this message of distress is going forth in an eleventh-hour effort to save London's famous cathedral from collapsing through disintegration.

It is being distributed privately through various channels as an informal appeal. It is an arrow aimed at the heart-strings—and purse-strings—of the thousands of admirers of St. Paul's, of the hundreds of priests who have been admitted to priesthood within its walls, and of others for whom it is an especially sacred memory as the scene of some personal church ceremonial in their lives.

For St. Paul's has been "condemned." The long-familiar pigeons still circle about its nooks and crannies. All unaware that their cherished haunt is believed to be in danger of toppling at any moment, they still flutter down to the great square below to make their wistful plea for food from passersby. But the passersby and other humans are not so brave, and at the latest Sunday service only a half-dozen worshippers ventured to attend. The usual hundreds and thousands of others had been frightened off by reports of the structure's feebleness.

With a little formality and in terms as cold as those he would use in condemning the state of a Whitechapel slum or a Poplar chimney, the surveyor of the city of London has pronounced sentence on the venerable pile. It is, he said, a dangerous structure, requiring that the eight dome-supporting piers be taken down at once and replaced with piers of solid ashlar masonry. His dictum, it has just been revealed, was delivered on Christmas Eve to the Dean and Chapter of the cathedral in the form of a formal notice from the City Corporation.

Shades of the famous architect Wren! This is but another blow to the handiwork of one hitherto hailed one of the world's master designers. It follows an agitation which has been going on for years, to remove from the financial district the metropolis fourteen other Wren churches which have fallen into almost total disuse.

Experts have found that the four bastions which originally helped support the dome have broken away and no longer assist the eight piers. And what is worse, these eight imposing piers, apparently entirely solid, have been found to be filled with rubble. Investigators say the old builders obviously made no attempt even to bed this loose material, with the result that now any day may see collapse of the supports, a general crumbling of the upper structure, and a crash of the dome, weighing 60,000 tons.

Wren may have known of this "fake" pier business along about the end of the seventeenth century, when the building was in progress. It is reported of him that he watched, broken-hearted, the progress of his masterpiece. Much of his grief was known, however, to be due to the scrapping of his plan for a beautiful London, radiating out from St. Paul's and embracing a magnificent sweep of steps from the cathedral to the Thames, over an area now covered by dingy shops, modern office buildings and spooky alleyways.

Wren himself was, in fact, accused of fraud, but successfully defended his connection with the construction. Yet, to Wren must fall the blame of not having thought of motor 'buses hurtling by and subway trains thundering underneath, shaking the streets and buildings. And, apparently, he never dreamed of the disaster threatened by a honeycombing of the subsoil with gigantic sewers, gas pipes and water mains.

The original cost of erecting the cathedral was the equivalent of about $3,634,000. It is estimated by some authorities that nearly $10,000,000 will be required to make it perfectly safe. If an emergency cementing process is resorted to, whereby cement would be pumped into the piers, it is thought that more than $600,000 will be needed for the immediate repairs. More than a sixth of this emergency fund already has been raised through a subscription list started by the "Times," assisted by a broadcasted radio appeal. A number of American firms and individuals are prominent in the list, one New York banking company with a London branch supplementing its $500 contribution with a reference to St. Paul's as an "historical monument to the highest aspirations and ideals of all English-speaking peoples."

American associations with the edifice have a prominent embodiment in a Bust of George Washington, placed in the crypt in 1921 as a presentation from American subscribers. Many distinguished statesmen soldiers and artists are either buried in the crypt or commemorated in the cathedral. Some of the most noteworthy include Nelson, Wellington, Napier, Cornwallis, Abercrombie, Wolseley, Roberts, Wren, Reynolds and Turner.

Workmen already are busily propping up the dome inside the cathedral. It is expected that a larger force and more thorough repairs will be rushed as soon as it is definitely decided whether to remove the dome temporarily or try to effect repairs without doing so.

"Meantime," said a high architectural authority, "it is absolutely certain that every one who passes within a hundred yards of St. Paul's is in danger."

LAKEFIELD FIREMEN HOLDING CARD PARTY

Social Evening Thursday in Memorial Hall.

LAKEFIELD, Feb. 19.—The volunteer fire brigade are holding a large card party on Thursday evening in the Memorial Hall. There will be bridge, five hundred and euchre, with prizes for each. This is the first card party of the sort in the village, and its success is a foregone conclusion. A committee of ladies will have charge of each group, and a committee will look after the refreshments, which will be served at the close of the evening. A large card party which will provide everyone with their own special game has been spoken of several times but the credit of undertaking it goes to that enterprising organization, the fire brigade.

Rev. R. Bamforth, of the Mark Street Methodist Church, Peterboro, was in charge of the services in the local Methodist Church on Sunday; Rev. C. S. Reddick taking his duty in Peterboro.

Visit "The Grove."

Among the visitors from Upper Canada College, Toronto, on Saturday were Messrs. R. and J. Gray, formerly pupils at "The Grove" and very popular both at the school and in the village, and in consequence they received a hearty welcome. Jack, who was one of the stars of the U.C.C. team, played in "The Grove" first team for two seasons.

Sports at Rink.

The Annual Sports' Night at the rink is being run off on Tuesday and promises, besides the races, an exciting new game called Broom-a-loo, played with brooms and a football. A village team and The Grove are entering and it is expected that the game will provide the spectators with both thrills and laughter.

The draw for the local bonspiel will be made this week and the play begun probably on Thursday night. There are two cups to be layed for, the Casement Cup (skips' cup) and the Tanner Cup (the vice skips' cup). There is always a great deal of local interest in these games.

Several rinks from the local curling club expect to take part in the bonspiel at Campbellford this week and it is possible that at least one rink will go to Oshawa.

The collection in aid of the Armenian farm at Geoorgetown, Ontario, was carried on this week and had satisfactory results, in spite of the many calls for help which have come this year to the village.

Personals.

Miss Kathleen E. Simpson of Toronto spent the week-end with her mother, Mrs. T. A. Simpson.

Mrs. A. K. Wakeling of Agincourt is the guest of her sister, Miss Tanner.

Mrs. B. Q. Deuch has returned from a visit to friends in Toronto and Bracebridge.

Poland Jews Are Driven Out Of Their Business

WARSAW, Poland, Feb. 19.—The Jews in Poland have been handed another one in the eye by a recent governmental decree.

In Poland, as in most other European countries, the sale of tobacco, liquors and salt are state monopolies. Throughout the country the Jews for centuries have been licensed to sell these articles. Now, by a parliamentary resolution, the sale of these monopoly goods is to be reserved for war invalids, widows and orphans of soldiers who fought for their country.

During the World War many Jews fought side by side with their Polish national compatriots; but, for the greater part, they were pacifists. According to the Jewish newspapers even those Jews who are war victims are being discriminated against in the granting of licenses to sell under the new regulation.

If the decree is carried out, however, at least forty thousand Jewish families, will be compelled to find other means of obtaining a living.

PRIVY COUNCIL AS FINAL COURT

preted by our own courts and to have the final decision with them."

"May I ask," enquired Joseph Archambault (Chambly and Vercheres) Liberal, "if the constitution of Australia or South Africa is the result of a contract between different provinces, like the British North America Act?"

"They are all cases of federation except Ireland," was the reply, "and we know something about federation in this country."

Mr. MacLean declared that he was convinced that the Supreme Court of Canada should have the final interpretation of questions of our constitution.

"Are We a Nation?"

"Is Canada a sovereign state? Are we a nation? If we are, we should have the right to make our own constitution and have our courts make the final interpretation," Mr. MacLean added.

Mr. Martell disputed the view that Canada was a sovereign nation. No nation could be termed a sovereign nation which lacked the power of sending ambassadors to other nations and receiving ambassadors from these foreign powers.

Mr. MacLean interjected that he understood Canada was considering sending an ambassador to a foreign nation before long.

Mr. Martell said that the British North America Act might be termed a contract between the Federal authorities and the provinces of Canada. Any change in this contract or agreement, without consulting the provinces, would be violation of the agreement, and he was confident that the British government would not entertain such a proposal. The consent of the provinces to the change must first be obtained. The parliament of Canada was not omnipotent insofar as the British North America Act was concerned. The power to amend it lay with the parliament of Great Britain.

Privy Council Justified.

Mr. Martell reviewed the details of the case leading to the judgment of the Privy Council in respect to the Industrial Disputes Act. Mr. MacLean's admission that the Privy Council's judgment had been correct should be sufficient to justify the maintenance of the present connection. The Privy Council committee was made up of men who were trained from their youth in the finest traditions of English law. For the sake of uniformity of interpretation of statutory and common laws throughout the Empire, it was desirable that the right of appeal should be kept. The great bulk of people in Canada had never exhibited any desire to dispense with the right of appeal to the King and Council. Moreover, the contract as it stood today could not be altered without the consent of all constituent parties. He felt that Mr. MacLean's moion tended to break down the British connection.

L. S. R. Moran (Liberal, St. Hyacinthe-Rouville) said he was in accord with Mr. MacLean ,but differed with him in the method he had selected by which to amend the British North America Act. From a constitutional point of view it was agreed that the British parliament would amend the British North America Act whenever requested, but as a practical method, that was insufficient.

No alteration of any importance, maintained Mr. Moran, could be made to the British North America Act unless it met with the approval of the provinces which compose the federation. Any proposed amendment should be the subject of a conference with the various provincial representatives.

No Demand For It.

"There is no demand for this legislation," declared T. L. Church (Conservative, Toronto North). He was suprised that any gentleman coming from a public ownership city would move such a resolution.

"We are a nation in name only," he stated. Canada was not a sovereign state. He believed it would be a sorry day for this country if appeals to the Privy Council were abolished. That judicial body was one of the links which bound Canada to the Motherland.

The appointment of a Canadian ambassador at Washington was also opposed by Mr. Church. In his belief the author of the Industrial Investigation Disputes act never had in mind that it should be operated outside of Dominion fields and as an invasion of provincial and municipal rights. The decision of the Privy Council declaring this act ultra-vires of the Federal Parliament was sound.

"Any proposal affecting the constitution of Canada, is by its nature very important," stated Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice.

J. S. Woodsworth (Labor, Winnipeg Centre) commenting on the Privy Council decision, said that men living in Canada were best fitted to deal with the problems of this country. Mr. Woodsworth moved an amendment to the motion by which it would be required that parliament must "first obtain consent of all the provinces of Canada."

The Minister of Justice said that while it was much fairer than the original motion, he could not accept it as the provinces had the right to be asked before a request was made directly to the Crown.

Sir Henry Drayton (Conservative, West York) agreed with the Minister of Justice. He doubted if Canada would be advanced to any degree by accepting the proposed motion. There was no definite proposition to submit to the provinces, and he questioned whether or not the matter was of sufficient importance to be even considered.

Others Interested.

The Minister of Justice stated that he had no desire to leave the impression that he believed there should be no changes to the Act; but those changes could not be made at the will and request of the Dominion only, but "those who are interested just as much as the Dominion parliament must give their consent, and be consulted." A conference was to be called of the provincial representatives in connnection with Senate reform and other matters.

"Is it the intention of the government," asked Hon. Arthur Meighen, "to submit some scheme to the approaching conference, looking to the giving to Canada of the power to amend its constitution?"

"I think this resolution is one of the subjects which might properly come before that conference," replied the Minister of Justice.

The British North America Act was of our own making, said Mr. Lapointe, and if confederation was an agreement was it possible for the body which resulted from that agreement to change the constitution without consulting the constituent parties. The other British Dominions having power to amend their constitutions made provision for that power at the time of the unions, but not so with Canada.

Dominion's Charter .

The British North America Act was not only the charter of the Dominion of Canada, but also of the provinces which received their powers from it?' Other provinces came in later, and I submit that they have the same rights and the same powers, and that they should also be consulted regarding any change in the British North America Act." Mr. Lapointe quoted Sir Wilfred Laurier and Sir Robert Borden who, in a debate in 1907, on a proposed amendment to the Act, had agreed that all provinces should be consulted. A former minister of justice, Hon. C. J. Doherty, had carried on correspondence with all the provinces in this matter, and all had felt that they should be consulted before any change was made.

Women Should Propose To Men, Says Minister

CHICAGO, Feb. 19.— (United Press).—A male charm school with weekly marriage classes devoted to the study of love, courtship and wedded bliss is the latest addition to the night course curriculum of the Chicago Y.M.C.A.

The enrollment numbers upwards of a hundred marriage candidates, ranging from flaming youth to baldpated middle-age. Dr. John H. Williams, Chicago pastor, is in charge of the connubial felicity class.

It is up to the ladies to do the proposing, Dr. Williams believes. He thinks men are becoming too dull and selfish to be sufficiently alluring during courtship.

"The man is usually so callous and impersonal during courtship that the girl wonders what he'll be after marriage," the pastor declared in one of his lectures. "Women are not to be blamed if they are afraid to take the risk of marriage."

The pastor scored the feminist movement for implanting false ideals in the present generation.

"We are getting soft in this country, both men and women," he asserted. "That is why so many are afraid to get married."

He lauded marriage as "the economic, social, intellectual, and religious union that brings the greatest possible happiness to the human race.

The philosophy of love, heredity, birth control, eugenics, and sex questions are included in the Y.M.C.A. mariage course which runs six weeks.

MOTOR IN BERLIN

BERLIN (United Press).—Berlin is at last turning to the motor traffic, though the number of motorcars used is still smaller than in an average American city. Berlin, with its more than four million inhabitants, had on July, 1923, only 21,153 motor vehicles which included everything from motor lorries and trucks to smallest one-seaters and limousines. Up to the end of 1924 this number had more than doubled. Berlin now "boasts" of 44,0000 motor vehicles. There are eight motor accidents per day on the average, and in the course of last year 84 people were killed and 1,784 injured.

FROZEN BODY FOUND.

MONTREAL, February 19 (Canadian Press). — Almost hidden beneath the snow, the body of an unidentified man, who had apparently been frozen to death, was found by two workmen yesterday morning in a field on Fabre Street.

The men were engaged in marking out a plot.

There were no marks of violence on the corpse.

DOING GOOD WORK.

The annual meeting of the Peterboro Fish and Game Protective Association tomorrow night should be largely attended.

Since its inception several years ago, the association has been successful in accomplishing a great deal toward the conservation of the fish and game resources of the district, and the education of the public to the desirability of obeying the law.

Every man in the district who enjoys an outing with rod and line or who appreciates the enjoyment offered by the hunting facilities in this section of Ontario should be a member of the organization and eager to do his part in seeing that the game and fish are protected against poachers and out-of-season marauders who care nothing for the future.

It is an open secret that unless such steps as have already been taken are vigorously followed that the fishing resources of the waters in the Peterboro district will be exhausted, and the effect of such a development would be felt not only among sportsmen but among business men as well.

Much of the tourist traffic that comes this way is the result of the reputation held by this district as a fisherman's country.

Once let that reputation be lost and many tourists will find some other place to spend their summer holidays.

A CORNWALL DEMONSTRATION.

Mr. Nickle's statement that it is almost impossible to enforce the Ontario Temperance Act effectively in many centres because of the pressure of opinion against the measure, has been illustrated by the agitation in Cornwall over the dismissal by the Town Council of Chief of Police Filion.

The Cornwall Police Chief was suspended by the Police Committee last week and discharged by the Council on Monday night, the incident that led up to this action being his refusal to allow bail to a prominent citizen who had been locked up on a charge of violating the O. T. A.

Yesterday a deputation representing the prohibition union of Cornwall waited upon the Commissioner of Provincial Police, urging General Williams to find a place for Filion on the Provincial force, and declaring that he had been dismissed because of his zeal in enforcing the Ontario Temperance Act.

If the deputation were correct in their charge, where does that leave the situation?

If the feeling against the enforcement of the O. T. A. in Cornwall is strong enough to compel the Town Council to get rid of its Chief of Police because he was carrying out his duty, is there anything more needed to prove the truth of Mr. Nickle's assertion that it is most difficult to enforce the measure in districts where opinion is against the Act?

CIVIC FINANCING.

Brantford City Council, with an overdraft from last year of $85,000, has adopted the plan of converting the deficit into a twentyyear debenture, instead of taking care of it in this year's taxation.

The latter course would have meant a heavy burden upon the people of Brantford, and the method chosen is perhaps preferable, but it is not discharging the liability; but merely passing it on to the ratepayers of the future.

The whole affair stresses the need of more attention to the important problems of civic financing than it has been receiving if the credit of Ontario municipalities is to be maintained at a high standard.

It is admittedly a difficult problem to properly direct the affairs of a municipality under present-day conditions, and, therefore, the need of better management and more efficient civic government should impress itself upon the most indifferent citizen.

We can no longer afford to be apathetic about such matters.

When it becomes necessary for Brantford to burden its ratepayers of years to come with a debt of $85,000 contracted in one year by its City Council, and for Peterboro to take care of an overdraft that represents about a mill on the dollar, it is time for ratepayers everywhere to decide that their own interest demands that they pay some attention to civic affairs and the selection of the civic government.

Civic financing of today calls for business methods and prudent and careful management.

MR. NICKLE'S SPEECH.

It is undoubtedly the case that the earnest speech of Hon. W. F. Nickle in explanation of the Government's stronger beer amendment will have a quieting effect upon many people who have been dubious about the change.

Mr. Nickle's reputation is that of a man who has never placed political advantage before conviction; his record indeed shows that he has not hesitated to take issue with his party when there was a difference of opinion, and even to the extent of resigning from Parliament.

There is reason to believe, too, that he has made an energetic, honest and zealous effort to enforce the Ontario Temperance Act since assuming the office of Attorney-General.

When a man with such a record, therefore, declares emphatically that the opposition to the Ontario Temperance Act in many districts of Ontario makes it almost impossible to adequately enforce the measure, and that in his opinion the Ontario Temperance Act is doomed to destruction unless something is done to relieve the stress, the citizen who is not an extremist either way will find food for thought in the statement.

Had the opinion been uttered by some politicians it would have made little impression, but coming from the Attorney-General who has had charge of the enforcement of the Act and whose reputation for fairness and honesty of purpose has been without a blemish, the speech cannot be lightly dismissed.

Mr. Nickle's effort will make easy the task of the rank and file on the Government side in supporting the O. T. A. amendment and will do much to convince many people in the Province that the change should not be condemned before it has been tried on its merits.

ANOTHER IDOL OVERTHROWN.

There was a day when a man could enter a restaurant, hang up his hat and coat, survey the menu, and order for lunch what he fancied. This was considered, in such places as Chicago and Terre Haute, Ind., as being proof positive of the liberty of the individual and the advantages of residence within the confines of the U. S. A., and doubtless it was so, says the Montreal Star.

But today a shadow is cast over the picture. A gentleman named Stivers, who, it may be reasonably presumed, suffers from indigestion when he consumes sauerkraut, proposes to introduce a bill into the Legislature calling for the de-alcoholization of sauerkraut. It appears that Mr. Stivers is deeply concerned as to the possibility that some day somebody somewhere may so far forget his good American manners as to eat so much sauerkraut that he will become hilarious through the alcohol it contains. Hence this legal effort to uphold the constitution — of the consumers of pickled and fermented cabbage.

Now we in Canada, who, should we so desire, may eat sauerkraut unheeding what the world thinks, may be prone to regard this attempt at restrictive legislation as a foolish move. But we ought rather to consider whether it is not a subtle step towards the rectification of the food standards of the North American Continent. The day of the pretzel is surely over. Even corned beef and cabbage has had its day in many parts. With the increased appetite for knowledge and the consequently decreased time for the consumption of necessary nourishment, the cultivation of some condensed form of feeding is clearly indicated as a step in social evolution. And if that be so, what could be more in keeping with the march of progress than to eliminate from the daily menu such exceedingly bulky material as sauerkraut? There is often more in these spectacularly jocular reforms than meets the eye or offends the nose.

SHOULD READ HIS HISTORY.

A paper in the Western States reports an after-dinner speaker as saying: "The love of justice and the passion for freedom are distinctly characteristics of our land, so marked that we can well claim them as the outcome of the development of our national life."

It may be that there is no particular harm in that United States speaker telling his audience that freedom and justice started to exist when the ink dried on the Declaration of Independence; if he or his hearers got any satisfaction from the idea, if they felt better after hearing it, then it may have served a good purpose for a few minutes at least.

The danger is that some person who knows the history of justice and of parliamentary institutions may take that orator to task some day and tell him he is short-visioned or poorly informed. United States has its present parliamentary system, its laws and freedom because the men who made them came from Anglo-Saxon stock, from a people who, even before accurate history was ever written, were devising ways and means to settle dispute, deal out justice and prevent oppression.

If this speaker who is just quoted will take the trouble to turn back history, he will have to go farther than Runnymede or the Bill of Rights in Britain; he will have to leave that country and go to the heart of the peninsula that parts the Baltic from the northern seas, around which dwelt the Engles, Jutes and Saxons, and the time of his mental visit would be at least one thousand years before Christopher Columbus discovered United States.

Away back there, before the conquest of Britain, he would find that a family was held accountable for the wrong of one of its members. Order and law were thus made to rest in each little group of people upon the blood-bond which knit its families together. Each kinsman was his kinsman's keeper, bound to protect him from wrongdoing, and to suffer with him if wrong were done.

Again this American orator might let his fancy turn to the village "moots," or councils, where the land was allotted to families, where grievances were adjusted, and strife with strife of farmer was considered. One historian has well said of this scene, "It is with a reverence such as is stirred by the sight of head-waters of some mighty river that one looks back to these village moots of Friesland or Sleswick. It was here that England learned to be the mother of parliaments. It was in these tiny knots of farmers that the men from whom Englishmen were to spring learned the worth of public opinion, of public discussion. It was here they learned that discussion is persuasion, and persuasion is force."

There was the folk-moot, the village-moot and, above all, the hundred-moot, and in all of them the principle of fair representation was preserved. In each the priests proclaimed silence, groups of freemen stood around, and all matters to be adjusted were discussed. There was the shaking of spears in assent, and the clashing of shields for applause, and in the end the "ayes" or "nays" of the assembly decided the verdict. It was away back in those settlements, the history of which has never been fully recorded, that the Anglo-Saxon people learned and put into practice the idea of the people governing themselves. The discovery was not made, as the orator of the Western States would have us believe, when the Declaration of Independence became an established fact. That declaration itself is based on British law, on the ideas that were struggling for expression, even in a crude way, years before there was an Englishman in England and a whole succession of centuries before the none too modest after-dinner speaker rose in the Western States to urge his claim.—London Advertiser.

A THOUGHT.

WHAT IS SUCCESS?

He has achieved success, who has lived well, laughed often, and loved much; who has gained the respect of intelligent men and the love of little children; who has filled his niche and accomplished his task, whether by an improved poppy, a perfect poem, or a rescued soul; who has never lacked appreciation of earth's beauty, or failed to express it; who has always looked for the best in others and given the best he had; whose life was an inspiration and whose memory a benediction.

WINNIPEG LIVESTOCK

WINNIPEG, Feb. 18.—Arrivals, 600 cattle and calves; 4,800 hogs; 16 sheep and lambs.

Demand improved on the cattle market this morning, and all available supplies were readily absorbed at prices about 50 cents above prevailing quotations of last week.

The hog market reflected a weaker undertone, thick smooths selling at $10.25 and select bacons $11.27 1-2.

The few lambs disposed of on the sheep and lamb market sold around $12.75. Trade was listless.

MONTREAL GRAIN.

MONTREAL, Feb. 18.—The export trade in Canadian grain here today was again extremely dull. The domestic trade was also inactive, but prices were firm. Ontario No. 3 white oats were quoted at 66 cents, and No. 4 grade at 64 cents per bushel, ex store.

The feature of the egg market was the weakness and prices scored a further decline of two cents per dozen and the prospects are that they will sell lower. An easier feeling developed in butter and prices suffered fractional recessions. The cheese market was quiet, with fodder made No. 1 white and colored goods quoted at 20 1-4 to 20 1-2 cents per pound and No. 2 grade at 19 1-4 to 19 1-2 cents per pound.

Crop beans are now selling at $2.75 to $2.80 per bushel.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Feb. 18.—Corn took the lead in the grain markets today and closed strong at 1 5-8 to 2 5-8 cents net advance. May 130 1-2 to 130 5-8. A big falling off in the movement of corn to primary centres attracted much attention, and there was talk current that fifty per cent of seed corn is worthless. Wheat moved up with corn, finishing at a range varying from 1-8 cent decline to 3-4 cent gain, May 185 to 185 1-4 and July 155 3-4 to 155 7-8; with oats unchanged to 5-8 cent higher, and provisions unchanged to 25 cents up.

EGG PRICES.

OTTAWA, Feb. 18.—Receipts in Western Ontario are showing a considerable increase. The demand for arrivals is good and the quality is reported good. American fresh firsts last Monday were being laid down Regina and Saskatoon 50 to 53, but since then the American market has declined considerably. On the basis of Chicago spot price today, 32 1-2, the cost of American fresh firsts laid down Toronto and Montreal would be about 37 1-2 cents.

Toronto—Lower. Jobbing, specials 53, extras 50, firsts 48, seconds 44.

Montreal—Unchanged.

STERLING RATES

MONTREAL, Feb. 18.—Sterling exchange rates were quoted here today as follows:

Sterling demand $4.76 1-8.
Sterling cables $4.77 1-2.

WILSON REMANDED ON ROBBERY CHARGE

Accused With Others of Stealing $42,000 From Royal Bank.

VICTORIA, B.C., Feb. 18.—Ross C. Wilson, charged with complicity with the $42,000 robbery from the Royal Bank of Canada, Nanaimo branch, was formally remanded before Col. J. H. McMullen, Superintendent of the Provincial Police yesterday, in a session which lasted less than two minutes.

The accused heard the charge that of robbery, read to him, and was remanded for eight days. His next appearance, said police authorities, will be at Nanaimo.

As the robbery of the Royal Bank took place in Nanaimo, the preliminary hearing must take place at that point. The future disposition of the case will not be known until the outcome of the preliminary hearing in the case of Watson and of the others held in connection with the affair.

Of the four men not yet extradited to Canada, Clarence Shieveley has been sentenced in an American court to serve imprisonment on a prior offence and his trial on the Canadian charge must wait the expiry of that term.

Rigley, Stone and Johnson, the remaining three accused, are now fighting extradition proceedings in Seattle.

LABOR ANXIOUS ABOUT ONTARIO

favored five per cent. beer. He could not see for the life of him, he said, how an increase of two per cent, in beer content was going to stop boot legging. Mr. Nickle, he said, had always been considered the "good boy" of the cabinet, but after his address in the debate, he was sure he was. He did not think that three per cent. of those who voted for the O.T.A. ever expected any such change in the Act as that proposed.

Clark Changes Opinion.

J. A. McCausland asked Mr. Clark if he was in favor of five per cent. beer, to which the latter replied, "I am not in favor of five per cent. beer now, because the people voted in favor of the O.T.A."

Mr. Clark praised the O.T.A., saying it had improved conditions a hundred per cent., and that, after all, there were only about ten real wet ridings in the province out of 111. In Toronto, every Tory ward organization had taken as its cry, "Beer, Beer." In five years the Attorney-General by using the methods he has used for the last few months, could have cleaned up this province right," said Mr. Clark. More important, however, was the question if the spoken word of a public man was not to be trusted. "What is a man worth if his word is not good?" asked Mr. Clark, arguing in support of the Liberal amendment accusing the Premier of breach of pledge.

R. H. Kemp (Lincoln) Progressive moved the adjournment of the debate.

CUT OUT THE WORRY

Diet is Useless to Gain Weight If Mind is Worried.

Some people may be thin because they are too active. One of Mrs. Mann's neighbors was like that.

He worked in an office, and though the position he held was not the most important in the organization he felt that it was, at least, and worked under too great a tension.

For this kind of people there is no chance of gaining weight through a diet unless they can arrange to rest more or work less, or dispense with the feeling that the weight of the universe rests upon their shoulders.

Nervous indigestion often results in cases like this. Then the stomach cannot digest food, and the more one eats the worse the condition becomes.

In such a case it is better to rest frequently and to eat very simple foods, and only as much as can be digested of milk, vegetables, bread, cereals, eggs and fruit.

If milk is the only thing that can be taken without distress, then milk should be the only food, but in such cases a physician should probably be consulted.

STATE NEEDS CASH.

Valentine Social.

The Sunday School Hall of St. Thomas' Church was well filled on Monday evening for the Valentine social, held under the auspices of the A.Y.P.A., Mr. R. Stone, President, occupying the chair.

The fact that the members of the young peoples' organization had donned costumes suitable to the occasion added considerably to the interest and enjoyment which the evening provided.

The old plantation songs rendered by Mr. A. H. Barnes' class were most appropriate since the young men were "darkies," both as to complexion and make-up, for the time being. The programme was as follows:

Chorus—"Old Virginia," by members of Mr. Barnes' class.

Reading—Miss Pearl Lamb.

Solo—"The Englishman," by Mr. R. Stone. Encore, "Turmit Hoeing," comic.

Reading—Miss Gertrude Gray.

Solo—Mr. Fred. Wells.

Chorus—"Swanee River," by Mr. Barnes' class.

FIRST PICTURE OF W. E. D. STOKES IN COURT

W. E. D. Stokes and his secretary, Miss Marion Brophy, snapped during Stokes, trial in Chicago courts on the charge of conspiring to defame the character of Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes. Co-defendants are Hattie Johnson and Robert Lee, negroes.

Reading—Miss M. B. Turner, B.A.

Solo—Mr. Fred. Wells.

The judges for the costumes, which were of the "old-time" variety, included Mrs. H. J. Grassett, Miss Annie Armstrong and Mr. Ronald Rutchison. Mrs. L. Morton and Miss M. Christie were so equally good in their quaint, old-fashioned dresses, looking as though they belonged to the early Victorian era, it was found impossible to make any distinction between them when making the award for best dressed lady, so the prize was duplicated and each was presented with a large box of bon-bons.

Mr. T. Harkness, whose loud-checked trousers and vest, swallow-tail coat, flaunting green tie, silk hat and cane, left no doubt as to the character he represented, was given the prize (pearl-handled pocket knife) for the best gentleman's costume.

The feeling of genial good-fellowship which a Saint Valentine gathering rightly inspires, found further expression during the social hour at the close when refreshments were served by the members of the A.Y.P.A. Total receipts were $25.00.

Entertainment.

A special programme was given in the Young People's League of the Methodist Church on Monday evening, when the "Wide Awakes" group of Canadian-Girls-In-Training presented a dramatization of the Bible story of "Esther," the basement being well filled for the occasion.

As far as possible an Oriental setting was arranged for the stage by means of the draperies and large palm in the background, the crimson-covered platform on which the King's throne was placed, couches over which Eastern-looking rugs were thrown, the shaded lights, etc. The footlights, turned on when the rest of the room was darkened, helped in showing up the costumes admirably. This adjunct to the platform had not previously been used when presenting programmes in the basement, but will doubtless frequently do service on future occasions.

The regular devotional period of the group was carried out at the opening, the President, Jean Burnham, being in the chair, and the Secretary, Margaret Howard, also having a seat at the table. Miss Estelle Hetherington presided at the piano during the evening, the musical numbers while the stage settings were being changed between the acts and during the progress of the drama, adding much to the enjoyment of the occasion.

A recitation, "Fuel and Church Union," by Jack Stinson; vocal solo, by Miss M. Needham, and a piano duet, by Misses Hazel McMahon and Elsie Spence, called forth warm applause from the audience.

The official C.G.I.T. programme calls for the dramatization of Bible stories as one effective means of impressing the facts upon the minds of the 'teen age girls, Elizabeth Irwin Miller being the author of the book in use for such study. Monday evening's programme was the third occasion when the local group has prepared one of the Scripture stories in this manner, "Ruth" and "The Good Samaritan" being the two previously presented.

The characters for "Esther" were:

King Ahasuerus — Marjorie Sayles.

Queen Esther—Marie Kenyon.

Haman—Jean Burnham.

Mordecai—Etta Peel.

Maidens — Pearl Davis, Elsie Spence and Alvira Davis.

Princes—Hazel McMahon, Eleanor Fallis and Jean Stinson.

Chamberlains — Margaret Howard, Flossie McMahon and Elma Davis.

Pages—Bryar Edmunds and Mary Burnham.

The costumes were particularly well carried out as to detail, and added much to the general effect of the entire presentation of the Bible narrative. A brief outline of the story was given by the Mentor of the group before the drama was proceeded with, in order to have the main facts fresh in mind as the five scenes were cleverly acted out. The feast at the King's palace at Shushan; the deposal of Vashti; the arrival of Mordecai with Esther, "the maiden, fair and beautiful," whom he had brought up as his own daughter; the coming of the other maidens, and the appearance of all before the capricious monarch for his approval; the choice of Esther as queen, and the placing of the royal crown upon her head; the jealousy of Haman, and the sending forth of the decree ordering that "all Jews, both young and old, be killed upon the thirteenth day of the twelfth month"; the plea of the Jewish queen for her life and the lives of her people; the downfall of Haman, and the exaltation of Mordecai as prime minister in his stead; the sending out of the second decree allowing the Jews to defend their lives and property, so they "had honor and joy and feasting," in place of death, were all portrayed as the drama unfolded and the story reached its happy climax.

The pastor, Rev. Mr. Howard, expressed the pleasure and appreciation of the audience in the entertainment provided, and the singing of Joseph Scriver's hymn, ::What a Friend We Have in Jesus," brought the evening to a close.

HAVE KIDNEYS EXAMINED BY YOUR DOCTOR

Take Salts to Wash Kidneys If Back Pains You or Bladder Bothers.

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids, to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; can not injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

GUIDE TO MANNERS 3 CENTURIES AGO

Books on Etiquette Were Published Long Before the Victorian Age.

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 19.—(Associated Press).—Letters and other documents dealing with manners and customs of daily life in the 17th century which came to light recently tend to show that it was customary in those days for "persons of quality" to have sets of their own spoons, knives and forks which they took with them when invited out. These papers were of particular interest just at this time to collectors of antiques in connection with an addition made recently to the British Museum. This was the earliest hall-marked table fork known, engraved with the crest of Manners and Montagu, 1632. About the same time a silver spoon of identical hall-mark and crest was taken to Haddon Hall.

Mention of such a set is made in the will of Mrs. Katherine Ridgeway, dated May 9, 1627, which was among the documents destroyed in a fire some time ago at the Four Courts, Dublin. The will says:

"I bequeath to the Right Honorable the Lord Chancellor my little seller of chrystal bottles item. I give and bequeath to my Ladye of Elye my guilt spoone with the forks and penknife suitable to it." Mrs. Ridgeway was widow of George Ridgeway, secretary of the Irish Council, and the Lord Chancellor was Adam Loftus, Lord Loftus of Ely.

Books on etiquette and table manners were far from being the prerogative of the Victorian age, it is revealed, as in 1663 there was published in London a book entitled "The Accomplished Lady's Rich Closet of Rarities," in which the following rules are laid down:

"A gentlewoman being at table abroad or at home must observe to keep her body straighte, and lean not by any means upon her elbowes —nor by ravenous gesture discover a voracious appetite. Talke not when you have meate in your mouth; and do not smacke like a pig—nor eat speenemeat so hot that tears stand in your eyes.

"It is very uncourtly to drink so large a draught that your breath is almost gone, and you are forced to blow strongly to recover yourself. Throwing down your liquor as into a funnel is an action fitter for a juggler than a gentlewoman. In carving at your own table distribute the best pieces first, and it will appear very decent and comely to use a fork; so touch no meat without it."

Reference to the fork was of particular interest to the museum authorities, for those present-day indispensable instruments had not then been long introduced, it appears.

Forks were first imported from Italy, and their use in England at the time was considered pedantic and laughable. One writer of the time speaks of a silver fork as "being used of late by some of our spruce gallants," which did not tend to make the fork popular at all among certain sets.

Surrey Residents Would Close Brooklands Track

WEYBRIDGE, Eng., Feb. 19.—Residents of the very select neighborhood of Weybridge in Surrey long ago protested to the authorities regarding the noise and smell which they have to endure because of the proximity of the famous Brooklands automobile racing track.

These protests so far have fallen upon deaf ears, but the last has not yet been heard of, for the owners of the St. George's Hill estate and ten Weybridge and Byfleet residents have served a write upon the Brooklands Automobile Racing Club with a view to having the track closed on the grounds that noise of racing constitute a nuisance, destroys the peace of the rural neighborhood and causes serious deterioration to property.

For 18 years the majority of airplane and auto experiments and tests have been made at Brooklands and it is claimed that an automobile passes through stiffer tests here withing 24 hours than is possible in a full year on roads. This threat of legal action has not deterred club officials, who have arranged full program race meeting for the ensuing year.

ORILLIA CHURCH DISAVOWS UNION

ORILLIA, Feb. 18.—By a majority of 548, the Orillia Presbyterian Church decided to remain out of the Union. The announcement was made at a congregational meeting yesterday evening by the returning officer, T. G. King, that 917 ballots were cast. The vote stood 732 against Union and 184 for. There was one spoiled ballot. Both sides worked very energetically and nearly every available vote was polled. A resolution was passed by the congregation declaring its intention of remaining as part of the continuing Presbyterian Church, and instructing the session to at once take the necessary steps toward affiliation.

The resolution also expressed the utmost confidence in the minister, Rev. N. H. McGillivray, and endorsed his action and fair-mindedness throughout the campaign. A most cordial invitation was extended to all to sink all differences that may have existed and remain with the continuing Orillia Presbyterian Church, which for well nigh three-quarters of a century has held a place of leadership and usefulness in the community. Some prominent Unionists, however, at a meeting held in St. James's Parish House last Friday evening, anticipating that the vote would be against them, decided to go out next Sunday to the Methodist Church.

ELIHU ROOT AT 80, RIPE IN WISDOM

Keeping Busy His Formula of Happiness—An American Who Stands To-day Among the World's Great Men.

By GEORGE BRITT.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—Elihu Root, born Feb. 15, 1845, has reached his eightieth birthday.

Eighty years old, to almost anyone's thinking, means a feeble wreck, rocking in front of the fire or dozing in the sunshine, babbling of trivial memories, sated with life and ready for the benediction.

But Mr. Root stll has not had enough of living. He races through a crowded schedule which men 30 years younger might find overpowering.

He speaks from the knowledge of his seasoned maturity when he advises:

"As men grow older and live less exclusively in the future and measurably more in the past, they learn what inestimable wealth has he who, blessed by a host of memories, preserves the generous and noble standards created in him without his knowledge.

"There are millions of working men with shorter hours and more money who don't know what to do with their time and are unhappy and discontented, more so now than when their hours were filled with labor, because they have no capacity for extracting happiness from their surroundings. There are thousands of rich men who don't know what to do with their riches, who found that the chief effect of having so much money is that their children are going to the devil because they never acquired the capacity to extract happiness from their surroundings except through spending money."

Happiness is to be sought, he tells one, "through the spiritual reenthronement of those powers of civilization that depend upon what men really are, upon the heart and soul and character of men."

Keeping busy seems to be his own private formula for happiness. On birthdays it is different. Then he can be found usually in his library of a morning, taking a walk in the afternoon and celebrating at a little dinner with his family in the evening. If the day is stormy, he puts on a heavy overcoat and walks anyhow.

It is a little more than 25 years since he became President McKinley's secretary of war, going, as he says, "to perform a lawyer's duty upon the call of the greatest of all our clients, the government of our country." He had then ahead of him service as secretary of state and senator, and a host of distinguished accomplishments in and out of office.

All those things before 1915 when he reached the limiting age of threescore years and ten! Since that age, however, he presided over the New York constitutional convention, was president of the American Bar Association, was special ambassador to Russia, drafted the plan for the Permanent Court of International Justice for the League of Nations, and gave his active attention to dozens of organizations and movements as president, director or trustee.

Blot out the mental picture of an octogenarian and look at Elihu Root as he may be seen some night of every week and several nights on a normal week.

A straight, shapely, vigorous, genial patrician in evening clothes, he sits at the head of a banquet table. There is no senile fussiness over the good food, no trembling of the match as he lights his long cigar, no hands to the ear as he follows the speakers, no implied begging of odds on account of his years. There is a delicacy in his features, accented by the suggestion of "bangs" in his close-cut, white-gray hair, but it is the keen delicacy of steel.

He speaks with fire and pointedness and humor. He fences with the toastmaster in extemporaneous quips, reminisces perhaps about what Doug Fairbanks once said when they met at the Hague, reveals a speaking knowledge of whatever is the occasion of the meeting, be it medicine, art, education, sport or what not. In the end he gets around to real ideas of originality, depth and consequence.

A year and a half ago England was eager for the honor of receiving him as ambassador, not because of his age nor in spite of it, but for the distinction and wisdom the years had brought to this perennially vigorous spirit.

Such is the man to-day about whom President Roosevelt remarked years ago, "The greatest man that has arisen on either side of the Atlantic in my lifetime."

THREE FACTORS IN CITIZENSHIP

Heart Motivates Conduct, Says High School Teacher at Marmora.

MARMORA, Feb. 19.—The Young People's League of the Methodist Church met on Tuesday evening this week. The main feature of the evening was an address on Citizenship by Mr. Hann, acting principal of the Continuation School.

He commenced by asking the question, "If you could control a person's heart or control his conduct, which would you choose?"

In answer, he said: "The heart, because it is the motive power behind conduct."

In school, in church, in many places, we hear the question, "How do you feel about it?"

The answers may be, "Oh, it is hard," or "I'd like some one else to do it." But we have to take the responsibility of hard work and not be satisfied with the pleasures and fun. Our work never measures up higher than our feelings toward it.

In Winnipeg, during the war, in an election, the speaker found the official officers in a certain booth were a Slav, a Roumanian, a Ruthenian and a Russian, none of them residents of Canada over six years. On inquiring the reason of this, he found that many of the citizens would not assume the responsibility at these times and those who worked were those who were willing. At any election, every citizen ought to feel his responsibility to do the right.

Conduct was the second point in good citizenship. Our conduct should be such that all the people would know what our decision would be. Unfortunately we all have propensities toward doing what we know is not the best. As St. Paul says, "For the good that I would I do not, but the evil which I would not that I do."

The third point was meeting the "challenge for the best." He said he did not keep the laws of the land because they were prohibitive. He didn't keep from stealing, etc., because the law forbade it, but because there was nothing in his life that tended that way.

We have the challenge of the best in front of us. Each citizen has the chance of choosing the right in opposition to following party or the influences of others. Again he emphasized the three points essential to good citizenship.

ABSOLUTE FAITH IN INTEGRITY OF HON. W. F. NICKLE

Warns Prohibition Workers to Reserve Criticism of Ontario Government.

CENSURE TOO SOON.

Rev. R. E. Knowles Disassociates Himself From All Imputations of Dishonor.

TORONTO, Feb. 18. — A appeal to the prohibition workers to reserve their criticism of the Ontario government until they have had an opportunity to learn the full motive back of the amendment to the Ontario Temperance Act, and to understand the nature of the pressure which was brought to bear, was made at Massey Hall last night by the Rev. R. E. Knowles, in connection with the mass meeting of the annual meeting of the Ontario Prohibition Union.

Mr. Knowles pointed out that he had known Hon. W. F. Nickle, Attorney-General of Ontario, for a great number of years, and he had absolute confidence in the honor and integrity of that official. And while he could not state definitely that the amendment of the O.T.A. was a move made with the direct object of saving the whole act from destruction, he threw out a warning that such might have been the case and that accordingly it was too soon to strat hurling shafts of censure and criticism at the government.

"For one thing I wish to disassociate myself with one feature that has been the dominant note at this convention," Rev. Mr. Knowles continued, "and that is the censure that has been hurled at the government."

"We, as a temperance organisation, should extinguish those impulsive imputations of dishonour, and breach of faith, and all such expressions which are being so freely used to-day. We should cease using them until we know more about the exact situation. We can never know all that is behind the attitude of the Government, and it semes to me that we are inclined to be too severe, when perhaps we do not know anything about the real situation. You must not judge a Government by its unfinished work."

RED ROSE COFFEE "is good coffee"

Value Of Propaganda In Support Canadian Artists

WINNIPEG, Feb. 19.—(Canadian Press).—The value of propaganda in support of Canadian artists and the artists of one's own city was discussed by Miss Eva Clare, in an address given to the women's Press Club.

Miss Clare thought the deliberate efforts of a group of far-sighted musicians in an eastern Canadian city in giving its artists equal opportunities to be heard in concert, with foreign artists, was now bearing fruit. The public of that city and as a result of the influence, the people far beyond it, were being trained to value its own talent and this encouragement was creating a musical atmosphere. Such things might be done here, Miss Clare believed, she referred to the action of the Women's Musical club of Winnipeg in bringing three Canadian artists this winter, and to an article by Miss Eva Gautrier in which the noted singer intimated her success was appreciated less in her native Canada than anywhere else she had sung; also to the lack of enthsuiasm shown in the Dominion towards other of her artists who are recognized as outstanding on the Metropolitan opera roster and elsewhere. A little survey, said Miss Clare sometimes brought forward, hitherto unknown or quite overlooked musical material. She mentioned the research work being done in negro spirituals and Ukrainian folk songs.

BEAUTY FOR BREAKFAST

By CYNTHIA GREY.

When are women most beautiful?

"When they're out of doors, and there's no wind . . . to make their noses blue," C. R. W. Nevinson said the other day.

And Nevinson ought to know, for he's the most famous painter of beautiful women in the world today.

"When they're in evening clothes," contradicted Whitelaw, the English black-and-white artist.

"When they're young," said someone else.

And so it went. . . .

But everybody knows when women are at their worst.

That's no riddle at all.

For breakfast time finds nine women out of ten looking like cartoons of themselves.

They are in their drab working clothes. They have not yet put the powder on their noses . . . or got the sleepy look out of their eyes.

No wonder that breakfast is the saddest meal of the day in most families!

Mood has a lot to do with food . . . and the digestion of it.

* * *

Three hundred years ago Shakespeare said "Let a good laugh wait upon digestion!"

And the husband who is put into a cheerful mood by the sight of a pretty, smiling wife behind the coffee-pot, is going to feel better and work better than the man who faces Gloom Personified across the breakfast table.

I think that the wife who buys the prettiest morning dresses that she can find is much wiser than the one who "wears out her old clothes around the house" . . . as most women do!

But, of course, clothes alone cannot make a woman attractive. If she is sallow and unhappy, a rose-colored dress only makes her more sallow and unhappy looking.

There is an inner glow that means bright eyes, fresh color and high spirits . . . even at 7 o'clock on a foggy morning.

And the quickest way to get that glow is by a brisk bath and five minutes' hard exercise.

This may sound to you like the same old beauty hint you've been reading for the last fifteen years or so. But it's plain common sense, just the same!

For it's awfully hard to be cross when you know you are looking your best and freshest.

Louis Wilkinson, the writer, tells us about a husband whose wife was so unattractive that the sight of her took away his appetite.

"Now what are you thinking of?" she used to say as he sat silent at the breakfast table.

And he couldn't tell her that he was thinking of bachelor flats, and envying the men who lived in them!

* * *

Beauty has more to do with marital happiness than we sometimes give it credit for.

Men are almost pathetic in their love of beauty. They can forgive a woman her inability to cook, or to save money, or to bring up their children in the way they should go. But they can't forgive them if they become sloppy and unbeautiful around the house.

And many a woman who looks like a fashion plate in her street clothes makes the supreme mistake of wearing a soiled kimono and kid curlers at the breakfast table . . . for the eyes of the man whose love she hopes to keep!

Kipling once described an unhappy woman as crying over the eggs at breakfast.

At the same time he makes no mention of her looking pretty.

For to look well is to feel well . . . and the wise woman will save her moods and her grouches for the afternoon, and bloom like a morning-glory for her husband at toast-and-grapefruit time!

Is This Your Birthday?

THURSDAY, Feb. 19—You have a haughty and imperious nature, if today is your birthday. But it is just a sort of an undesirable cloak, which hides a much finer inner self. Sickness Costs States Billion And Half Yearly

CHICAGO, Feb. 19. — (United Press.)—Three milion persons are sick the year round in the United States and the annual cost to the nation for preventable illness and premature deaths amounts to $1,500,000,000.

Dr. Frank E. Leslie, director of Gorgas Institute, has completed a survey of the national health situation which reveals the foregoing figures, which are arrived at by computation of the loss in actual earnings and potential earnings due to illness and preventable deaths.

The Gorgas institute is raising $5,000,000 to be an endowment which will be used in a nation-wide health conservation campaign. The object is to extend the death line to 70 years. It now stands at 58.

"During the sixteenth century, the average life was 20 years," acording to Dr. Leslie. "Science has prolonged human life 38 years in three centuries.

"I claim the next 50 years will see the average life increased 20 more years through dissemination of personal hygiene knowledge," he announced.

"The sickness overhead of business and industry of the American nation is a stupendous figure. It can be materially reduce by inculcating in employes the idea of personal health."

WOMEN'S SPRING FASHIONS

By HEDDA HOYT

Fashion Editor of the United Press

NEW YORK, Feb. 19—(United Press). — Palm Beach plants the styles that blossom up North in the Summer months.

It is difficult to think in terms of Summery frocks with snow piled high in our northern streets, but when one considers that manufacturers are already planning next Fall's frocks and Palm Beach is wearing lingerie gowns and straw hats, one begins to get interested in the coming season. Styles that are sponsored by the smart women at Florida resorts during the Winter months are those which we will be wearing within a few months up North.

The types of frocks and gowns worn by the residents of Palm Beach can be described in a few words. The days when women dressed six times a day and in six different types of clothes each time are past, owing to the strenuous living and the lack of time for changes.

First, there is the sports frock which is worn for tennis, golf, etc., and which is permissable to be worn throughout the entire day, if one has no tea engagements. This season's sports frocks are numerous. There are flannel jumper suits, one-piece frocks with matching coats and silk knit dresses. Perhaps the most popular of the three are the French flannels in solid colors, such as canary, white, madonna blue, tan, etc., which are made into sports ensembles. That is, the dress is a one-piece affair, usually sleeveless or with long, tight sleeves, and the coat is of three-quarter length and of the same material. Again the flannel frock may use a three-quarter length coat of flowered cretonne or French chintz lined in flannel matching the frock to form an ensemble outfit.

Colors for sports wear are most vivid, although colors are usually introduced by way of trimming since the smartest frocks and ensembles seem to be made of plain materials with linings, scarfs and appliques or brilliant shades.

White is as popular for sportswear as it is for dress wear and one sees many white crepe frocks with red or green scarfs, braiding or banding.

Those who prefer mannish lines will favor the sports topcoats which are invariably in amber tones and trimmed about the collar or hem bordered in natural colored furs. Yellowish furs are those most frequently seen on these high-colored coats. The all-white coat is very popular also and is trimmed in white fox in like manner. It seems newer to use fur either about the collar and hem. Plaid coats of blanket materials are also considered very smart for beach wear.

Afternoon at Palm Beach.

After luncheon Milady changes into her afternoon tea frock, which is usually of pastel shade and made of crepe de chene, georgette or chiffon with transparent flounces and scarfs. Sleeves are mere shoulder extensions and skirts are extremely short. Lace forms the flaring flounces and finishes the scarf ends in most cases. Hosiery matches the frock and shoes are extremely ornamental, being in black, bronze, tan or gray shades. Bright colored shoes are not seen much this season.

Here again at teatime one sees much white. There is one particularly lovely gown of white crepe embroidered on the upper skirt section in bright yellow moths with a wide fringe of yellow trailing from below the hips to the hem. Another white frock is made in simple lines with a wide band of red roses embroidered about the hips, the green stems and leaves of the flowers extending gracefuly into the folds of the circular flare which begins at the knees.

The ensemble suit for afternoon wear is popular. One of the most attractive ones being made of black silk crepe printed in red tulips with a long, slender coat of plain black silk lined with the printed material of the frock.

Evening Wear.

Resort evening frocks are a bit fluffier than those we are wearing up north at present. First, there are a few beaded gowns, since chiffons trimmed in ostrich or marabou flouncing prevail. Colors are milder than they are up North. There are very few bright reds or greens which are always the winter favorites. White as usual prevails, with canary yellow, pink, pale blue and other pastel tones following in favor.

One sees a few necklines, such as those which use the material of the frock on one shoulder only, with flesh colored tulle or net holding the frock up on the opposite side. Hems are invariably flaring and some of the newest skirts flare in circular movement from the hip.

Bathing suits are more brilliant than ever. Many are made of flowered French chintz which is guaranteed not to fade. White jersey suits embroidered in wool in colors are also popular.

FACTS AND FIGURES

VICTORIA, B. C., Feb. 19.—(Special).—Civic pride in one of Victoria's most prominent citizens and sincere appreciation of his twenty-two years of service in the development of transportation interests on the British Columbia coast, marked the complimentary banquet tendered here tonight to Capt. J. W. Troup, manager of the Canadian Pacific Railways B. C. coast services, by His Worship Mayor Pendray, the members of the City Council and the Chamber of Commerce.

Home Last Week.

Capt. Troup returned from the Old Country last week, having come out from Glasgow on the maiden trip of the S. S. Princess Kathleen, the first of two new sister ships to be added to the Canadian Pacific's coast fleet for the coming season. The occasion has brought to Victoria the largest gathering of Canadian Pacific officials that has ever assembled on the Pacific Coast.

Grant Hall of Montreal, Vice-President of the system, in his response to the toast to the railway company, pointed out that the two new ships, the S. S. Princess Kathleen and the S. S. Princess Marguerite, which will leave Glasgow at an early date for their home port in Victoria, were primarily Captain Troup's own ships, in that the contracts for their building were let on the plans and the specifications as drawn up by him entirely without the assistance of marine architects or engineers.

Speaking of the Canadian Pacific Railway, Mr. Hall went on: "I think it might be interesting to you all to put before you some facts as to the service that the C.P.R. has rendered this country.

Linked Up Two Coasts.

"On July 1, 1867, the Provinces of Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia confederated. In 1871 they were join by British Columbia, and one of the conditions imposed by the latter was that the East and the West should be lined up by a railway which was supposed to have started by 1873, but was not actually commenced until 1875. It was to be completed in ten years time, but for one reason or another in 1879 there was only seven hundred miles of this road built, and in 1880—just one year before the expiration of the stipulated time for which this road was to be completed—Sir John A. Macdonald, then leader of the Government of the day, was confronted with the problem of proceeding with the construction and operation by the Government itself or turning the proposition over to private interests. It is well known to you all that an agreement was entered into with the C.P.R. to build this line, and it was completed by this company before the time stipulated in the agreement had expired.

"There may be differences of opinion as to the bargain which was made by the Government of the day with the C.P.R. at that time, but I think one and all agree that the railway company has carried out its bargain—at least, up to the present time.

Nations in Inception.

"What I would like to emphasize from this statement is that the C. P. R. was national in its inception, and one of the conditions imposed upon the company who undertook the building of the road was that it had been operated by the company in perpetuity. Thus I wish to point to you that in spite of the fact that our competitor is known as the Canadian National Railways, the C. P. R. is also national in every respect, and this has been forgotten.

"An extensive program of colonization and development has been pursued by the company, for many years large sums of money having been used in the inducement of colonization and immigration, over $34,000,000 having been spent under this heading.

"This is in additional to land development work, such as ready-made farms, which have proven to be an improvement factor in bringing people to this country. Over ten million dollars have been spent in this work.

Irrigated Dry Belt.

"Twenty-four million dollars were spent in irrigation of what is known as the 'dry belt' in Southern Alberta. In branch line construction during the past twenty years this company has spent one hundred and thirty-two million dollars.

"While work of this nature has been carried on, the company's policy of maintaining its property has been fully carried out. For additional main line tracks and for double tracking five million dollars have been spent.

"The adoption of steel passenger cars resulted in the necessity for larger locomotives, on which over eight million dollars has been spent in the last few years. Heavier locomotives necessitated heavier bridges, on which four million dollars has been spent in this same period.

"There is thus a property in Canada today representing considerably over a billion dollars.

A National Necessity.

"In concluding, let me say that the C.P.R. had its inception in a national necessity, binding together the far-flung sections of the Dominion by a means of facil communication.

"Its fortunes in Canada are dependent on those of Canada, its prosperity is inextricably bound up with that of Canada. It is the largest individual contributor to the finances of the nation through the medium of taxation.

"The C.P.R. looks with confidence to the future development and prosperity of Canada, and to that end are devoted the efforts of every individual connected with it.

"The only justification for a transportation company is the service it gives, and on our services we expect to be judged and patronized accordingly.

"Sometimes it is felt that the position which we hold in Canada today, as compared with the other railways, is, to say the least, anomalous. But the spirit of fair play exist among all Canadians, and on what we rely and to that depends the future of our country."

VANCOUVER RUM SHIP CAPTURED

Tried to Land Big Cargo on California Coast—Crew in Custody.

WORTH $600,000.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 19. — The Steamship Coal Harbor of 284 tons register, which sailed from Vancouver about February 4, with a large cargo of liquor for South American ports was captured by the coast guard cutter Capokia near Bolinas Bay on Tuesday night while attempting to unload liquor, and was towed into port at daybreak.

The Coal Harbor had been standing four miles outside the Golden Gates the past three days. The cutter was watching for an attempt to land and the capture followed. The Coal Harbor, according to Seattle reports, was operated by the Canadian-Mexican Shipping Company, Limited, of Vancouver, owners of the Quadra, which was seized off this port recently with a $500,000 cargo of liquor, and of the ill-fated Speedway.

The fourteen members of the Coal Harbor's crew were taken into custody. An estimate by the Customs officials placed the cargo at ten thousand cases of liquor, valued at $600,000.

HALF PAY ENOUGH

BAGDAD, Jan. 19.—(Associated Press).—King Feisul of Iraq is trying to teach his subjects to practice self-denial, and in order to cut state expenses, has offered to forego half the monthly allowance to which he is entitled under the civil list. He has taken this step on learning the true condition of the Iraq treasury, which suffers from a serious deficit.

One Arabic newspaper, while thanking Feisul for this acknowledgment of the country's financial difficulties, suggests that leading officials might copy the king's excellent example. While such a course is hardly probable, there can be no doubt that further cuts will have to be made in the expenditure of the government on salaries and allowances.

PACKAGE COPYRIGHT.

Judgment in Favor of Salada Tea Company,

OTTAWA, February 19 (Canadian Press). — Copyright might be infringed without using a trade mark, if the general design of a package is copied, Exchequer Court of Canada rules in a judgment in the application of the Salada Tea Company for protection against infringement of copyright.

The respondent in the action was the Imperial Tea Company of Montreal.

The Court decided that the package used by the respondent was similar in shape and design and colour to that which the Salada people have copyrighted. The name of the tea was the only difference.

The Court found that the general appearance of a package must be considered a part of its copyright, and an imitation thereof might very well mislead purchasers who wished to buy the older product.

Judgment was therefore given for the appellant.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS.

Young People's League Had Interesting Meeting—Musical Buzz Saws.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, Feb. 19.— The Young People's League held their weekly meeting on Thursday evening. The meeting was in charge of the missionary department and an interesting programme was rendered, some of the items being:

Devotional talk by Rev. Chas. Daniels.

A reading, Missions or Luxuries, by Mr. Everett Fairman.

A recitation, A Kingly Visitor, by Miss Hazel Brown.

Missionary Topic, Great Missionary Movements, by Mr. Everett S. Fairman.

A duet, Only a Smile, by Misses Gladys Simpson and Elsie Forde.

A report was also given with regard to the acceptance of the invitation extended to the English Line League to spend a social evening with the Zion League in the hall on Thursday, Feb. 26th.

Mr. Eldon Anderson entertained a large number of his friends on Friday evening.

Miss Gladys Simpson is visiting at Burnbrae this week.

Mr. Thos. Fry has purchased a new milking machine for next season.

The air is full of music these days, the circular saw broadcasting its notes to the surrounding district.

Sweden To Cheer Sick With Soothing Pictures

STOCKHOLM, Feb. 19 (Associated Press).—The hospital wards of Sweden will no longer be mere "sanitary" deserts," and the eyes of patients will not be wearited by staring at the desolate expanse of bare walls, after selected works of are have been placed in the hospitals as the result of a movement, just getting under way, which is enthusiastically supported by doctors, patients and art experts.

The initiative has been taken by a number of patients in Moerby Country Hospital who, having heard that there was a movement to place specimens of fine art in restaurants, wrote to a leading Stockholm paper and asked why the same could not be done for the hsopital where they "were shut off from nature and forced to gaze continually at white walls." The suggestion led to inquiry among hospital experts who endorsed the idea of bringing art to hospital patients, but made certain interesting reservations.

The pictures must be selected with great care both with reference to the colors used and the subjects depicted. This is particularly important, it was pointed out, in the case of wards for fever patients, whose imaginations might be unduly stimulated by certain types of painting. In general the total effect of subject color and design should be cheerful, and at the same time soothing to the nerves. Certain hospitals in Sweden have already been decorated under this new plan, both with original works by Swedish artists and with printed reproductions of master pieces.

"A PASSAGE TO INDIA" BEST OF RECENT BOOKS

Featured by Character and Fine Writing—Review of New Issues.

AFRICAN STORY.

'God's Stepchildren" a Study of Half-Caste Family.

The majority of critics appear to hand the literary palm for the season ending December 31, 1924, to E. M. Forster's "A Passage to India."

Certainly no book received more press notices and the sale has been exceptionally large for a book based on character and fine writing rather than romance, high adventure and the other elements that seem to make for popularity.

Months ago this surveyor took off his hat to the volume, but feels that there is one bit of writing to which far too little importance has been attached. This is Ford Madox Ford's "Some Do Not —." What Thackeray's "Vanity Fair" was to its Victorian age, this book is to our time. It is a social picture, penetrating and unsparing.

If to some it seems shocking, just recall that "Vanity Fair" set the Victorians upon their ear. It is one of those writings which could be turned to a hundred years hence by one seeking a picture of present-day England. By which it is not intended to imply that this is a classic, or that it will live a hundred years; rather that it is a remarkably good record.

Speaking of prognostications and literary palms the predictions herewith is made that one of the most talked about and widely read books of the new season will be "Soundings" (Little, Brown), by A. Hamilton Gibbs, the little brother of Cosmo Hamilton and Sir Philip Gibbs. It will appear about March.

In the meantime a surprise, most pleasant and unexpected, comes out of South Africa. It is "God's Stepchildren", (Boni, Liveright), by Sarah Gertrude Millin, who holds the position of literary editor on the Cape Town Times. This book will take its place with Schreiner's "Story of a South African Farm" as one of the great novels of Africa. Only in greatness does the similarity rest; for here is superb style, great originality in presentation and such passion and sympathy as can be found in few books written in this generation.

Only in Somerset Maughan's "Of Human Bondage" can similar qualities be found.

Briefly, the novel takes this course: there are five divisions, each dealing with a generation. The first of the line is Rev. Andrew Flood, missionary, gone to preach to the Hottentots. The rest is amazing biological and sociological study. Rev. Flood has a Hottentot wife. Their daughter is a half-caste. With her begins the sequence of tragedies, all written with a fine detachment and keen insight.

It is beyond doubt the big book of the season—thus far.

Shorter Mention.

"Paradise" (Little, Brown)—Cosmo Hamilton—A story made to order for the movies. Stock characters, stock South Sea isle; mechanical processes. There are even South Sea military balls ready for Cecil De Mille sets. A thrill a chapter.

"Gold by Gold" (Boni, Liveright)—Herbert Gorman—The biographer of James Joyce brings the Joyce method to Greenwich Village and strips a poseur poet right down to the flesh, while poking ironic fingers in all directions. The type of writing sure to start an argument between "moderns" and "others."

"Along the Pyrenees (Bobbs, Merrill)—Paul Witstach — Travelogue in a picturesque region by an experienced traveller and story teller, but one who insists on the "little did he wot" style of writing.

ANNUAL MEETING OF ST. PAUL'S CLOSES BEST YEAR IN HISTORY

Financial Success Outstanding—Prospects Bright for Future of the Church.

SOME RESIGNATIONS.

The congregation of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church met last ... in the Sabbath School ..., to hear reports from the various organisations, and to mark their appreciation of the immense amount of work accomplished during the year 1924.

The whole trend of these reports was optimism for the future of St. Paul's as the only non-concurring Presbyterian church in the city, and as the prospective home of Presbyterianism in Peterborough.

Rev. Robert Pogue, who last Sabbath closed his pulpit ministry here, was chairman, and conducted the opening devotional exercises, and on a motion William Madill was appointed chairman of the business period which followed.

W. A. Logan acted as secretary of the meeting.

General Business.

O. Steer was called upon to present the Session report, showing the church membership early in the year to be 1,077, increased during the year until it stood at 1,102 at the end of the year 1924, and showing an increase of the funds, in spite of trade depression.

Moved and seconded, by Messrs. James Dutton and H. B. Cowan, that allocation of the money be left to the Session.

The treasurer's report was placed in the hands of the members last night, and remarks by Treasurer E. F. Mason showed that economy had been practised to allow for pulling down and the erection of new driving sheds, enhancing the appearance of the church grounds.

The statement showed for missionary purposes, receipts of $8,241.30 and expenditures $8,200, leaving a balance in the bank of $41.30.

The current account showed receipts of $10,433.21, and expenditure $10,311.11, leaving a balance in the bank of $122.10—a truly worthy and satisfactory state of finances.

Assets $88,097.70.

The assets of St. Paul's Church amount to $88,097.70, and liabilities, a mortgage of $2,700, with a balance of $85,089.80. Insurance is carried to the extent of $75,300 on all property.

The money received during the year for all purposes was $18,459.11.

It was moved by James Dutton, seconded by Sheriff Hall, that Rev. Mr. Pogue be granted the use of the manse until such time as the congregation required it.—Carried.

The Sabbath School report by O. Steer, superintendent, showed 300 scholars on the roll, and a very healthy and active organisation in all departments—officers, teachers, and Mr. Chenhall's orchestra receiving due praise and thanks.

The Sabbath School financial statement was read by Robert Hall, the secretary, showing an income of $1,090, and expenditure of $1,085.69, leaving a balance of $4.31 in the bank.

The Choir report was given by Alex. Donnelly, a concise and interesting resume of doings for the past year, and featuring the special service with the Peterboro Male Voice Choir, and the exchange with the Cobourg Church Choir.

The finances are healthy: Income $338.41; expenses $230.15; leaving a balance of $108.26.

The Men of St. Pauls was a class inaugurated in 1923, with a membership of 100—a live and useful association, with real men on the ropes.

The nomination of members of the Board of Managers was then called for to replace the following: Messrs. W. A. Logan, E. R. Wilson, J. C. Best, and Dr. Wood, who retire by rotation; and Messrs. H. R. H. Kenner, J. W. McDermid and W. Scott, who resigned.

Managers Elected.

It was moved and seconded, and carried, that the resignations be accepted.

The result of the ballot (reported at a later stage of the meeting) was as follows, eight managers having to be elected: W. A. Logan, J. C. Best, Sheriff Hall, H. Morgan, Harry Taylor, R. W. F. Davidson, W. R. Turner and John Gillespie.

Scrutineers: Messrs. McIntyre, Munro and Tom Dutton.

The reports of the W. M. S. was not forthcoming, but the financial statement was rendered by Mrs. W. R. Turner, showing much activity and success, an income of $1744.73, an expenditure of $1744.70, with 3c in the bank.

The Ladies' Aid Society was reported upon by Mrs. Garbutt, telling of the wonderful work accomplished by a great body of women.

And for this society, Mrs. Morgan gave the financial standing: Income $1719.63; expenditure $1232.69, leaving a balance, with other subsidiary moneys received of $2971.23 in the bank.

These reports were singled out for special mention and applause from the audience.

The church missionary offerings were then given by W. A. Logan.

Miss Stewart reported on the Fraser Auxiliary, telling of useful and helpful work along missionary lines.

E. F. Mason, who has had charge of the Forward Movement Fund of St. Paul's Church, gave figures showing a total of $30,745, from 421 subscribers, the cash received amounting to $26,513.25, leaving $4231.75 still outstanding.

Mr. Mason intends to hand the affairs of this fund over to headquarters in Toronto.

A resolution of appreciation and condolence to the relatives of the late Mrs. C. H. Moore, was moved by T. C. Elliott, and carried.

Cancel all Sittings.

In the matter of the church sittings J. H. Connal made the suggestion that the sittings in the church be cancelled, and members be asked to have a choice made as soon as possible, with the issuance of a circular letter and card for the information as to where and how many sittings each member would require.

Mr. Connal said many applications had been received from other Presbyterians in the city, who were intending joining St. Paul's church and that something along the lines of his suggestion would be in order.

A motion that this suggestion be carried out in six weeks' time, was moved by Mr. Carey, seconded by Mr. Elliot, and was adopted, several gentlemen voicing sentiments that it would be a little premature since members from other churches had been informed to allow their certificates to remain in the present churches until 10th June, which brought the "ca' canny" motion into the matter.

Mr. Connal and Mr. Goodfellow moved a hearty vote of thanks and appreciation to the church choir and Mr. Chenhall.

Sheriff Hall moved, seconded by H. Dodd, that the meeting express its appreciation of the service of the gentlemen who have seen fit to resign at this time, Mr. Logan remarking that he would appraise them of the vote, and regretting the breaking of the fellowship and the association with them in the work of St. Paul's Church.

A vote of thanks to Chairman Madill, and the Doxology and Benediction from Mr. Dutton concluded the annual meeting.

Heat

For pain - soreness

Rheumatic pains, soreness, aches, etc., call for heat. The best way to apply it is Red Pepper Rub.

This is the modern way. It so excels the old ways that there is no comparison.

Nothing else creates such concentrated, such penetrating heat as red pepper. And heat that doesn't hurt you.

You feel that tingling heat in an instant. In three minutes it seems to penetrate the depths. Circulation is started, congestion is relieved. Pain and the soreness go.

What folly it is to suffer pains so easily and quickly stopped. What folly to let a cold in the chest go neglected. When trouble starts at night, what folly to wait until morning.

Keep Red Pepper Rub on hand. Homes which do not save a great deal of pain. Get it now—the very utmost in help of this kind.

HEART WAS WEAK NERVES ALL GONE

Mrs. J. H. Hallenbeck, 117½ Welland Avenue, St. Catharines, Ont., writes:—"I was in a gas explosion; it left me with a weak heart, and my nerves were all gone. I suffered everything; couldn't sleep, or endure any excitement, and when left alone I felt as if I could scream. I took dizzy spells, often falling and bruising myself. My mother read about your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and bought me a box, but having taken so many different kinds of medicine it just seemed that I did not have any confidence in any of them. I took one box of H. & N. Pills, and felt so much better I continued with them until I had used five boxes, and after I had taken them I did not need any more. I cannot praise, or recommend, Milburns Heart and Nerve Pills too highly after all they have done for me."

The NERVOUS WRECK

by E. J. Rath

They blundered forward, clinging to each other. They stumbled over roots and vines, floundered blindly into trees, forced their way through underbrush that seemed to claw at them. Both were drenched to the skin and gasping for breath before they had gone a hundred yards.

"Seems to me we've gone far enough," panted Sally. "It was only a little way from camp."

"It's right around here somewhere," said the Wreck. "Come on."

He dragged her forward again.

"If we could get some more lightning we could see something," she complained.

"We'll find it," he promised, confidently.

But they had not found the flivver in five minutes, or ten, although they steadily groped their way through the dripping woods, trying to shield their faces against the beating rain.

"We've been going uphill too much," said Sally, who had a sharp misgiving concerning their quest. "The ground was almost level between the flivver and the camp."

"Then we'll go downhill some," declared the Wreck.

They went downhill for awhile, but it was still a blind scramble through the trees and underbrush, with no touch of a flivver to greet their outstretched hands. It was very dark. They could hear distant thunder, but the lightning they could not see. And it rained as though determined never to stop.

"I don't see that that rifle is doing you any good," observed Sally, as they paused to rest. "It's only so much more to carry."

"We may need it," he said stubbornly.

Half an hour passed. The rain was lessening, although the fact made little difference; neither Sally, nor the Wreck, nor the woods could get any wetter.

"I'm afraid," she said, "that we started in the wrong direction when we left the camp."

"We'll go back to the camp and start over again."

"But you'll never find the camp now, Henry."

"Sure!"

There was no use in arguing or trying to discourage him, and Sally knew they might better be moving than standing still, so she suffered herself to be led on another journey through the darkness. The Wreck seemed to be tireless. He plodded and stumbled onward, scorning difficulties, picking himself up whenever he fell, clinging to the rifle, and doing it all with an amazing optimism and even a show of patience.

"Any time you want to rest, just holler," he advised.

Sally promised that she would, but she kept going.

They did not find the camp. Even if they passed within a few yards of it the chances were against discovery, for long ago, Sally knew, the rain must have obliterated the last vestige of glowing embers. But the Wreck searched stubbornly for hours, it seemed. He would not admit that he was lost, although Sally would have conceded it without hestiation. He seemed to proceed on the theory that groping through the woods was like walking the streets of Pittsburg—even if you happened to be in a strange neighborhood you would locate your street at last.

"Let's rest awhile," he suggested.

Sally was willing. Her skirt was heavy with moisture and her legs were tired. They found a fallen tree and sat for a long time, during which the moon came out. It did not give them much light, but it had a cheerful aspect. They did not talk much. She felt that the Wreck was chagrined about their failure to find the flivver and did not refer to it. Nor did she even speculate on what they were going to do next, although it seemed to her that their plight was more unfavorable than ever.

"We ought to be getting some daylight in an hour or so," she said.

He agreed with her and suggested that they walk again. There seemed to be no end to the woods. How far they travelled, or in what direction, Sally had not the smallest idea. She felt quite helpless. The one thing that gave her a measure of confidence was the demeanor of the Wreck. He was undaunted; everything would be all right as soon as it got light enough to see what they were doing.

They were resting again when a noise made by something that moved stirred them both to alertness. It was not far distant, and Sally held her breath as she clung to the Wreck's fingers. Several times the noise was repeated; it was as if some heavy body was forcing its way through the brush.

"Maybe it's one of the gang," she whispered.

"Maybe. Do they have bears here?"

"Not many, I reckon. I never saw one."

"You stay here," he said. "I'm going to see what it is."

"No."

"I've got a rifle, haven't I?"

"I don't care. You'd better stay here."

They heard the noise again.

"I'm going," said the Wreck. "Sit still."

"Henry!"

He was gone, trying to be stealthy about it, but making a din as he plunged forward into the gloom. Sally gritted her teeth and followed him. What was he blundering into now?

She was several yards behind him when she heard a scuffle, then a muffled exclamation from the Wreck. Something was plunging around in the brush ahead of her.

"Henry!" she called sharply. "Henry!"

Then his excited voice floated back to her.

"I've got hold of a horse," he cried. "What'll I do with it?"

"A horse!"

"Yes, a horse!"

"Hang onto it; I'm coming."

She went forward at a run, tripped, fell headlong, picked herself up and resumed.

"He's rearing around," complained the voice of the Wreck. "The damn fool, he's just——"

"Well, you hang onto him," said Sally grimly. "I'll be there in a second. Darn these woods, anyhow."

CHAPTER XXI.

The Sheriff's Horse.

When she reached him, the Wreck was still struggling with a dark shape that was making desperate efforts to back out of the encounter.

"Let me see," said Sally, pushing herself to the front. "What are you holding him by, anyhow? Why, he's bridled!"

It had not occurred to the Wreck that a horse roaming the woods at night did not usually wear a bridle, but to Sally, who knew about things, it was an oddity.

"Easy now, boy." She had hold of the bridle and was talking in a soothing professional tone. The effect of her voice and her practiced hand was almost immediate. "That's it gentle, now. And who turned you 'oose in the woods?"

An instant later she made a second discovery.

"Saddled, too! That's queer. He's broken loose from some place. I suppose the storm scared him. There now, boy steady. Well, can you beat it? Saddled and bridled, all ready to hand."

She stroked the animal's neck, patted his shoulder and talked gently to him. Presently he responded with a nuzzling against her arm, and then she knew she had him.

"We can't be far from the camp, Henry. He must belong to Nosey, or one of that crowd, of course. A horse might get frightened in a storm like that, but he wouldn't run very far in the woods. Listen!"

The Wreck had not heard anything, but Sally's quick ear caught a familiar sound.

"There's another one roaming around here somewhere," she said. "Listen again."

After a short interval both heard it—a faint whinny from off among the trees.

"Don't move," said Sally. "This one will answer in a minute. They'll get together, or else I don't know horses."

Presently her prediction was realized, but it took another call from the distance before the bridled horse answered.

"Stay right here, Henry. The other one will come to us. You might have that rifle ready, just in case. There may be somebody riding it, you know, looking for this one."

The second horse was advancing more rapidly now. There was another interchange of calls, and Sally clung more tightly to the bridle of their captive. The Wreck stood tense, ready to shoot at anything that looked like a man. Sally cautioned him not to be too quick she did not want any blood-leeting unless it was a final alternative.

Out of the brush and into the dim light came a second riderless horse.

"Hold this one," said Sally, giving the bridle to the Wreck.

An instant later she had a second captive.

"Bridled and saddled like the first one!" she exclaimed. "Did you ever hear of such luck?"

"What do you make out of it?"

"They must belong to Nosey and Lefty. I suppose they left them standing somewhere, maybe, while they got out of the storm themselves, and the poor things got scared and ran away. I don't blame them."

"Well, what are we going to do with 'em?"

Sally peered at him through the gloom as if trying to see whether he was serious.

"Do with them?" she echoed, in amazement. "What do you usually do with a horse? Kiss it? You big silly, we're going to ride them."

The Wreck made a grimace.

"How about my car?" he demanded. "Aren't we going to look for that?"

"No, we're not. Are you crazy? So long as we've got their horses let them keep the car. We don't want to go messing around that camp again to-night. We're liable to get ourselves into trouble again. Don't try to push your luck too far, Henry Williams. We're in big luck now—we've got their horses, two of them, anyhow. And we've got one rifle. What more could we ask?"

He pondered the proposition gloomily. He could not treat the idea of abandonment so lightly not that it was particularly valuable to him in dollars, but there was a bond of sentiment to be considered. Yet he could see the sound sense at the bottom of her verdict. After all, he was primarily responsible for getting Sally Morgan either aboard a train or back to the Bar-M. The flivver would have to take its chances.

"Oh, all right," he growled.

"Why, of course," said Sally.

"Then which way do we go?"

"We ought to try to hit for the main road, I suppose. That seems the most sensible thing to do. We'll probably be able to get our bearings then. I'd wait till daylight, only I don't think we ought to. I'm afraid we're too near the camp. They'll be out looking for these horses. They can't afford to lose them."

"They've got my car," he reminded her.

"But maybe they can't run it, Henry. It's one thing to ride a horse around this country but when it comes to exploring it in a flivver, well, you've got to be an expert."

He merely grunted at the compliment, for he suspected that she was only joking.

"You'd better ride the one that you caught," she added. "He's all quieted down now. Can you mount him?"

"Certainly I can," snapped the Wreck. "But what are you going to do? You haven't any riding skirt."

Sally laughed in the darkness.

The Wreck had scaled the side of the first captive and was trying to find a comfortable place in the saddle, when Sally made a flying mount of the second.

"You'd better let me go ahead," she said. "We'll just walk while we're in the woods. And don't get yourself killed," she said. "We'll just walk while we're knocked off by a branch. Come on."

They set off at a slow pace. Sally giving her animal its head, save for occasional guidance in the direction she thought they ought to follow. The Wreck's horse followed, determined not to be isolated again, so that all that his rider had to do was to balance himself in the saddle and fend off branches with the rifle.

Sally had but a vague idea of whither they should go to seek the main road. The Wreck, having no ideas of his own as to their course, was content merely to follow.

One consideration in Sally's mind was to avoid the camp at all costs, and apparently she was succeeding in that, for after half an hour of riding in a direction that was generally straight they saw no trace of it. With the first faint coming of dawn she was pleased to discover that the trees were becoming more sparse. A few minutes later, as they rode out into an open space, the light about them was visibly increased.

The Wreck's horse ranged alongside Sally's mount without urging, and nipped gently at the shoulder of his companion.

"G'long there," said Sally, good naturedly. "Mind your——"

She broke off into a little cry and reined her horse sharply.

"Henry Williams!" she cried.

"What now?"

She was staring at the Wreck's horse.

"Look—look what you're riding!"

"Huh?" He squinted down through his spectacles at the top of the animal's head, as though expecting to discover, perhaps, that it was an elephant or a camel, rather than a regulation Montana mount.

"It's Bob Wells' horse!" said Sally, in a voice of awe.

And indeed it was, as the Wreck could now see with a fair amount of early morning light coming over the hills. It was the big black animal that even he, to whom most horses looked alike, had come to associate with the sheriff.

"I'll be doggoned!" he muttered.

Sally sat rigid in her saddle, as though the sight had petrified her. It was Bob's horse, Bob's saddle, Bob's bridle—the whole outfit was there. No wonder she had been able to soothe the frightened animal, back in the darkness. He knew her.

"We've stolen the sheriff's horses!" she gasped.

"Found 'em," corrected the Wreck.

"Oh, Henry!"

"Well, what of it?"

"But— What in the world does it mean? I'm all mixed up."

The Wreck did not have any very clear idea of what it meant, but the discovery was rather pleasing to him. Unconsciously, he assumed a more jaunty pose in the saddle.

"One horse is the same as another to me," he remarked. "You thought they were good enough when we found 'em in the woods. What's the matter with 'em now?"

"But Bob—his horse—and— Why he must have been right close to us!"

"Well, he didn't find us, did he?" remarked the Wreck, triumphantly. He even risked his seat by leaning forward and stroking the neck of the black horse.

Sally glanced at her own mount. She could not remember ever having seen the animal before. It was a medium-sized bay, rather easily gaited, but evidently not built for speed.

WOMEN PAINTERS SUBJECT LECTURE

Art Study Club Learns of Famous Paintings By Women.

"Women Painters" was the subject of a very interesting paper given by Miss B. Beatty, at the meeting of the Art Study Club held on Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. R. J. Kidd, Hunter street.

Miss Beatty opened her paper with a reference to traditional women painters. A Grecian woman, referred to as Helena, in 333 B.C. painted a picture entitle "The Battle of Issus," and in ancient Rome during the same period, a woman did a great deal of miniature painting of ladies.

During the Renaissance period, in Italy, some of the earliest women painters were nuns, who painted, not so much as a craft, as a confession of their faith. Outside of the convents, two notable Italian women artists of that time were Lavina Fontana and Elizabetta Sirarie, both of whom were members of the Roman Academy, and received much praise for their work. The latter of these two did a great deal of etching, and also executed a very large and fine painting of the Baptism of Christ.

In Germany, about 1459, nuns were active in the fine art of painting, and about a century later, a notable woman artist flourished who had studied unter Titian. In Austria, there were notable women painters, and in Finland, Maria Wilk flourished, who exhibited with success at the Salons in Paris, Moscow and Copenhagen. In Switzerland, in the 18th century, Anna Wasser achieved prominence in painting, and in Spain, during the same period, there were good women painters also in Russian and in Belgium, where the sister of a notable artist, Jean Van Eyck, made a name for herself. About 1615, a great development in painting took place and many women sprang into view, the Hollanders following the vogue of a celebrated Dutch painter, Jean David de Heen. One of the most notable of the Belgian women painters at the opening of the 19th century was Madame Collart, and still later, there was Madame Brohee, who exhibited at the Brussels Salon and was one of half a dozen artists who successfuly passed the examinations for the Prix de Rome.

In Holland, Rachel Ruysch of Haarlem flourished and was admitted to the Hague Corporation in 1701. Seven years later, she was made court painter to the Elector Palatine.

During the time that women painters were making names for themselves on the Continent, England had no notable feminine artists. One of the earliest women painters of note was Miss Mary Beal, daughter of a clergyman, and Mrs. Margaret Carpenter, who made a reputation in portrait work.

In France, in 1873, Madame Le-Brun became famous, and later, Madame Rosa Bonheur, one of the greatest women painters of all time. It was said of the latter that she raised painting by women from the status of a pastime for idle moments and idle fingers to that of a career. Born in Bordeaux, a daughter and pupil of a painter, Raymond Bonheur, she did much of her earlier copying in the Louvre and on the outskirts of Paris, receiving many honors later from the French government. The most notable of her pictures are probably The Horse Fair and Monarch of the Glen. There are at present twenty-six of Rosa Bonheur's pictures in the United States.

In the United States, many names of women painters appeared from time to time. Of these, Mary Cassatt and Cecilia Beaux are known in every country in the world where art is studied. The former was an impressionist, while the latter inclined more to the dramatic school in painting.

In Canada, the early history shows that women from time to time interested themselves in sketching the landscapes of primitive times, notably prominent in this way being Mrs. Kane, Mrs. Moody and Mrs. Hayward. Mrs. Mary Dignam is a living artist who has added much to women's place in Canadian painting. Educated in Paris and Holland, she first painted portraits and flowers, then turned her attention chiefly to landscapes. She was the foundress and first president of the Women's Art Association of Canada, and has exhibited her work at the Royal Canadian Academy, also in London and in Paris. She has written extensively on art and art subjects.

Another Canadian woman painter and sculptor was Miss Peel, born in London, Ontario, and sister of the late Paul Peel, R.C.A. Miss Peel executed a fine series of busts for the Normal school in Toronto.

The next meeting of the Club will be held on March 3rd, at the home of Mrs. R. Gliddon, when Miss E. Anderson will give a paper on the Framing and Hanging of Pictures, and Mrs. H. E. Connolly will give a paper on Tapestry.

STOP WORK ON SHIP BUILDING PENDING PACT

itain Believes Conference on Arms Limitations Coming in Fall.

GOVERNMENT PLANS.

High Cost of Living, Unemployment and Geneva Protocol Are More Worry.

(By Lloyd Allen—United Press Staff Correspondent).

LONDON, Feb 19.—Arms limitations discussions have reached a stage presaging a conference in November, well informed political leaders believe, and in view of this possibility the Cabinet has decided to diverse new shipbuilding proposals from the budget, and confine preliminary work on eight projected cruisers to mere production designs.

Should plans for the conference go awry, this work will be covered by a supplementary estimate to be introduced into Parliament later as a budget addition. In the meantime, Britain's worries centre about the smoothest manner of quietly burying the Geneva protocol and at the same time satisfying French demands for security.

The Government, harried because of the high cost of living, the shortage of houses, unemployment, and the mounting income taxes, is believed to see the greatest hope of relief in the proposed conference, envisaging an opportunity for meeting domestic demands as well as sparing the Empire embarrassing commitments on behalf of the League of Nations.

British Police the World.

Demands for economy are currently strengthening. In addition, the Admiralty objects to the Geneva protocol because it in effect, makes the British Navy the "world's policeman," conceivably entailing immeasurable expenditures and risks.

There is understood to be a growing sentiment against the protocol's provisions. It is argued that the nation would be subject to mobilization of naval reserves and employment of converted tonnage if occasion demanded, while the guarantee recovery of the necessary outlay is decided inadequate.

Moreover, the danger of complications with neutrals outside the League of Nations would be involved.

If a new Washington conference resulted in naval reduction it is pointed out, however, that as police blockade duties became more impracticable, pacifically inclined nations might be led to increase their armaments from the sheer force of potential necessity.

WANT SUBS ABOLISHED.

British Government Will Ask Their Limitation at Disarmament Conference.

LONDON, Feb. 19. — (Canadian Press). — Discussion at a Cabinet meeting yesterday on the projected disarmament conference indicated that the British effort will be directed toward two accomplishments:

1—A naval holiday, so as to reduce drastically naval expenditure.

2—An agreement, if possible, to abolish submarines, or, if this cannot be done, to limit their number.

Patrolman Shot Dead.

Protecting Drug Store When Three Bandits Staged Hold-up.

DETROIT, Feb. 19. — (Canadian Press).—Assigned to protect a drug store in Hamilton Avenue here last night because of the number of successful hold-ups perpetrated in that district, Patrolman Phelan McDonough was killed when he opened fire on three hold-up men who invaded the store.

In the exchange of shots, McDonough received a bullet through the breast and died in a few minutes after reaching Ford Hospital.

A DISLIKE FOR FOOD

Every healthy man and woman should have a natural desire for food at meal times. This means that the digestion is in working order and that the blood is in good condition. But if you feel a dislike for food—if the sight and smell of wholesome food repels you—then you may be sure that Nature is telling you that all is not well. If after a night's rest you have no appetite for breakfast, your digestion requires attention. If your food is distasteful, or if you feel that it is a trouble to eat, your stomach is rebelling. You do not digest properly the food you are taking and are therefore not hungry.

All these symptoms of a disordered digestion mean that the blood is not absorbing proper nourishment from the food, for the work of the blood is to collect proper nourishment from food and impart it to the system. The stomach tries to refuse food the nutriment from which the blood cannot absorb, and this causes the lack of appetite. If you force yourself to eat, the undigested food becomes a clog to the system. Nature is warning you. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills alone give the blood the richness and purity that it requires to perform its natural function. That is why Dr. ... ms' Pink Pills relieve the most obstinate cases of indigestion—why they help any trouble due to poor blood.

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Woman Of 102 Demands Daily Drink Of Liquor

SAN PEDRO, Calif., Feb. 19.—Mrs. S. Nuncey, a little woman of 102 years, was hailed into the police court here yesterday charged with the illegal possession of liquor.

"I have been drinking liquor all my life and I don't intend to stop now!" she told the court.

MR. DUNLAP'S WILL.

It Offers an Example in Public Spiritedness, Says G. A. Warburton.

The publication of the contents of the will of the late David A. Dunlap, with its generous provisions for religious, educational and charitable purposes, furnishes opportunity to call attention to the comparatively small amounts that are generally devoted to such purposes by the wills that are probated. It is several years since any large bequests of this character have been published, and the writer has been impressed by this unfortunate situation as he carefully watched the disposition that has been made by will of estates, both large and small especially since the war.

One explanation of course is the large succession duties that have to be met, but this is hardly a sufficient cause for a condition which is deplorable, and which ought to be considered by all who make disposition of their property by testament.

Such a condition awakens some surprise when it is remembered how very generous Toronto is towards all worthy causes. My own opinion is that this community is not excelled by any community of corresponding size and the wealth in the world. This is particularly true of the support that is given to religious organizations, including the church boards.

We need to remember that certain kinds of educational, philanthropic, religious and charitable work needs the stabilizing influence of at least a partial endowment in order that they may carry on permanently and vigorously the service to which they are committed. The university, though supported by the province, needs funds for research and for the development of departments, such as fine arts, which it might be difficult to finance out of public funds, but which will have a vital relation to the steady improvement of our educational standards and to the real culture of the young. The church boards, especially those that have to do with missionary undertakings, are in a precarious position and need endowment as well as largely increased current gifts. The hospitals, whose ministry of healing goes on day by day, year by year, hardly noticed except by those whose friends require their help—the General, the Sick Children's, the Muskoka Consumption, these and others require and deserve remembrance by good people. Then the Young Men's Christian Association and the Young Women's Christian Association, as well as their national boards, are prevented from extending their good work because they lack funds. And what shall we say of such agencies as the Federation for Community Service, the Neighborhood Workers' Association, the Boy Scouts, the Big Brother movement, the Social Service Council dominion and provincial, the temperance organization, the humane societies, all of which are dependent upon public generosity!

It would be a fine thing if every citizen of our community, in the light of Mr. Dunlap's splendid example, should reconsider any provision he may have made for the disposition of his estate and, having provided for his family, arrange for such gifts as are suitable in size to such of the great public organizations as may appeal to his sympathy and good judgment. In this way, and in this way only, can we fulfil our duty to the community in which we live so happily, and of which we are so proud.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

FAVORS K.K.K.

Editor, Peterboro' Examiner.

Dear Sir: I read in tonight's issue of your paper an editorial pertaining to the Ku Klux Klan. Are you not judging them too harshly?

I am not a member of the K.K.K. Neither do I know of their methods or purpose. I have seen several crimes attributed to them but they are never convicted of them and we must, according to British Law, adjudge them innocent. The wearing of K.K.K. clothing is a good way for professional crooks to throw off the scent. It is fair that we look at both sides. There are many crimes committed within the law, the gap between law and justice is tremendous and the injury and suffering caused by the miscarriages of justice is appalling.

The cleverest and most dastardly criminal is the one that works within the law. If one is a victim of his smooth working plans it is then easy to realize the chagrin that one feels when the realization comes that it was done legally and nothing can be done to get one's rights. If the K.K.K. or any other society can fill the gap, honestly and conscientiously, between law and justice, there is no doubt that it will have a large following and will find favor with the vast majority, but those who have been accustomed to weighting the scales of Justice with their dirty collars are the ones that will cry the loudest in condemnation. Yours truly,

FRANK W. WHITE.

CRITICIZES PROHIBITIONISTS.

Editor of Examiner.

Dear Sir: At the prohibition meeting held in George Street Church on Friday evening last, Mr. Ben Spence made some very strong statements in connection with the proposal to increase the strength of beer. He said that the assertion that it was not intoxicating was an absolute falsehood. The Prime Minister and the Attorney-General both stated that the experts who made the laboratory tests gave the decision that 4.4 per cent. beer is not intoxicating, but added the promise that if time should prove them to be wrong and the beer prove to be intoxicating, it would be recalled from use. There are many of us who voted for the O.T.A. who do not consider that the Prime Minister has violated any pledge as long as the beer is not intoxicating, and if it is intoxicating it will be recalled, so why so much fuss.

Then Mr. Spence says that this proposed beer of 4.4 per cent. is five times stronger than the standard, which defines intoxicating liquor. (Let us analyze this statement.) Then beer one-fifth of 4.4 per cent., or nearly 9 per cent. is intoxicating. Then it follows that the 2.22 per cent. of beer which has been sold for the past 8 or 9 years under the O.T.A. must be very highly intoxicating. Is that the case? If so, then Mr. Spence and all the other ardent prohibitionists who worked so hard in the plebiscite campaign were working to continue the sale of intoxicating beer. The whole thing is absurd. If we wished to be as insulting as Mr. Spence was, we could now accuse him of "absolute falsehood." Mr. Spence and many others seem to forget that we are told to be temperate in all things, which includes speech as well as drink. I wonder if the Prohibitionists realize how much harm the grossly exaggerated statements made by men like Mr. Spence are doing to their cause. Mr. Spence certainly underates the intelligence and reasoning power of the people of Peterboro if he expects them to swallow his extremely exaggerated and inaccurate statements just at his will.

There are two remarkable facts in connection with this prohibition question. One is that during the four years the U.F.O. government was in power, there was never a word of protest about the sale of native wines, which are highly intoxicating. Now, Mr. Drury and Mr. Raney lift up their hands and voices in holy horror at the mere mention of 4.4 per cent. beer.

The other is that we never hear of big meetings being held by prohibitionists all over the province to petition the Dominion Government to close the breweries and distilleries. I have yet to hear of the Peterboro branch calling a meeting and presenting a petition to Mr. Gordon in this respect. And yet these plants, under the sanction of the Dominion Government, are turning out hundreds of thousands of bottles of highly intoxicating liquors, much of which goes into the hands of bootleggers and is distributed all through this province, making more men drunk in a week than 4.4 per cent. beer would ever do. But the very people who look on that so calmly are the ones who are now so terribly excited over proposed 4.4 per cent. beer.

What is the answer? Simply this: The leaders in the prohibition movement are practically all Liberals, and they have proved that they are Liberals first and prohibitionists second. When the prohibition movement can secure as leaders men who will rise above party politics and demand equal concessions from Provincial and Dominion Governments, irrespective of their political color, then the mass of the people will have faith in the movement; then, and only then, the cause of temperance will progress by leaps and bounds. But so long as they continue to play the political game, as at present, they will continue to lose ground every day. The plot is a little too transparent.—Yours for FAIR PLAY.

NORTHERN ONTARIO NEEDS UNION.

To the Editor:

Sir,—Just a line from the firing line of Northern Ontario. Viewing the Church Union controversy from the vantage point of a Northern Ontario Home Mission Field, I am forced to the conclusion that much of the opposition to Union would disappear if those opposed could sufficiently appreciate the Home Mission situation in our own beloved land, and to come still closer in our own beloved Province of Ontario that the Christian people of Canada are always responsive to a cry of need when they fully realize it; for instance, we remember the generous response to the fire sufferers appeal of two years ago, when car-loads of necessities moved northward to Hailey bury and the stricken district. In fact, no people of the earth are quicker to respond to a cry of need than the Christian people of our own fair land. We are wondering if, in the heat of controversy, the real issue has been lost sight of, namely, the great need of the increasing Home Mission fields of Northern Ontario and of all Canada.

One who has never travelled through Northern Ontario can scarcely appreciate its possibilities and its problems. We have a veritable empire lying between the Sault Ste. Marie branch of the C.P.R. and Hudson Bay, an empire whose wealth and possibilities can scarcely be estimated. It comprises six-sevenths of the whole province, with a population of less than 300,000; but we can hear the tramp of coming millions. The settler is looking this way. This great rich territory must be claimed, and we predict a great filling up of the northern spaces within the next twenty-five years. This constitutes a great responsibility for the Church. Denominationalism cannot meet the challenge. Denominationalism failed in Northern Ontario long ago. Church Union has been tried and has proven a great success, and the only hope of Northern Ontario for the future is more Church Union. We may take a trip northward from Sault Ste. Marie over the A.C.R. and pass through a territory of two hundred miles where the voice of the preacher is not heard; within that territory there are many scattered settlements and hundreds of lumber and mining camps; this is known as the Michipicoten field, but the Home Mission Board have been unable to supply it because of lack of men, and especially money. There are many fields in Northern Ontario like this one, and we are hoping that in the future the United Church will be able to meet the challenge of Northern Ontario. Church Union has already done wonders in this country; it has made it possible for a struggling field to have the services of an experienced ordained minister, where otherwise it would have been impossible. If anyone doubts the success of Union, they might be convinced by visiting the Richards Landing field, where Methodists and Presbyterians are both much happier than they were under Denominationalism. It is the hope and prayer of the men at the front that the Christian people back home may catch the larger vision of the golden opportunity that awaits a United Church in our great Northern Mission fields, and forget the little things in the presence of the great challenge.

H. J. L. WOOLEY.

INSIDE HISTORY O.T.A.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir: It is just as well that the inside history of the O.T.A. should be known. A famous licensed victualler lawyer, whom I know well, was sent for by Sir William Hearst and his O.T.A. friends, such as Rev. Albert Moore, Rev. Dr. Chown, D. D., and what not, to draw up a liquor-tight act. He did so. It excluded all alcoholic liquor over 2½ per cent.

The lawyer, knowing the "wet" side to perfection, knew how it could be made "dry" and being a lawyer, was open for engagement.

But Hearst, Chown, Moore & Co. were aghast when they saw what the lawyer had done. "You have shut out the grape growers, and their native wines. We will lose their votes." "What do you want then?" said the lawyer. "Exclude native wines," they said. "But native wines are highly intoxicating," said he. "We don't care how intoxicating they are; we must have the votes," said the temperance workers.

So the lawyer excluded native wines and the prohibitionists got the native wine votes. Yet these are the people who are kicking about five per cent. beer and talking about honour.—J. H. BURNHAM.

LONDON TID-BITS

LONDON, Feb. 19—(Canadian Press). — Princess Mary's quiet Yorkshire home at Goldsborough is a veritable God-send to others of the Royal Family who want to escape from publicity for a few days. It is more difficult to gain admittance to the grounds of the hall than anywhere else in England, and the servants are exemplary models of stony reticence.

Prince George,—whose little dinners and dances with Miss Poppy Baring recently led him into those chatty columns of the newspapers—has been down to Goldsborough for a while, to let the rumors die down; so has Prince Henry, but not a soul has known about it. The only one who is conspicuously absent from the Lascelles menage is Wales himself.

Master George Hubert Lascelles is two this month, and his mother is giving him a Shetland pony for his birthday present. It seems a reckless present for such a youthful rider, but his mother was riding when she was three.

Margot Asquith, Countess of Oxford,—that I supose, is what people will call her, but title or no title she will still be just Mrs. Asquith. At any rate she will write as Margot Asquith.

It is no secret that pecuniary difficulties have been a factor in her husband's long refusal of an Earldom, the Asquiths are not rich,—not even comfortably off as things are now—but there are rumors of another book from Margot's before long. She is about the only woman in London who never wears jewels, but she is quite striking enough to dispence with them.

The serious music world of London has been badly jazzed up the last weke or two. Following the two recent excursions of the Savot Dance Orchestra from the Savot ballroom into Queen's Hall, London Temple of classic music (an event that puzzled the critics quite a lot), there comes another surprise.

The sedate Philharmonic Orchestra has played a new composition by Arthur Monegger, the French modernist, called "Pacific 231" which is dedicated to a Canadian locomotive. It is a striking piece of modernism, strenuous and exciting. It is supposed to make you feel you are being hurled through the night at 70 miles an hour, in an express train.

Already legends have gathered round the piece. Whilst the poor Philharmonic was rehearsing it a man is said to have exclaimed aud ce said "I feel as if my eyes are full of cinders."

ACID STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

Sufferers From Indigestion or Stomach Trouble CUT THIS CUT

"Stomach trouble, dyspepsia, indigestion, sourness, gas, heartburn, food fermentation, etc., are caused nine times in ten by chronic acid stomach,' says a well know authority.

Burning hydrochloric acid develops in the stomach at an alarming rate. The acid irritates and inflames the delicate stomach lining and often leads to gastritis accompanied by dangerous stomach ulcers. Don't dose an acid stomach with pepsin or artificial digestents that only give temporary relief from pain by driving the sour, fermenting food out of the stomach into the intestines.

Instead, neutralize or sweeten your acid stomach after meals with a little hot water and Bisurated Magnesia and not only will the pain vanish but your meals will digest naturally. There is nothing better than Bisurated Magnesia, to sweeten and settle an acid stomach. It soaks up the harmful excess acid much as a sponge or blotting paper might and your stomach acts and feels fine in just a few minutes. Bisurated Magnesia can be obtained from any reliable druggist in either powder or tablet form. It is safe, reliable, easy and pleasant to use, is not a laxative and is not at all expensive.

Tired After Eating? Try This Simple Mixture

If you feel tired after eating, it is often a sign of gas and undigested matter in your stomach or bowels. Simple buckthorn bark, magnesium sulph. c.p., glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adlerika, helps any case of gas on the stomach, unless due to deep-seated causes. The QUICK action will surprise you. Adlerika is wonderful for constipation—it often works in one hour and never gripes. McDermid & Jury and E. L. Payne, Druggists.

Robin's Nest Found With New-Laid Eggs

ST. THOMAS, February 19.—Wild geese, butterflies, pansies, croaking frogs and all other reliable precursors of spring, will have to take seats in the rear.

W. G. Whiteside, manager of the local branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, has a sign of the verdant season at his residence that beats them all.

While Mr. Whiteside was cleaning out some vines around the house he came upon a newly built robin's nest, with freshly laid eggs in it. The mother bird scolded him from a limb close by. The eggs were fully examined and found to be of the kind sold as strictly fresh.

USE CHAINS FOR SAFETY

(By Harold F. Blanchard)

Beware of icy streets! For example: It is night and drizzling slightly. You jump into your car, step on the gas and are on your way. You suddenly have to slow down for a pedestrian, you apply the brakes but they won't work, and then you try to steer out of the way. Your car responds slowly but finally veers into a telegraph pole. Meanwhile the pedestrian in his fright, slips and falls and you almost run over him.

This isn't an extreme picture. It is likely to happen any time when the streets are icy. What misleads you is the drizzle. The streets look wet and they ought to be wet, but actually the fine mist has frozen on the cold pavement. Under such circumstances a car is almost uncontrollable, and it cannot be driven either up or down hill—unless it is equipped with chains—and even then it must be noted that it may not be safe to negotiate an extremely steep hill—nothing will keep your wheels from slipping on a hill that is very steep.

If you find yourself on an icy street the only sensible course is to stop and apply your chains. Unless you do this you are running an awful risk. You may hit a pedestrian or another car, and even assuming that these possibilities do not worry you (they should) there is always the possibility that an accident may result in a judgment that will take away a large part of your property—possibly your house, if you are an average man. That possibility is certainly worth thinking about.

The danger of icy streets at night ras been emphasized because it is not always as obvious as many other winter driving problems. But it must be added that it is desirable to proceed with more caution whenever the going is slippery whether it is due to ice, snow, water, slimy mud—or even sand or gravel in some cases. When there is snow or ice on the ground remember that pedestrians cannot be as spry as when the footing is secure. They may not be able to jump out of your way, and when they try they may fall down.

There is more likelihood of damaging another car on slippery streets by skidding into it, and incidentally it is worth while obtaining witnesses and full details to even the slightest skidding accident if you feel that the owner of the other car is likely to fall into the hands of a shyster lawyer. There are lawyers in New York City, for example, who make a business of sueing car owners for larger repair bills when the actual damage was merely a scartched or dented fender. In many cases the victimized car owners settle for $50 or $100 to avoid a suit, and the lawyer splits this sum with the car owner who suffered the trifling damage.

Beware also of snow unless you have chains. Some falls of snow are almost as slippery as ice. Also keep in mind the possibility of becoming stuck. The safest plans is to put chains on as soon as it starts to snow and keep them on as long as there is snow on the ground.

Speaking of snow, it is necessary to emphasize the necessity of having a windshield cleaner, preferably an automatic one, to give you adequate vision when it is snowing. Otherwise it is desirable to raise the top half of the windshield in order to secure good vision.

TALK CONFERENCE ON DISARMAMENT

Matter Brought Up By Question in British House.

LONDON, Feb. 19.— (Canadian Press.)—A disarmament conference in Washington, probably in the autumn, may be regarded as an almost certain result of discussions here between Frank B. Kellogg, retiring Ambassador, and Austen Chamberlain, British Foreign Secretary.

Chamberlian was no more communicative in his speech in the House of Commons yesterday than the house spokesman was, merely remarking, in reply to a question: "The matter has been informally mentioned in conversation with the American Ambassador, and is at present under consideration.

C.N.R. CONCESSIONS.

Agree to Carry Lime Fertilizer at Reduced Rates.

TORONTO, Feb. 19.—(Canadian Press.)—The committee of the Select Agricultural Committee of Legislature, headed by Dr. Jamieson, which visited Montreal to request lower freight rates on fertilizer lime from the Canadian National Railways, secured satisfactory concessions, Dr. Jamieson said this morning.

The railway agreed to carry lime fertilizer to any part of Ontario at $4 a ton. There are some places in Ontario which can get this rate now, but in many others rates are much higher, so that the general reduction is considerable.

LESS OIL PRODUCED.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 18. — (Associated Press).—The production of oil in California during the last year was 230,045,000 barrels, 33,683,895 barrels less than in the previous year, according to a statement issued by the State Mining Bureau.

The heaviest decline was in the southern California fields. This was partly offset by increases in the San Joaquin Valley and elsewhere, both from new wells and from wells which had been shut down or curtailed in 1923 owing to the temporary overproduction.

DOES EVERY MEAL CAUSE YOU DISTRESS?

If It Does You Should Take Burdock Blood Bitters

Mr. M. P. Eldrige, Peterbor, N.B., writes:—"I used to be troubled with my stomach for years. Sour Stomach and everything I ate seemed to distress me I tried several kinds of medicines, but was getting worse. Finally I was advised to try B.B.B. and after having used almost half the bottles I was completely relieved above the trouble. I bought each time for my trouble. I bought each time for I wish, thank you for it has done me."

Burdock Blood Bitters is a tonic for the stomach intestines and liver. There is no miniature bottle, as it was all right for the moting properties of the Burdock Blood Bitters during the past 46 years. Its record for climax always and its sales always increasing, seen at home and abroad to none, and has helped thousands who suffered from various stomach troubles.

ARTICLE

In the preceding article the writer referred to two questions from a correspondent, a discussion of which would interest all auction players and in that article took up the first question. The second question is as follows:

"First hand has bid no-trump, second has passed, third has overcalled his partner with two hearts, and fourth has bid two spades. Under what conditions should the original hand (a) bid two no-trumps; (b) raise his partner to three hearts?"

This particular question opens up a very wide field of discussion and one that can be handled only in a very general way. For the purpose of this discussion it will be assumed that neither side has a score. Also assume that the dealer has bid one no-trump with each of the following hands:

A
Hearts — Q, 8
Clubs — A, 10, 4, 2
Diamonds — K, 10, 9, 8
Spades — K, J, 7

B
Hearts — Q, 10, 7, 2
Clubs — A, 10, 4, 2
Diamonds — K, Q, 9
Spades — 10, 4

C
Hearts — 7, 2
Clubs — A, 10, 4, 2
Diamonds — K, Q, 9, 8
Spades — Q, 7, 2

D
Hearts — 7, 4
Clubs — A, K, Q, 7, 6, 2
Diamonds — K, 10, 7
Spades — K, 7

Then assume that his partner has bid two hearts and fourth hand has bid two spades. With hand A, the dealer

Hearts — 4
Clubs — 7, 6, 2
Spades — 8, 2

Spades are trumps and Y is in the lead. How can Y-Z win all the tricks against any defense? Y should lead the queen of spades and B's best play is not to cover with the king. If he does Y-Z can readily drop all of his trumps and make all their hearts or clubs. B should, therefore, play a small spade, allowing Y to hold the trick. Y should then lead the jack of spades, which B should also pass. Y should now lead the king of clubs and Z should trump it with the nine of spades. This is the key of the problem for if Z doesn't trump this trick and so shorten his trump holding, he will eventually be forced to trump, and therefore, allow Canadiens Break Jinx.

Beat Montreals at the Forum After Two Overtime Ties.

MONTREAL, Feb. 19 (Canadian Press).—After two unsuccessful attempts to win from Montreal, at the Forum here, Canadiens finally broke the jinx last night, winning their National Hockey League tussle, 1 to 0. For two periods both teams battled in a scoreless deadlock and it looked like the third overtime game between the two teams this season. But eight minutes after the start of the third session Aurel Joliat star Canadien wing, trapped the puck at centre ice. He feinted with it for a moment and then flashed. Before the Montreal players were aware he had circled the defence and sent the puck into the far corner of the Montreal net for the winning goal.

Hastings Players Ill—Tweed Girls Enjoyed Trip to Havelock.

TWEED, Feb. 19.—The hockey match between Hastings and Tweed which was to be played last night, has been postponed, owing to sickness of some of the Hastings players.

A game of hockey worth watching was witnessed in Havelock on Tuesday night when the Tweed girls journeyed there. Both teams were very evenly matched. A number of good shots were taken on Tweed's goalie, but were stopped every time. The score was 7-0 in favor of Tweed. Mr. Alec Geraldi, Tweed, refereed the game and good satisfaction was given.

After the game the girls of both teams were entertained at the home of Miss Brewster. The Tweed girls are very grateful to the Havelock girls by being so hospitable to them.

MORE HORNSBYS IS GAME'S NEED

Gives His Best to Cardinals, Knowing Other Clubs Would Pay More.

It's a good thing for the stability of baseball that Rogers Hornsby is to remain with the St. Louis Cardinals. The greatest right-handed hitter in baseball has just signed a three-year contract with the Cardinals at $25,000 a season.

This practically means Hornsby will spend his greatest years as a player in the Mound City. Baseball in St. Louis would be doomed if the owners of the club ever decided to peddle Hornsby's contract.

And they have had many temptations.

John McGraw has tried repeotedly to lure the second baseman to New York. A year ago the Brooklyn club made a genuine offer of $275,000 for the player and it was refused by Branch Rickey. More recently the owners of the Chicago Cubs tried to get him but failed.

There have been times when Rickey and the Cardinals could have used the money offered for Hornsby but they realized he would be a greater asset to the team in the long run and they wisely turned all offers down.

Good For Baseball.

Hornsby is an honorable ball player, and he always gives the club his best regardless of personal feelings. It is no secret that Hornsby and Rickey did not get along well year before last.

As a matter of truth the two came to blows. Many wiseacres figured Rickey would surely peddle his star after the altercation, and quite a few others were positive Hornsby would start sulking if he were not traded.

But they didn't ow the real Hornsby. The hardest working player in the Cardinals' camp in Florida last spring was Hornsby. If he had any feelings against Rickey or the club he certainly did not show them.

And throughout the season he was again the team's outstanding star as well as the greatest hitter in his league.

All Hornsby did last year was to top the batters in both big leagues, establishing the highest individual mark that has reached the record books since the noted Hughey Duffy bated. 438.

Invaluable To Cards.

Hornsby is drawing down nice money under his new contract but he must realize that some of the wealthier clubs that have been after him, notably New York and Chicago, could afford to pay him more.

Yet Hornsby, to the great delight of his many admirers in St. Louis, goes right along year after year giving his all to the game and keeping the National League entry on a somewhat even basis, in the matter of interest, with the American League rival, led by George Sisler.

Without Hornsby in their lineup the Cardinals would never have been able to compete against the Browns and Sisler at the boxoffice.

The game needs more men like Hornsby—men who do their best to fulfill their agreements regardless of conditions and circumstances.

Hornsby has led the National League five times hand running. This year he will try to increase his record to six straight, and many experts believe he will succeed. Hornsby has few rivals in his league as a hitter.

SCOUTING AT STRATFORD.

Leo Dandurand and Howie Morenz to See Game.

MONTREAL, February 19 (Canadian Press). — Following last night's Montreal-Canadien game at the Forum, Leo Danrurand and Howie Morenz left for Stratford, the home of the centre player, to witness the Niagara Falls-Stratford Senior O.H.A. play-off game in the latter city to-night.

Mr. Dandurand expects to look over some valuable professional prospects in the game.

It is thought Kitchen, Niagara Falls defence man, will be found on the Montreal professional club's lineup next season.

WHAT WILL CUYLER AND YDE DO THIS YEAR?

Two Starts of 1924 Campaign Have Reputations to Uphold — Now Face Real Tasks.

BY ART CARLSON

Establishing a reputation is one thing. And living up to it is another.

That is true in any branch of endeavor. For once you have displayed the "goods" you've got to cling to the pace or take a dizzy tumble.

All of which leads up to the 1924 performances of Hazen Cuyler and Emil Yde.

Cuyler and Yde were two of the best young ball players to come into the majors last season.

Each was a star in his first year in big time, Cuyler by virtue of his sensational batting and general all-round play and Yde through stellar southpaw hurling. And strangely enough, both were members of the same club—Pittsburg.

What will Cuyler and Yde do in 1925? Will they live up to their debut efforts? Or will they fade out just as others have done before them?

Those are some of the questions carrying more than ordinary interest as the annual southland hike approaches.

Looks for Good Year

Recently I was talking with Cuyler. The question concerning the coming campaign was put to him.

"Well, I don't know, of course," he replied, rather reluctantly. "But I am hoping that I'll have just as good a year as I did in 1924.

"I realize, though, that it will be tougher sledding. They'll be laying for me all around the circuit. I'm sure of that. In a way, I'll have to be better than I was to turn in as good a performance, if you get what I mean. At any rate, I'm out to give the best I've got."

Cuyler, no doubt, is right. It will be a tougher season for him this year. Opposing hurlers have had a whole campaign to become acquainted with the tot; to learn his likes and dislikes, his strong points and his weak ones. And they'll be working every nook and corner possible, too. Bank certain that.

Show Form Reversal.

Many a youngster has gone like a house ablaze until he got to be known by enemy pitchers. But once the gunners had a "line" on him, safe hits grew farther and farther between. Many a newcomer has blazed a glorious trail during his early days in the main tent, only to do a complete reverse when his weaknesses were learned; when the pitchers got to be on "speaking" terms with him.

Last year Cuyler hit .354. He was fourth among the National loop's regulars. He topped his Southern Association mark of 1923 by 14 points. A remarkable advance considering the difference in classification.

Cuyler stole 32 sacks. He ranked second to the incomparable Carey, who had 49. Afield the youngster also did well, even though assigned to the "sun garden, a tough post for most veterans. Cuyler stood next to Arnold Statz of the Cubs in assists with 19, showing a stout whip.

Yde Star Performer.

Cuylers' hitting was one of the sensations of major league play. He kept up a terific pace from early season until the middle of September, when an injured shoulder threw him into a slump. It handicaped him greatly.

Yde won 16 games and lost three in 1924. He topped the gunners in both leagues. Like Cuyler, his work was of a phenomenal nature. Speaking of Yde, Cuyler had nothing but praise.

"He's a great pitcher," he said. "He's steady. Cool. Got lots of stuff and knows how to use it. Moreover, he keeps his noodle working all the time. I think he'll go just as good next season, if not better than he did a year ago."

The work of these two tots is certain to be watched with more than passing interest. They've got reputations to uphold. It's their big chance.

NURMI APPLIES SCIENCE

Flying Finn a Mechanical Draftsman—Studies Tracks And Plans Pace To Win.

In the course of his rigorous track campaign in America Nurmi has established twenty-four world's records at varied distances and on indoor tracks that were dissimilar and strange to him.

Always before running on a track the Finn insisted upon having a look at it, or having a photograph of it submitetd to him. He is a mechanical draughtsman.

Nurmi, with charts of his performances in training and in previous races, determines just how he will run the race to beat other contestants whose speed he knows and break certain records.

Not once, so far as we can discover, has the Finn started a race depending solely on his speed, heart, wind and leg power to carry him to victory and records.

Without exception, we are informed, he decided upon a gait that he was confident would win for him and that he knew by test and experience he could maintain.

In a number of his races, eye witnesses tell us, Nurmi carried his stopwatch and he referred to it as he ran, too.

Granted, the Finn lacks color. A scientific athlete doesn't start the pulses of the spectators racing because they come prepared to see him do just what he does.

The genuine thrill at a track meet is to be found in a finish among two or three well-matched runners who know little about gait or science, but who put every ounce of heart and energy that's in them into the drive down the homestretch, throwing themselves over the finish line totally exhausted.

But the young man who would gain undying fame and marks in the record book would do well to study and practice "scientfic running."

Finn Misjudges Rival's Speed.

Occassionally, in a handicap race, the scientific athlete misjudges the speed that is in the limbs of a rival. This happened to Nurmi in Syracuse.

Al Gottlieb, Syracuse University junior, beat the Finn to the tape by 10 yards in a handicap mile race in which the college lad started with a 65-yard allowance.

Reading between the lines, we found the story of that race in Syracuse the most interesting of any we read about Nurmi. Here, in part, is what the Associated Press report said:

"Nurmi's setback came as a stunning surprise, but the most startling part about it was that he was clearly outrun in the last lap by Gottlieb, after catching and passing his rival at the start of the lap.

"Carrying his famous stopwatch, Nurmi sped around the narrow track skirting the walls of the university gymnasium at a gait that quickly overhauled the rear guard of his opponents.

"Three laps from the finish Nurmi had passed all but Gottlieb who, seeming to realize that he had the opportunity of a lifetime in his grasp, called on his reserve. He lengthened his pace and kept the lead for two laps.

"At the sound of the final bell, Nurmi jumped to the van. Paavo looked back over his shoulder, then at his watch and seemed to slow down slightly.

"As he did so, Gottlieb spurted, raced into the lead at the final turn and added yards to his margin in the short dash to the finish.

If you read between the lines of that A.P. story, do you doubt that Paavo Nurmi is a scientific athlete?

Ran True to Schedule.

Nurmi ran that mile in 4:27 2-5, which was 3-5 of a second faster than the mark set up by Joie Ray on the same track. The Finn had guaged his pace to a nicety.

What Paavo did not gauge was the speed and reserve strength of a lad who had been allowed a 65-yard handicap.

The Finn doesn't worry so much about the boys who are handicapped. Even though they may cross the finish line ahead of him, they have not equaled his gait.

Gottlieb may well feel proud of the victory he won. But Nurmi ran the mile on the Syracuse track faster than it had been run before, which was what he prepared to do in his scientific or mechanical way.

Here is the interesting part of the story for the writer, however. Paavo looked at his watch while he was running the race.

When he took the lead in the last lap, glanced at his chronometer and found that he was running according to schedule, he was satisfied.

Even when Gottlieb forged to the front and set a pace that the Finn might have surpassed, Nurmi apparently stuck to his schedule.

He knew that he would beat the record. He was well aware of the fact that the runner ahead of him had a 65-yard handicap.

Had Gottlieb been a scratch man, things would have been different. In that case Paavo would have increased his gait and busted his schedule—if he could have done so.

Under the circumstances it was not necessary for the Finn to put that extra drive into his finish and call on his reserve. He was wise to finish in second place.

Nurmi is a superrunner. He has added to speed and stamina science that has made him unbeatable from scratch.

A lot of hard-boiled theatregoers are saying Benny Leonard's mother would do the world a great favor if she'd get the young man to resign as an actor.

PADDLERS EXPECT TO WIN, SAYS MAIL

Battle Will be Worth Seeing To-night— Petes Unbeaten at Arena.

TORONTO, Feb. 19. — The Mail and Empire this morning says:

"It loks like even money and take your choice in to-night's game between Peterboro and Parkdale at the arena. Both teams have their supporters who can see nothing but victory. However, the battle looms up as a mighty struggle by two well-matched teams. The retur game will be played on Saturday night and goals on the round count, the winners meeting Niagara Fal or Stratford in the Senior O.H.A. finals and for the right to take part in the Allan Cup play down.

"The Petes have not lost a game in Toronto this season, but were defeated three times at home and once in the Soo, and apparently are a big ice team, unable to do their best when cramped for space.

"They have several long striding payers in Harold Parker, Bert McLeod and Irvin Bailey, while Ranger also goes better on the big surfaces. But they will have to show their best hockey to defeat the Paddlers, who are confident that the "Punch in the pinch" they have shown in recent games will carry them to victory in their crucial series of the season."

ST. PATS BEAT OTTAWA.

Senators Have Very Slim Chance of Getting in Play-off.

TORONTO, February 19 (Canadian Press). — While the Ottawa Senators still have an outside chance of getting in the play-off for the National Hockey League championship, their hope received a terrific jar last night at the Arena when they were forced to accept a 4 to 2 defeat from St. Patricks, who last night scored their sixth successive victory and earned it on the play.

As a result of the two games last night, St. Patricks and Canadiens are still deadlocked in second place, but they have a five-point margin on Ottawa, and the latter, with six games to play are faced with the almost impossible task of winning all their remaining games to oust either St. Patricks or Canadiens.

As was expected, the meeting of the two teams produced an exciting contest, and there was plenty of brilliant play by both teams.

I have a fighter who will meet anyone you name for $2000, but if you want a real classy one fresh from the mountains of Old Kentucky you can have him for $1200 if you keep quiet about him.

CIVIC WELCOME GIVEN CURLERS AT MILLBROOK

Band and Cadet Corps Paraded to Greet Winners Carew Cup.

LAUD SKIP EDMUNDS.

Challenge is Already in, But Rink Hopes to Hold the Trophy.

A civic reception was tendered the rink of local curlers, R. H. Edmunds, G. W. Sayles, H. J. Grassett, and W. E. Ball, who brought home the Carew Challenge Cup after defeating a rink of the famous Granite Club by a score of 20-9 on Tuesday afternoon, the game being played at Toronto.

A large number of citizens, both from Millbrook and Cavan, were at the station to give the men greeting when they arrived home on Wednesday at 5 p.m., a guard of honor composed of sixteen members of the local Cadet Corps making an arch of crosesd brooms, under which the victorious curlers stood while the Millbrook band, under the leadership of G. A. Duncan, rendered an appropriate selection. The Cup, of solid silver and standing about sixteen inches high without the ebony base, which would add another eight inches, was held aloft by J. A. Vance, vice-president of the local club, that all might have an opportunity of viewing it.

Personal messages of congratulations from many of the leading citizens of village and township, were showered upon Skip Edmunds, and his valiant supporters, as they were escorted to the car in waiting. A procession was formed, and after passing through the business section of the main street, adjournment was made to the town hall, where the further details of the reception in their honor was carried out.

L. C. Russell, president of the local curling club, took the chair, and expressed the pleasure which he personally felt, and the honor which had been brought to the curling fraternity of Millbrook, and to the village itself, as the opportunity was given of welcoming home the men who had won out against so well-known a club at the "Granites" of Toronto.

"We are proud of you. We believe if the Granite club held this cup for two successive years, that you also will successfully defend it for a like period."

In the unavoidable absence of Reeve W. T. Wood, owing to the recent bereavement in his family through the death of his mother, Councillor P. Stinson extended hearty congratulations on behalf of the Reeve, the other members of the council, and the citizens.

The fact that curling promotes clean sportsmanship, good fellowship, and warm friendships was commented upon, and its encouragement was urged as one of the duties of good citizenship.

The band played "For They Are Jolly, Good Fellows" and Vice president J. A. Vance was then called upon. In expressing his personal appreciation of the honor brought to the village by the victory over such well known curlers as the Granites of Toronto, Mr. Vance mentioned the obligation he himself is under to Skip Edmunds, "who taught me all I know about the game, and is, I believe, one of the best skips in Canada today." On former occasions when the same rink had brought home trophies from outside points, no special attention had been paid them, but this omission:

This was regrettable and would have been unpardonable in the present instance. The speaker wished to thank the boys who formed the guard of honor, and all others who had assisted in making the reception a success. In conclusion, he said, "I feel assured you will outrival the Granite club and retain the cup three years."

As Skip Edmunds rose in response to his name, the band played, "He's a Jolly, Good Fellow," and the chorus, "See Him Smiling," which followed, was heartily sung by all present.

"This is the hardest part of it all, just now," said Mr. Edmunds, as he expressed his appreciation, and that of his fellow curlers, in the reception accorded them. They had been most kindly greeted upon their arrival at the Granite rink in Toronto. Mr. Rennie, a veteran curler with more than a province-wide reputation, showing them over the building. Among many other trophies were three Tankard banners with Mr. Rennie's name inscribed on them, the dates being 1909, 1910, 1911. Mr. Rennie played second stone in the opposing rink, the skip being Rev. Robert Burns, who was especially interested in the Millbrook men as his father, the late Rev. William Burns, was pastor on this circuit nearly forty years ago.

"They were a little easy on us at the start, but when the score stood 9 to 0 in our favor after seven ends had been played, I overheard one of their men remark to another, 'I think we have rather under estimated these sharpshooters'."

The Granite Club entertained the visiting rink at dinner when the game was concluded.

Story of Game.

Vice Ski- G. W. Sayles thanked the committee in charge, and the citizens generally for the splendid reception given them, and said the honor of winning the cup really belonged to Mr. Edmunds, "who had played such a game as would give his opponents something to talk about for some time." The skip of the defeated rink had seemed a bit 'grouchy,' and had asked, 'Does that skip of yours always play like that?'" "Always, when I am with him'—a bit of humor which brought a general laugh from the listeners.

H. J. Grassett and W. E. Ball, who play first and second stones respectively, in the winning rink, also spoke briefly, and the chairman explained that not alone had curling honors come to the district, but the Wardenship of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham had been conferred this year upon the Reeve of Cavan Township. Warden J. L. McCamus was then called upon, and in expressing his appreciation of the victory won by the local rink, said he believed it reflected equal glory upon both village and township as they were one in many of their interests. Not a curler himself, he was yet interested in the sport, and was glad the "guests of honor" had stood up so successfully against such worthy opponents as the "Granites" of Toronto. In conclusion, he invited the winners to be present that evening for dinner with others who were assembling at the "Waverley Inn" shortly after the reception had been brought to a close.

Colonel Neil F. MacNachton, of Cobourg, who was among the guests in town for the Warden's banquet, and who is a veteran skip, having had many years' experience in the "gentlemen's game," said it was an unexpected pleasure for him to be present, and he brought hearty greetings from the Cobourg Curling Club to the winners at Millbrook. He had himself had the honor of playing against, and defeating, a rink of the Granite Club, some years ago. He believed that there is no game so honorable, and so ancient, as curling. "It brings men together, and promotes the utmost good fellowship; you never see a quarrel on the rink; it is clean, healthy sport, and should be encouraged in every community."

Selections by the band had given variety between the speeches and added much to the success of the gathering, which was dismissed with the National Anthem. Previous to leaving the hall, three hearty cheers were given for the winning rink, the "tiger" taxing all lungs to capacity, and giving special expression to the genuine pride the community feels in their achievement bringing home the cup held for two years by one of the finest rinks in the Queen City.

Challenges In.

There is a lengthy "waiting list" of rinks which have put in a challenge for the Carew Cup, Stuffville being next in line. The game will be played in Millbrook, and will probably take place within the next ten days.

So long as the local rink can successfully defend the trophy it will remain in the village, but there is not in this case any ruling that it becomes the permanent property of any one rink because of being won on any number of successive occasions.

Toronto Telegram Says Petes Are Fancied to Win the Series.

TORONTO, Feb. 19. — (Canadian Press)—The Toronto Telegram says to-day that Peterboro are fancied to win the play-off to-night and Saturday against Parkdale for honors in the O.H.A. Senior Group No. 1. But those who figured Peterboro as a "cinch" are likely to be very much wrong on their guess. However, it was learned to-day that Harry Watson is not likely to take his place at left wing for the Paddlers, which, of course, will strengthen Peterboro support and weaken that of Parkdale. Watson had his bad shoulder injured last Friday night in the game against Aura Lee. On top of this, he has been confined to his home for several days with a very bad cold.

PRIZES PRESENTED TO LADY CURLERS

Past President of Ontario Curling Association Officiated at Kingston.

KINGSTON, Feb. 19.—(Canadian Press).—The presentation of prizes at the ladies' curling Bonspiel was an interesting feature. T. M. Asselstine, past president of the Ontario Curling Association, presented the Ontario Tankard to the Peterboro Club.

Mrs. W. S. H. Hill, who skipped one of the Peterboro rinks, accepted the trophy and returned her thanks in a neat address. The eight individual trophies for each of the members of the winning rinks were presented by Mr. Asselstine. The prizes for the runners-up, which were the members of the Queen City Curling Club, Toronto, were also presented with prizes by Mr. Asselstine. Harry Angrove, president of the Kingston Curling Club, presented the members of the Kingston rinks, skipped by Miss Betts and Mrs. H. F. Moore, with spoons.

It has been decided that a mixed Bonspiel will be held at Peterboro in the very near future. Kingston will send two rinks, and it is expected there will be two from Toronto. Peterboro ladies have agreed to put in two rinks, making it at least a six-rink competition.

SPECIAL TRAIN TO LEAVE AT 1.30 P.M.

Big Crowd is Going to Toronto on Saturday.

The special train to be run to Toronto by the Peterboro Hockey Club on Saturday for the benefit of the local fans who want to see the Parkdale-Peterboro game, will leave at 1.30 p.m., not 3.35 as stated in error yesterday.

The earlier hour has been chosen to give the fans more time in Toronto, and it is expected the Queen City will be reached before 4 o'clock. The indications are that a big crowd of Peterboro people will be on hand for the second game of the play-off series which should be a rare struggle. A big block of reserved tickets has been secured by the Peterboro Club from the Arena management, so that everybody who this afternoon, for the first game game.

The Petes left for Toronto at 3.35 this afetrnoon, for the first game of the series, with all the players in good shape for the test. A goodly number of fans made the pilgrimage to the Queen City with the team.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected, with Frank Dyer as captain and W. Mann as vice captain. Secretary B. Nicholls read the report for the previous meeting, and from other information received from other sources the prospects look bright for the future of this sport in Peterboro. It was decided to hold the next meeting in the Chamber of Commerce Rooms, on Tuesday, March 3, at 7.30 p.m.

Woman May Pay For Treat If She Wishes, Says Law

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 19 (United Press)—Cake eaters will be glad to learn that the law doesn't prohibit a woman from buying the drinks or ice cream, even though society does consider it a bit of a faux pas."

An observing policeman arrested Mrs. Virginia Kahn, manicurist, in a soft drink parlor where she was buying drinks for six gentlemen friends. "That's her business, Municipal Judge Kilroy said, rebuking the officer. "A woman has a right to set 'em up if she wants to."

VILLAGE DOCTOR TO CALL AGAIN

Knox Church Play Drew Another Full House—Annie Crocker Honored.

PLAY TO REPEAT.

Last night the lecture hall of Knox Church was filled to utmost capacity for the second performance of "The Young Village Doctor," a humorous little play, presented by the Volunteer Bible Class, under the direction of Miss Ann Crocker. This play will be repeated in the lecture hall of Knox Church on Friday, February 27 by special request.

The doctor, Stan. Hunter, had a very professional manner and voice, who treats all his patients successfully, they coming back to congratulate him on his marriage to Jane, Agnes Wallace, a pretty and bright young nurse, whose natural acting and pretty costumes added much to the success of the play. Mrs. Crane, Ann Crocker was splendid, her gossip adding much to the merriment of the play. Berlinda Clinger, Ethel Kennedy, brought forth much laughter in her attempts to vamp the doctor, in which she fails, but nothing daunted she lands in with Mr. Lovejoy, Claire Hallowell, for the wedding reception. She sang "In Old Madrid," in a clear, sweet voice, accompanied by Mr. Peaker at the piano.

Simon Grabbe, Howard Hall a tight old farmer, was a scream, who wanted medicine to liven his wife up till after the harvest. Miss Knowing, Sadie Lockie, a young studious girl, proves in her meeting with the returned soldier that she possesses a loving heart as well as much intellect. Mrs. Frost, Glad Chambers, who though married, cannot see the light side of life. Mr. Wiseacre, Art. Pitchford, was inclined to hang on his money till sure of a cure. Bill McKim, as Mr. Brief, the lawyer, was very good. Mrs. Ware, Helen Madden, a poor widow, shows her gratitude for the curing of her son, Don Clark. Mrs. Groan, Ver Brock, suffering from many imaginary ailments is cured upon being simply told she will have to go on diet.

Miss Marjorie Evans sang very sweetly "When Lights Are Low" during the first intermission, being called back for an encore. Miss Hamilton was excellent in her recitations. The men's chorus made a big hit, with Ian McKenzie taking the solo parts, and Messrs. B. McKim, G. Wallace, A. McLeish, D. Hill and H. Hall joining in the chorus. Their first number was "Honest and Truly," and as an encore "You Can't Fool an Old Hoss Fly.

The lighting effects and scenery were very pretty. After the play, luncheon was served in the basement to the cast by the members of the Class and Miss Crocker was presented with a beautiful bouquet of roses.

MUNN BEAT ROMANO.

Lifted Italian Heavyweight Wrestler With Crotch and Half Nelson.

CHICAGO, Feb. 19. — (Canadian Press).—Wrestling followers found good basis for comparison of Wayne ('Big') Munn, new heavyweight wrestling champion, and Ed. ('Strangler') Lewis for title holder in Munn's appearance against Mike Romano, Italian heavyweight, here last night. Munn lifted Romano with a crotch and half nelson and smashed him to the mat twice in less than seven minutes. Romano lost three contests to Lewis only after hours of gruelling mat work.

OSHAWA PEOPLE SUSPECT MURDER OF YOUNG CHILD

Think Body of Victim Burnt in a Brush Wood Pile.

MOTHER UNMARRIED.

Automobile Town is Stirred to the Depths and Police Investigating.

OSHAWA, Feb. 19.—Acting on information from confidential sources the local, provincial and county police have been seeking the remains of a child thought to have come to an untimely end in June last, about a month after its birth.

Chief Owen D. Friend conducted the local investigation for several weeks and then the matter was taken up by Provincial Constable Taylor of Whitby and County Constable J. Greentree, who, a few days ago, made a search of the premises formerly occupied by the suspected person near Thorntons Corners, however, so far as is known nothing tangible was discovered.

Unmarried Mother.

The story told in connection with the affair is that about the first of May last year, a young unmarried woman gave birth to a child on the farm of her sister, living near this city, and leaving the infant in the care of her sister went out at service in Oshawa and was told by the acting guardian of her child that the baby had been adopted. This was accepted by the mother, and the matter ended there, it is said; then month later some information was given a Salvation Army Officer and the matter was brought to the attention of the police who investigated statements to the effect that the child had been murdered and its body burnt in a brush wood pile on the farm, unknown to either the child's mother or the husband of the woman suspected, who also had accepted the adoption story told by his wife

Crown Attorney Grierson, spoken to on the matter, said neither the police nor he, had anything to say about the matter, that is was not the policy of the department to give information while a matter was still before hem However he did confirm the report that the matter was before the Attorney General, that no decision had been reached, but he thought one might be soon Constable Taylor and Chief Friend declined to discuss the issue

May Charge Murder

Information at hand says the police were partly successful in their investigation, however. They have been unable to locate the remains, but have other tangible information at hand that is said may result in a charge against at least one of the parties involved; this may be a charge of murder or indignity to a dead body, just as the Attorney General directs.

One of the questions to be decided is the procedure to be adopted; whether a charge will be laid at once or an inquest ordered.

DR. WAKE'S PATIENT.

Packed House Greeted Final Performance at St. John's.

There was a packed house at St. John's Parish Hall last evening for the second and final performance of "Dr. Wake's Patient," by the A.Y.P.A. of the church. The production ran along very smoothly and much applause greeted the efforts of the energetic cast, who presented their director, Mrs. W. McKee Bingham, with a bouquet of roses at the conclusion of the performance. Mr. Dick Perry's solo in the Pierrot interlude was much enjoyed. During an intermission, Mrs. Bingham made a brief curtain speech, extending thanks to all who had taken part and helped in the production, including Dr. G. S. Cameron, who coached the members in the scene in the doctor's waiting room, and the Conservatory of Music, and Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons for stage settings. After the performance, the cast and their friends had a social hour, with a dance and service of refreshments.

The world may owe us a living, but we've got to be good collectors to get it.

AT THE GRAND TO-NIGHT

Dr. Loudon Nearly Needed To Call On Self For Aid

Dr. T. G. Loudon nearly became his own patient at 12.30 today. When he was turning his automobile into his laneway on Brock street the right front wheel stayed in the middle of the road, while the car dived for the sidewalk. The car needed expert attention to attach the lost member, but Dr. Loundon escaped unhurt.

NEW LIGHTING MET APPROVAL

Mayor and Council Inspected System Installed by Utilities Commission.

ON WATER STREET.

Last night the Mayor and Aldermen met with the members of the Utilities Commission to inspect the new lights which have been installed at the north end of George and Water Streets.

The Utilities Commission is rebuilding the distribution lines throughout the city, and has completed that portion covered by last night's demonstration.

The new lights were placed above the old incandescent lamps, and when the Council arrived the streets were brilliantly lighted. A switch was arranged to turn off the new illumination, allowing the old lamps to carry on, and it was as if one had stepped from daylight into darkness, the contrast was so great.

Should the Council adopt this new system of lighting, installation would be made to conform to shade trees and other obstructions, so as to obtain the greatest degree of efficiency from the new lamps.

No estimate has been made covering the difference in cost, as for the moment the Commission desires only to demonstrate a superior lamp with shade to illuminate the streets, as it has been felt for some time that the incandescent lamps are not satisfactory.

Further, the incandescent lamps are on the domestic service and can not be turned off during the day, causing comment both by visitors and citizens at the apparent waste of energy.

When the entire distribution lines are renewed, the Commission will have control of all street lighting, and it will be turned on and off as required.

Altogether the demonstration was very satisfactory to the Mayor and Council.

FATHER SAID HE'S AFRAID OF SON

Family Discord Was Aired in Local Police Court This Morning.

WOMAN INSANE.

A family jar was aired in Police Court this morning, when a young man brought up on a charge of refusing to work and vagrancy, on complaint of his father, retaliated by accusing his parent of turning him out of the house after he had helped him to peddle goods from door to door and had done a lot of woodcutting for him. The father asserted that he was afraid of the son, who had threatened him with bodily harm, he said, and the two glared at each other as the accused passed out, on remand for a week, by request of Constable Maker.

Mentally Incapable.

The young woman who was charged with insanity some time ago, and was examined by two local physicians, who declared her sane, to be again later examined by two other doctors and declared mentally incapable, was in Police Court this morning. Her brother and sister-in-law were in the box, also Sergeant Deannard and Police Matron Smith, all testifying with regard to her actions at different times. Mrs. Smith was of the opinion that proper medical treatment would have a beneficial effect on the girl's condition. Sergeant Deannard told of threats made by her after being brought to the Police Station, when she threatened visitors, Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Daw, with bodily harm.

Asked whether she wished to make a statement, the young woman, who had preserved an impassive front during the giving of evidence, burst forth into a stream of rather incoherent talk, in which she asserted that the Rev. Mr. Daw, pastor of the Free Methodist Church, considered all people who were not members of his church as being "damned" and "lost souls." She said that he had gone about, saying that her soul was lost and that she was an immoral woman, and that his remarks had been repeated to her on various occasions by more or less well-intentioned acquaintances. She thought that the pastor had "picked" on her for some special reason, asserted that his manner of entrance into houses where he held prayer meetings was a bold one, as he came unannounced and walked in without any preliminary warning, and said that his conversation was mainly confined to the query, "Are you saved?"

Magistrate Langley found the young woman insane, as charged, and remanded her for a week on the charge of vagrancy laid against her.

The man who makes a girl think about him when she has made up her mind never to think of him again, is the one man in the world for her.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND

VAUDEVILLE AND PICTURES.

The vaudeville programme which is a big item of interest at the Grand Opera House, has two big acts for the week-end, in a musical and an acrobatic offering. Two young ladies, the Misses Lois Lloyd and Warren May, have a bright novelty in a radio, piano and banjo number, and the Three Rianos have a cyclonic tumbling and acrobatic feature.

"The Midnight Express" is the feature picture for Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The following are some of the press notices for this production:

"The Midnight Express," which is a far better production than one is apt to gather from the title . . . the story is unfolded with skill and imagination. In "The Midnight Express" one sees a film which is carefully edited and well titled. The interest of the story is maintained throughout.—Reviewed by Mourdant Hall, New York Times.

The film is filled with action. William Haines is well cast as the hero. Miss Hammerstein is most charming. . . . and while melodrama reeked "The Midnight Express" dashed safely by — and I swear, I shrieked.—Reviewed by Rose Pelswick, New York Evening Journal.

For a thrilling ride up a dangerous grade, for a fight that's a two-fisted fight, and for lovely pictures of gracious Elaine Hammerstein, "The Midnight Express" is sound film fare. The climax is a whiz for action. Everything happens that could and couldn't happen.—Reviewed by Mildred Spain, Daily News.

A gripping yarn, full of fight and punch scenes. Sure fire stuff. If excitement makes a picture this picture is made.—Reviewed by Joseph Fliesler, New York Morning Telegraph.

Good box office number that will bring them in and send them out satisfied. Has a lot of old-fashioned but valuable audience appeal.—Film Daily.

"The Midnight Express" is frankly a "mad" melodrama, but it is a glorious film of an express train and its gigantic engine. Anyone cherishing a soft spot in his heart for the chuggers of the rail and the men who care for the safety of the travellers will revel in this picture.—Reviewed by Dorothy Herzog, Daily Mirror.

AT THE REGENT

BIG PRODUCTION FOR SERIAL THRILLER.

"Into the Net" Utilizes All Branches of Great Police Department of New York City.

The New York policeman rarely fails to impress and amaze the out-of-town visitor. Many declare that they had never before known that a policeman was not required to be fat. Up-standing, athletic, blue-coated and brass-buttoned fighting men are they—men with the military bearing of trained soldiers—men who make New York behave—men who are feared by law-breakers the world over—these are New York's "finest." They appeal irresistibly to the heroic and to the spirit of adventure and action that exists in all of us.

The Regent Theatre will present a chapter of "Into the Net" every week for ten successive weeks. It tells a story that is at once graphic, thrilling and real. Its happenings are true to life because they are life. They are pages from the note book of Commissioner Enright himself, and no man on earth is better qualified to discuss that particular phase of life. Frank Leon Smith, who wrote the scenario; George B. Seitz, who directed, and Malcolm Strauss, the producer, worked in close touch with Commissioner Enright. Every facility was turned over to Messrs. Smith, Seitz, and Strauss. The policemen, lieutenants, captains and inspectors of the story are the real thing.

THOMSON BULLDOGS REAL BULL IN MEXICAN RING

An underslung two-ton bull, as harmless as a super Juggernaut and as gentle as a wounded grizzly, was Fred Thomson's latest opponent in a catch-as-catch-can grappling match during the filming of "Thundering Hoofs," the first of the new Thomson series for F.B.O., now playing at the Regent Theatre.

The answer to this apparently unequal battle may be seen on the screen, but the final result does not show the close calls and the terrible spills the champion athlete and picture star received when he undertook to "bulldog" a bull in a Mexican ring. Thomson is perhaps the only man on the screen who has ever attempted this feat, and that he did it at all speaks volumes for his strength, courage and agility.

The action of the story calls for Fred to rescue his great horse, Silver King, from the horns of the infuriated animal. Silver King has been stolen by Mexican bandits and sold to serve as "bull bait" in the cruel sport of the torreador. And Thomson not only makes the rescue, but actually leaps to the back of the charging animal, grasps the horns and twists the big bull's neck until he wins a "fall" while Silver King makes good his escape!

Try that, Cowboys, if you think you're good at "bulldogging!"

AT THE ROYAL

"HOOT" PORTRAYS ENGAGING ROLE IN "SAWDUST TRAIL" CIRCUS TALE.

Hoot Gibson is one motion picture star who might almost be labelled "sure fire." So seldom does this rollicking youth fail to entertain that no immediate record of such occurrence is at hand.

To see a sign to the effect that "Universal presents Hoot Gibson in ——" is a pretty sure indication that that company has tossed a horseshoe for another ringer.

Gibson's latest feature is "The Sawdust Trail" and although strange tales of hard luck during the making of the picture floated out of the Universal studios the result belies any misfortune. The picture opened to-day at the Royal.

Hoot portrays the role of a college chap who fakes a strange personality because he doesn't want to work in his father's iron foundry. He stays in college seven years and his folks consider him a weakling. He's really "one of the boys" and a ring-leader in a set whose pace was set with racing cars, but this fact he kept carefully concealed from his father and mother.

A noted physician discovers the youth's deception and sympathizes with him after one look at the foundry. The physician manoeuvres to get him a job with a wild west show and here the real fun begins.

With the show is a greatly feared lady known as "Calamity June." She hates men and mighty is the calamity that befalls the lad who attempts to court her favor, for he always courts disaster. Despite this she's a likeable sort, and on her birthday the boys in the show present her with gifts. The new member of the show troupe displays a sense of humor that nearly wrecks his career by presenting the woman of pugilistic nature with a set of boxing gloves. She calmly dons a pair and knocks him all over the lot.

Then he sets out to court Calamity June, and after surviving a great deal of punishment accomplishes this feat in one of the most thrilling automobile chases ever converted to the screen.

Gibson shows remarkable versatility in the role and is very funny. Josie Sedgwick is excellent in the part of Calamity June, a part which affords her greatest role since her exceptional part in "Jubilo." Harry Todd, Charles French, David Torrence and G. Raymond Nye, all contribute to the general excellence of an unusually well balanced production.

AT THE CAPITOL

VIVID SEA WRECK IN "ONLY WOMAN."

Norma Talmadge's Latest Photo-drama Scores Huge Success.

There is a shipwreck scene in Norma Talmadge's new picture "The Only Woman," which, to our way of thinking, is one of the most vivid and real bits of action ever brought to the screen.

As a rule such scenes are done for the most part, in miniature, necessitating long distance photography which dilutes the realism of the effect. Here, however, is staged a real shipwreck on a real ocean. A beautiful yacht is borne down upon by a three-masted schooner on the storm-tossed deep and Norma and Eugene O'Brien, her leading man, as well as a crew of minor players, are seen battling for their very existence.

Seated in the Capitol Theatre last evening, one could almost hear the crash as the big vessel smashed into the yacht, catching it amidships and rending it into splinters. And the cries of the perishing sailors seemed to rise above the roar of the sea as they fought each other for seats in the lifeboats.

There was no miniature work in the scene. It was all real, so vividly real that the audience gasped as the thrilling climax was reached.

Norma, always an actress par excellence, is seen at her best as a young woman who sacrifices herself on the marriage altar to save her father from disgrace. She hates her husband, even as she marches up the church aisle to become his bride, and she vows to herself that she will never really love him.

It is on their honeymoon on his private yacht that the shipwreck occurs, and this mutual danger brings the couple together in true love.

The Doctor advised him to join a

WILD WEST SHOW

"for his health." The way this "tenderfoot" became "hardboiled" makes one of the most thrilling and romantic pictures of the year.

POST OFFICE IS BUILT ON GOLD THINK DIGGERS

Treasure Stolen From Montezuma is Supposed to Nestle There.

OLD CAUSEWAY

Romantic Story of Buried Gold Ingots and Precious Stones.

(By Alma Reed.)

MEXICO CITY, February 19. — Is Mexico City's post office built on a foundation of gold ingots and precious stones?

The claim is supported by Dr. Manuel Gamio, director of anthropology for the Mexican republic, who believes that the fabulous treasure of Montezuma, inherited from the kings of Anahac and wrung from his vassals, is to be found beneath this palatial structure.

As a result of private investigations, several individuals, and one well known salvage concern have recently applied to the Department of Anthropology for permission to excavate under the post office. One American enthusiast offered to advance $10,000 for the privilege and to divide his finds equally with the government.

Dr. Gamio bases his theory on the various acounts of the Spanish evacuation of the Atzec capital on the celebrated "Dismal Night" of July 1, 1520. The distinguished archaeologist points out that history clearly places the scene of the disastrous retreat of Cortez on the Tlacopan Causeway, one of the three great causeways that traversed ake Tezcuco and linked the island city of Tenochitlan to the mainland. Today this ancient road is known as the "Calle Tacuba."

On the "Dismal Night," or the "Noche Triste," as it is referred to in the story of the conquest, the Spaniards and their Indian allies, the Tlascalans, together numbering several thousand, abandoned the palace of the dead Emperor, Montezuma. All were loaded with rich booty.

When Cortez decided to retreat he invited the soldiers to help themselves to the great heaps of gold and jewels, stored in one of the halls, reminding them however that "he travels safest in the dark night who travels lightest." The share belonging to the Spanish crown as well as his own share and those of his favorite cavaliers were packed on the horses and mules.

On gaining the causeway, the Spaniards crossed the canal by means of a portable bridge. Midway they were severely attacked by the infuriated Aztecs, who swarmed the dikes. Under a thick shower of arrows they rushed along the causeway until they reached the second breach, where they halted to await the arrival of the portable bridge. Here in their helplessness on the brink of the gulf they learned that the rear was unable to raise the ponderous framework which the passage of the forces and the heavy equipment had deeply imbedded in the earth.

Cavalry and infantry leaped pell-mell into the water as the only slender hope. In frightful numbers they were mowed down by Azetc clubs and shafts. Finally the opening in the causeway became so filled with "ammunition waggons, heavy guns, bales of rich stuffs, chests of solid ingots, and the bodies of men and horses"—that the survivors were able to cross on a passage formed of the wreckage. Only a remnant of the army managed to reach the third canal, where Alvarado, unhorsed and wounded, performed the historic feat of clearing the wide gap at a single jump with the aid of his lance.

But it was at the second canal that the bulk of the Atzec plunder went down with the packanimals and the slain soldiers. The site, long ago reclaimed from Lake Tezcuco by the draining of the Valley of Mexico, is now marked by the intersection of the old Tacuba Road, and the modern street of the National Theatre. On it stands the central post office.

The treasure hunters who petition Dr. Gamio for excavating concessions, are doubtless inspired by a letter written by Cortez himself to the King of Spain, shortly before the "Dismal Night" in which the Conqueror describes the plunder. After enumerating the "bars and sheets of gold, the silver, feather work and the stones and other things of value alloted to Your Sacred Majesty," he adds in comment:

"These besides their value, are such, and so marvellous, that for the sake of their novelty and strangeness, they have no price, nor is it probable that all the princes ever heard of in the world possess such treasure."

BOARD OF EDUCATION REFUSED NAMES OF CULPRITS IN THEFT OF EXAMINATION PAPERS HERE

Deputation Waited on Premier Ferguson To-day Without Result.

MINISTER ADAMANT.

No Person Adjudged Guilty By Investigator of the Case.

TORONTO, February 19 (Special to The Examiner). — A deputation from Peterborough waited upon Premier Ferguson to-day, and asked him for the report made by a representative of the Provincial Police over the alleged stealing of examination papers at Peterborough.

The deputation represented the Board of Education at Peterborough.

After the Cabinet Council meeting Premier Ferguson stated that he had discussed the matter with the deputation from Peterborough, and pointed out the difficulties which may arise from the giving out of the report.

The Premier is going to write a letter to the Board of Education at Peterborough, and may give them certain information.

It will be remembered that some time ago a sensation was caused in Peterborough by allegations that examination papers had been stolen prior to the High School examinations.

Report General.

The deputation said that the names of those implicated should be made public so that all innocent parties would be cleared.

"I promised I would write the Board a letter containing a report," said the Premier.

"I also told them that the report of the investigation was general in form, and that no person was adjudged guilty by him."

Latest Comment on Grain and Industrial Markets.

Closing Quotations on Principal Active Stocks.

CHICAGO

Opinions on the futures of the grain market expressed after the close yesterday were more marked than on any previous day in a long time. St. Louis message said it is difficult to buy hard winter wheat from Omaha, Kansas City or other southwest terminals. The tremendous export business of recent days has reduced the amount of wheat available. Advices from various points indicated a pause in foreign buying in this country, but while New York said exporters there were apparently awaiting market developments, southwest points attributed the reduction of foreign business to lack of important offerings. The basis is for wheat was strong with sales of 11,000 bushels to exporters. Corn sold on a better basis relative to May wheat; rye was nominal, with no offerings. A Minneapolis message said the movement of wheat from farmers' hands in the southwest is the smallest in on the crop; it is at a standstill in many sections.

TORONTO, Feb. 19.—(Canadian Press.)— George Sewell (Progressive, North Norfolk), has a question on the order paper in the Legislature asking what the revenue from taxes on race courses has been since the tax was imposed.

D. J. Taylor (Progresive), asks if Hon. Dr. Carr, minister without portfolio, is still a member of the Government, and if he used the following words in an address to a meeting said to have been held by Conservative members: "I have not resigned. But if it comes to an issue whether I will remain a member of the Government, or whether I will stay with this group and support what you are trying to bring about, I will be with you." It is stated that the meeting referred to was called to consider securing freedom from provisions of the Ontario Temperance Act.

NURSES HELPED BY BRIDGE AND EUCHRE

Charitable and Relief Work of Peterboro Chapter Will Benefit.

The bridge and euchre party held last evening in the G.W.V.A. hall, under the auspices of the Peterboro Chapter Graduate Nurses' Association, was a huge success in every way. Sixty five tables of cards were played with a total of about three hundred people present, and the nurses realized a handsome sum for the charitable and relief work of the different organizations they assist. Decorations were carried out in red and white, with red candles on the window sills. During the service of a dainty supper the Grand opera house orchestra contributed some excellent music, and several pianoforte selections were also given by Mrs. F. A. Hodgson. Prizes for cards were won at the bridge tables by Miss Hazel Buller and Mr. L. Inman, with consolation awards to Mrs. A. L. Amys and Mr. J. R. McDonald. Euchre prizes went to Mrs. J. Patte and Mr. Smith. Mrs. Parker won the consolation prize.

Ladies in charge of card party were the Misses A. Thornton and A. Price, general convenors. Mrs. W. T. Holloway, Mrs. G. McCartney and the Misses M. Foote and Lapp looked after the decorations; Mrs. M. E. Leeson and Mrs. M. Pringle had charge of the bridge tables, assisted by Mrs. Holloway and the Misses A. Howson and H. Anderson, and Mrs. F. LaPlante, Mrs. B. Law, and the Misses L. Simons, McGrath and White were in charge of euchre. Miss M. Deyell was convenor of the refreshment committee, assisted by the Misses McAuliffe, Ferguson and Clancy. Several of the doctors, Drs. Amys, Morgan, Clark and Louden, assisted in serving refreshments.

ENGLAND WANTS MORE AIRPLANES

Parliament Will Be Asked For 21,319,300 Pounds Sterling

FOR EXPANSION.

LONDON, Feb. 19 (Canadian Press).—Parliament will be asked to sanction an expenditure of 21,319,300 pounds for maintenance and expansion of the air force during the financial years 1925-1926, Air Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare announced in making public the estimates today.

While the service itself only asks 15,513,000 pounds, the secretary explained the Colonial office asks 3,-116,700 pounds for air use in Palestine, Trans-Jordania and Irak; the Admiralty wants 1,320,000 pounds for the fleet, and other amounts including repayments and other ordinary appropriations bring the total to the gross estimate given.

The Air Society points out that the experiment programme for the coming year contemplates the commencement of twelve types of aircraft and twelve types of engines.

Regarding airship development, Sir Samuel says the commercial service is the principal object to be kept in view at present and the programme is made sufficiently elastic to accelerate a transition to this phase of commercial operations. The R-33 has been conditioned for experimental flights and the R-36 is being reconditioned for a flight to Egypt, while an exhaustive test is being made in other directions to ensure the safety and success of the new ships, which are twice as large as any previously constructed.

The estimates include provision for the air minister's salary being raised to the level of those of the other secretaries of state.

LAST OF FAMILY PLATE.

After holding the Carew Curling Challenge Cup for three successive years against all comers, Granites were compelled to ultimately accept the inevitable and give up possession of the trophy which had almost been recognised as perpetual property.

Millbrook Club came along with a rink, and after playing all kinds of pranks with that strong quartette of Granites, comprising W. R. Macdonald, Fred Barker, John Rennie, and Dr. Burns, Millbrook had the intense satisfaction of carrying away the last of the "family plate" by 20 shots to 9.

When a boy runs out of money he cashes in his pop bottles. When a farmer cannot buy gasoline he sells accumulated feed sacks to the grain dealer. When the daughter of the house needs extra dimes she turns in the milk bottles, when the housewife is broke she sells an old coat, or overdraws the family account at the bank, but the average husband and father when his pile of ready cash is exhausted, merely does without things until payday.

There are a great many articles in the papers these days on how to prolong your life, but we haven't seen one yet on why.

TROPHY TO MARK HUSKY'S BRAVERY

Balto, Who Led Team With Relief For Nome, Honored in Death.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—(Special).—The memory of the husky hero, Balto, who thrilled the entire continent with the story of his leadership of the team which recently carried diphtheria anti-toxin to Nome, Alaska, during the epidemic there, is to be perpetuated by a trophy awarded to the best husky in the winning team in the eastern international dog sled derby, held at Quebec City each year. This announcement comes on the eve of the great race which commences to-day. The donor of the trophy is Mrs. Frank T. Clark, of the Fairfax Pomeranian Kennels, Sheepshead Bay, N.Y., and the first year's prize is to consist of an antique Sheffield silver plate, twenty-four inches long, engraved with an inscription and the name of the winner.

Struck with the fine qualities of determination, courage and endurance displayed by Balto, who battled his way in record time at the head of twelve dogs, driven by Gunnar Kasson, 650 miles from Nenana to Nome, through 50 below zero weather and a wind blowing 80 miles an hour, and then died a martyr to duty and the savior of hundreds of lives, Mrs. Clarke resolved some days ago to offer the trophy, but it was only to-day that she announced through the Canadian Pacific Railway her decision to award it to the Quebec race.

AMENDMENT TO CONSTITUTION IS FAVORED BY CRERAR IN DEBATE

Former Leader of Agrarians Says Canada Has Advanced Far in Decade.

DEBATE CONTINUED

Montreal and Toronto Members Find Neither Need Nor Desire for Change.

OTTAWA, Feb. 20 (Candian Press).—In resuming the debate on the resolution of W. F. MacLean (Conservative, York South) proposing an amendment to the British North America Act, Sir Henry Drayton (Conservative, West York) yesterday pointed out that there were several points which should be borne in mind before any such step was seriously considered.

"All our constitutional difficulties are of our own making," stated Sir Henry. "Furthermore, the troubles we have are on questions where the rights of the Dominion are infringed, or the rights of the province are infringed by the federal parliament."

Canada's difficulties in regard to the British North America Act, were not constiutional, but functional. "It is not the structure, but what we are doing with the structure, that is the matter," he declared.

There was in Canada an increasing content with the relationship of Canada to the Empire, said Sir Henry. There was much building of windmills by critics of Imperial relations, but it was to be hoped that some day when the finances of Canada were in a better position that this country could play a more worthy part in the Empire.

"Does the Hon. Member think that by securing the right to amend our own constitution we would injure the ties of the Empire" asked T. A. Crerar (Progressive, Marquette).

There had been talk, said Sir Henry in reply, which was harmless insofar as Canada was concerned, but which was taken by outsiders as an indication of discontent within the Empire.

Anything that Canada could do, he said in conclusion, to assure the world that Canada was part and Parcel of the British Empire was all to the good.

W. C. Good (Progressive, Brant) said that there was a widespread feeling that the present situation respecting our powers over our own constitution was not satisfactory. Every treaty needed modification from time to time, and this was true of the British North America Act.

An Elective Senate.

Thomas Vien (Liberal, Lotbiniere) agreed with the Minister of Justice, that before any change in the constitution could be made, the consent of all parties to the original agreement should be obtained. The proposal before the House "would be a radical amendment," and if anything was done it should be done by conference with the provinces.

As a "good democrat," Mr. Vien thought that the Senate should be representative of public opinion. The only way to achieve this was to make the Senate elective

There were cries of "Non, No," and Mr. Vien remarked that they probably came from men who aspired to an appointment to the Senate. He thought that perhaps Senators should be elected for a longer period than members of the House of Commons—perhaps nine years, as was the custom in France. He would like to see some changes in the Canadian constitution. This did not mean that he was a secessionist.

Always within the British Empire, Canada should have independence, complete and real. Where else, he asked, was there an independent nation which must apply to a court in another country for legal decisions. Who else among the nations must receive as its chief magistrate the appointee of an outside government, or conduct its diplomatic relations through the medium of somebody else's ambassador.

Form of Secession

Mr. Vein thought the Governor-General should be appointed on advice of the dominion government rather than that of the imperial government. L. H. Martell (Liberal, Hants) interrupted to say that this sort of complete independence was really one form of secession, but Mr. Vien sharply disagreed and re-iterated his keen desire that Canada should remain within the Empire. He went on to say that Monte Carlo had more independence than had

LOU TELLEGEN PERFECT PAPA

Kept Marriage to Isabel Craven Dilworth Secret 18 Months.

SON OF 8 MONTHS.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., February 20. — The "mystery bride" of Lou Tellegen, famous stage and screen star, former husband of Geraldine Farrar, was revealed yesterday as Isabel Craven Dilworth, twenty-two, daughter of the multi-millionaire glass manufacturer of Philadelphia.

Mrs. Tellegen is a granddaughter of Governor Dale of Virginia, and a cousin of the Earl of Craven in England.

Tellegen was married in Rutherford, N.J., on 17th December, 1923, the day following Geraldine Farrar's divorce from the actor the grand opera star had called the "perfect lover."

Miss Dilworth, after being graduated from Ward-Belmont, exclusive Nashville, Tenn., school, attended a dramatic school in New York and later was accepted for a role by Tellegen in the stage version of "Don Juan."

A bond of affection born of the throbbing love story, brought about the romance of Tellegen and the young actress, which ended in their midnight marriage in New Jersey.

Tellegen, former husband of Geraldine Farrar, and his bride of more than a year and a half, are the parents of a son, christened Rex. He was born in the actor's summer home on the Florida coast on 28th July, 1924, the couple revealed.

For more than eight months Mrs. Tellegen has been a mother. She said:

"Just as we decided to keep our marriage secret, so we hid the birth of our boy, because we feared the knowledge to the world would be a detriment to our careres."

Termed the "perfect lover" by his former wife, Lou Tellegen was rated even higher by his new wife. She said:

"He is more than the 'perfect lover,' he is the perfect husband, the perfect father. Lou knows when 'feeding times' are due and a thousand other things about the care of babies."

KIRKFIELD HAS ANOTHER BLAZE

Burning of Lady MacKenzie Inn and Post Office Complete Destruction of Village.

LOSS OVER $100,000.

LINDSAY, Feb. 20.—(Special to The Examiner).—Fire which broke out in the cellar this forenoon completely destroyed the beautiful Lady MacKenzie Inn at Kirkfield, with nearly all of its contents, and the Post Office building adjoining. This practically completes the wiping out of the village proper, which started with a disastrous fire three weeks ago.

The Inn, noted all over the continent for its beauty of architecture and complete equipment, was built twelve years ago by the late Lady MacKenzie at a cost of $100,000. Its was modern in every respect, of brick construction, with music-room, billiard room, large reception rooms and twenty guest rooms, all furnished in the most splendid style. During the winter months it was in charge of Mrs. W. J. Mitchell and a staff of eight. In the summer, it attracted tourists from all parts of Canada and United States.

The fire had made great headway when discovered, and the apparatus in the building was insufficient to cope with the outbreak. Insurance was carried, but the amount could not be ascertained this morning. The building is the property of the Lady MacKenzie estate.

GLORIA UNDER KNIFE IN PARIS

Film Star Underwent Operation For Old Injury in Movies.

STAYS IN PICTURES.

PARIS, February 20. — Gloria Swanson was hurriedly and mysteriously removed from her hotel on Wednesday and taken to a hospital, where an operation was performed.

She gave this statement to the press:

"I am getting on fine and feeling much better. The fever has practically disappeared, and the doctor says my temperature is only 99. I expect to sail for New York in spite of my apparent breakdown. And you may also say that I still have no intention of quitting the movies."

Gloria and her husband, the Marquis de la Falaise, were to have sailed on Wednesday on the liner France, and numberless friends and admirers were at the station to bid them good-bye. Then it was learned that Gloria had been suddenly hurried to the private hospital of Dr. Vaudescal.

The boat train left at 10.05, and the only members of the party to board the liner France were Gloria's two children and their nurse.

Gloria, from her sick bed, said:

"I suppose you are wondering why I do not consider my husband's wishes and quit the movies. I do not quit because it would not be fair to those who have spent millions in starring me. I represent a big investment to them, and I would be ungrateful to quit them suddenly. I intend to continue, perhaps for some years."

Gloria's operation was said to be due to injuries received in falling from a horse in a rapid-fire film scene.

TAX FREE BONDS.

Dominion's Total at Present is $982,386,900.

OTTAWA, February 20. — The Dominion of Canada tax free bonds outstanding at present, total $982,386,900, it was stated in the House of Commons yesterday, by the acting Minister of Finance, in answer to a question from J. A. Wallace, Progressive, Norfolk.

THE WEATHER

Yesterday morning the thermometer was at the zero point, in the afternoon it was up to 40 degrees—a range (or difference in temperature) of forty degrees in less than ten hours. Such a great difference but seldom occurs. This morning showed 16 above zero. Little complaint can justly be made of the weather conditions for February. —W. P.

In addition, the Royal Bank building, adjacent, is damaged by smoke and water, the Commercial Lunch is similarly damaged, and a number of persons occupying the blocks involved will lose from the same causes. Damage was estimated at between $75,000 and $100,000.

MOUNTED POLICE FORCE DECLINING

Decrease in Personnel Since 1920, But Work Has Grown.

OTTAWA, Feb. 20. — (Canadian Press).—Canada's Mounted Police Force decreases numerically year by year. In 1920 the Royal Canadian Mounted Police had 73 officers and 1,598 men on its roster. In 1924 there were only 58 officers and 962 men. The number of horses used by the famous Rangers dropped from 942 in 1920 to 433 in 1924.

The number of cases handled by the Mounties, however, increased about 36 per cent. last year. The actual number was 30,680.

More than a third of the service is stationed in Ontario, 72 being at headquarters in Ottawa and 295 in Ontario generally. There are 192 Mounties in Saskatchewan, 128 being in Alberta, 109 in British Columbia, 51 in Manitoba, 40 in the Yukon, 52 in the North-West Territories, 52 in the Maritimes, 27 in Quebec, and an even dozen distributed over the unclassified hinterland round Baffin, Ellesmere and North Devon Islands.

FOUR KILLED ON SHIP.

Gasoline Exploded on the "Canadian Navigator."

KINGSTON, St. Vincent, B.W.I., Feb. 20.—(Canadian Press). — Advices received here yesterday from Barbadoes say that the fire on board the steamer Canadian Navigator broke out on Tuesday while the steamer was discharging cargo from her No. 2 hold. The cargo included 500 drums of gasoline.

The fire was preceded by a terrific explosion, which killed four laborers. The crew endeavored to save the ship, but when this was found impossible it was towed outside the harbour and set adrift. Captain Baker was ashore when the fire broke out.

FALL WAS FATAL.

TRURO, N.S., Feb. 20.—(Canadian Press).—Mrs. Molson, aged 47, of this town, fell downstairs Wednesday afternoon while doing her housework, sustained a fractured skull and died several hours later.

INDIANS TAKEN BY OVERSEERS

Three Rounded Up on Pigeon Lake With 100 Lbs. of Fish.

A LONG CHASE

LINDSAY, Feb. 20. — Eliza's flight across the ice in "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was scarcely more thrilling than the chase of a party of Indians by two Game Inspectors on Pigeon Lake Wednesday.

Three Indians, with their sleds and about 100 pounds of maskinonge which they had caught illegally, were rounded up by Overseers Stalker and Windsor after a pursuit of three-quarters of a mile, the game officers driving two blood mares.

It appears that the accused had been under suspicion for some time, and that a day or so previously no less than ten Indians were noticed at one time fishing through holes in the ice. The three men had 14 maskinonge on their sleds, which they had secured in two hours' time, during which time they had also chiselled their way through the ice. This being the case, readers can form their own conclusions of how many fish were snared by the ten men.

Game Overseers are determined to protect the fish, and it is understood that other cases of illegal fishing are pending.

It was a thrilling chase. While Officers Stalker and Windsor, the latter being from Haliburton, were seated in their cutter on the banks of the lake and hidden from sight by trees and bushes, they saw the Indians start out across the ice. Assuming that they intended to do some more fishing, the Overseers waited until the Indians had got about half way across the lake.

However, the Indians kept on going, and then it was that the driver tightened his reins, and the chase started. The ice was glare and bare of snow. It was a perfect race course, and the horses went across the frozen lake like a streak. The speed of the Indians and their endurance was a surprise to the Overseers. They were not only fleet of foot, but possessed unusual strength and they covered the three-quarters of a mile across the opposite shore in record time, hauling their sleds after them.

Reaching the shore, they dashed up the easy sloping bank into the open bush, the driver of the cutter following as far as he could with the team. Then the Overseers, who had doffed their overcoats, set out and pursued the chase in the deep snow. They were fresh, while the Indians were tiring, and they were soon on top of the sleds and thus brought the Indians to a halt. The latter showed no resistance and their fish and tools were confiscated. It is possible other proceedings may follow.

Overseer Stalker promises ample protection of the waters in the spring, and states that he will have the assistance of a number of Provincial officers.

TORONTO "DRYS" WITH FERGUSON ON BEER ISSUE

Conservative Members of Ridings That Voted Dry Favor Amendment of Govt.

RANEY HURT O.T.A.

Severe Administration of Temperance Law Affected Sentiment of Province.

TORONTO, Feb. 20.—(Canadian Press).—Conservative members representing ridings which voted 'dry' in the last plebiscite are practically all behind the Government in its amendment to the Ontario Temperance Act increasing the strength of beer. Yesterday afternoon C. R. McKeown (Con., Dufferin), known for many years as an ardent temperance man, expressed his approval of the amendment and the Government that proposed it. In discussing the amendment, Mr. McKeown said that he proposed "to blow the froth off the beer and see what was underneath." He declared that the O.T.A. commenced to die under the Raney administration, and that sentiment had been killed under the "thumb screw and wrack treatment of the bigot."

R. H. Kemp (Prog., Lincoln) declared that he was against the increased strength of beer proposal, and that the Premier had broken his pledge by introducing it.

Mr. Kemp accused the Government of passing responsibility to the municipalities in the unemployment situation. He criticized them for failure to follow up experiments in the marketing of tender fruits in Great Britain and branded as unfair the distribution of Hydro power in Ontario because the rural parts were not getting a fair share. He expressed the hope that the St. Lawrence development would be undertaken as a purely provincial work and not by the municipalities.

Lays Blame on Raney.

Mr. McKeown extolled the Government for reducing the provincial debt and the cost of administration. He advocated a pulp wood embargo, but the main portion of his speech was on the O.T.A. He said that the O.T.A. had become hard to enforce because of the methods of the Raney administration. "The master of oppression in O.T.A. matters," he declared, had started a sentiment against it that must be stopped by some means or the Act would be worthless. He maintained that the giving of a non-intoxicating beer to the people would stop much of the sentiment against the Act. He quoted Sir James Whitney as stating, when the temperance convention came to him to protest against the three-fifth clause in local option, that they were in politics "that we will be in politics too." The prohibition union had said the same thing to the present Government in the last few days that they would be in politics at the next elecion.

"Our reply is that we will be in politics too," said Mr. McKeown.

He declared that the prohibition people were assuming that the new beer was intoxicating, while Hon. W. T. Nickle had proved, by the word of many prominent scientists and doctors, that it was not. Mr. McKeown said that the proofs of the non-intoxication of the beer given by Mr. Nickle were far beyond the claims of Mr. Raney that it was.

McCausland Peeved.

Jas. A. McCausland (South West Toronto), before the orders of the day, rose to protest against the criticism which the Premier aimed at him Wednesday for interrupting the speech of Sam Clark. "When the Premier was in opposition he didn't think anything of stirring things up," said Mr. McCausland, "but when he comes to the seats of the mighty he becomes too precise, far too good. This House is almost dead at times and a few remarks thrown in liven things up."

The Premier, replying, said that as the leader of the House, he had the responsibility of seeing that business was carried on and that Wednesday he had felt that there had been sufficient levity when he interfered. "It got to the stage when members could not hear the member speaking, and even the Speaker was interfered with. This persistent interruption cannot be tolerated."

HUMAN GAS TORCH.

Farmer Mistook Gasoline Can For Coal Oil.

SASKATOON, Sask., Feb. 20.—Mistaking a can of gasoline for coal oil, "Mac" Burton, who lives alone near Lucky Lake, Sask., threw some of the fluid on the fire in his shack. The gasoline exploded, gushing over him, and by the time he got outside and rolled in the snow, extinguishing the flames, practically all his clothes were burned off him. Nearly blinded, he ran half a mile to a neighbor, and was taken to town for treatment. He will recover. Only a hole in the floor was burned in the shack.

OPIUM PLEDGE SIGNED BY TEN

Agreement at Conference May Be Approved By Other Countries.

41 ATTENDED

GENEVA, Feb. 20.—Terminating a long and laborious existence, marked by crises and thrills rivalling those of the famous Genoa conference, the International Opium Conference adjourned yesterday sine die. All the delegates harassed and worn out by several months' negotiations, manifested their content that at last things were over.

Those who affixed their signatures to all three instruments adopted by the conference, the anti-narcotic convention proper, the protocol and the final act, which contains a series of resolutions, were Australia, Belgium, Great Britain, Greece, Japan, Luxembourg, The Netherlands, Persia, Portugal and Siam. Both Greece and Persia signed "ad referendum."

German Hesitated.

Bolivia and Hungary merely subscribed to the final act. The German plenipotentiary informed inquirers that he would sign. He walked several times into the protocol chamber, sat in a chair with pen in hand, deliberated, and then walked out without affixing his signature.

This incident caused considerable confusion, as the league of nations issued an official communique that Germany had signed, which was later recalled. Confusion also was caused by the erroneous announcement that Canada had signed, whereas it was Australia. Subsequently, the German delegate told friends that he would sign, but fixed no time.

Others Expected.

League officials remarked last night that too many inferences should not be drawn fror the fact that so few powers subscribed, as many of the plenipotentiaries await instructions from their home governments. Only ten had signed by evening out of the forty-one states which participated in the conference.

President Zahle's valedictory referred to the withdrawal of the United States from the conference, which he regretted.

M. Zahle pleaded eloquently for continued co-operation in the international drive against narcotics and the opium evil, which must continue without any faltering.

IN UNION RANKS.

KINGSTON, Feb. 20.—(Canadian Press)—Cook's Presbyterian Church last night declared for Union by a majority of eighty-one, the vote being 250 for and 169 against. This is the last Presbyterian Church in the city to vote. Of the three other churches, Chalmers and Zion voted for Union and St. Andrew's against it.

THREE ESKIMOS KILLED DURING FRENZY OF EVIL

Leader of Arctic Village Became Insane From Brooding on Religion.

TERROR REIGNED.

Claimed He Was Jesus, With Power to Do Good or Evil.

OTTAWA, Feb. 20 (Canadian Press).—Two murders followed by a killing to defend a woman, are only parts of a grim tale in the most recent Arctic annals of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police made public in the House of Commons when the annual report of the force was tabled by the Minister of Justice.

Having become insane through brooding on religion an Eskimo, headman of a little village at Home Bay, terrorized the community and caused two Eskimos to be put to death. A third was shot when about to strike a woman with a hammer. From the report of Inspector Wilcox it is disclosed that the crimes were committed at a time when all the inhabitants of the village were in a state of excitement bordering insanity. The central figure of the tragedy, known as Neakoteash, had fired the village "with the idea that he was Almighty God and Jesus Christ and possessed the power to do them good or evil." There is no doubt that, had he suggested it before they became frightened for their own lives, they would have annimilated the entire settlement on his command

Began Christmas Day

"The details of the series of tragedies are repulsive and painful," is the only comment made in the brief narrative of the Mounted Police report. At a Christmas Day dance, Neakoteash had announced that he was Jesus and performed grotesque ceremonies. Then ensued a reign of terror absurd and horrible, which overthrew the reason of all the others for several months The first person murdered was a blind man; Neakoteash had tried to make him see, and when he failed he ordered two natives to take him out and stab him The second victim was wounded, and froze slowly to death.

Village in Frenzy.

The report of Corporal McInnes explains the frenzied pitch at which the village lived during the months of apparent insanity.

"It is customary," says the report, "at the completion of a dance when the excitement is still fresh in their minds to close the merriment by all singing a hymn, from the Psalm Book written in Eskimo script, as a finale; so much for the misbegotten idea of Christianity. The sewing of pieces of paper bearing the assumed Biblical names of the Kevetur native on the breasts of their clothes during a religious service given by Neakoteash corresponds to their ancient usage of charms to ward off sickness, spirits, evil shades, etc."

ESTIMATES FOR QUEEN MARY HOSPITAL $7,865

Passed By Property Committee of City Council.

Alderman McIntyre and his Property Committee met last night for the consideration of their estimates. They passed the plumbing inspector's request items for repairs and cleaning. It for $226.85 and sundry small was recommended that the city buy the lot at the east end of the C.P.R. footbridge so as to have possession of a right of way to the bridge. Estimates totaling $7,865.00 for the upkeep of the Queen Mary Isolation Hospital were passed.

A letter was read from the plumbing inspector asking that the plumbing by-law be amended so that it would be necessary to put in a back vent where a water closet is within two feet of the stack. The council will be asked to pass a by-law incorporating this clause in the plumbing by-law.

CHANGES VIEWS AS TO DIVORCE

Resents Wife's Suggestion That He "Have a Good Time With Girls."

REV. TYSON'S CASE.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Feb. 20.—(United Press).—The Rev. Stuart Tyson, an Episcopal clergyman, widely known for his published views on the indissolubility of marriage, has filed suit for divorce from Mrs. Gertrude Wirtenson Tyson, alleging extreme cruelty. Dr. Tyson, a member of St. George's Church, New York, a recipient of two degrees from Oxford, and a prominent figure in the modernist-fundamentalist controversy, said in a sermon two years ago:

"Christ's idea of marriage was one man for one woman until death broke the bond of matrimony."

In his divorce petition Dr. Tyson charges his wife with having an ungovernable temper and a bad disposition, quoting her as saying at one time in a jealous rage, "Go to your Broadway beauties—have your fun with the girls."

Mrs. Tyson denied the charges.

H. H. Stevens Fears Total Economic Absorption by United States.

MONTREAL, Feb. 20—(Canadian Press).—Canada's only hope of averting total economic absorption by the United States is a drastic and swift revision of the tariff to make a wall at least equal with that of the United States, Hon. H. H. Stevens, M.P., for Vancouver Centre, and former Minister of Trade and Commerce in the Meighen Government, declared at the first meeting of the Liberal-Conservative Association of Notre Dame De Grace in Trinity Hall last night.

COMMUNIST SUCCESS IN CANADA BOASTED

Moscow Newspaper Says Communists Organize Strikes Here—Set Up Soviets.

LONDON, Feb. 20. — (Canadian Press).—"Success of Communist Propaganda in Canada" is the subject of an article in the Moscow newspaper Pravda, which, through the London Morning Post's Russian correspondent, is to-day reproduced by the Post which quotes the article.

This article asserts that special Communist lecturers have been travelling through Canada and that the number of Canadian members of the Communist organization has increased considerably in the last few months, so much so that several Communist training schools have been organized in different parts of the Dominion. Canadian Communists, according to the article, are preparing to issue a special weekly supplement to their central organ which appears fortnightly printed in Yiddish. "In the course of the last few months," the Pravda article says, "the Canadian Communist party has been carrying out a most bitter war against the so-called one big union in Nova Scotia and against the Canadian Trades Union. The Communist party in Canada also organized the recent miners' strike in Western Canada, and is at present actively engaged in setting up Soviets of unemployed in various parts of the country."

MILLBROOK WINTER HORSE SHOW WAS A BIG SUCCESS YESTERDAY

Eight Hundred People Attend Exhibit of Various Classes of Horses.

PRIZE LIST.

MILLBROOK, Feb. 20. — The irteenth annual Winter Horse ..how, under the auspices of the Millbrook Agricultural Society, was held on Thursday, beginning at 1 p.m., and was attended by about eight hundred people.

A rather gloomy weather outlook in the morning turned to bright sunshine and clear air for the afternoon, making the day all that could be desired for the occasion. The idea of roping off the pavement on either side of the main street while the different events were in progress, tried this year for the first time, was a decided improvement, keeping the road clear of spectators and preventing accidents.

The judges were William Maher, of Cobourg, and B. McLean, of Lindsay.

Financial support from the merchants of Millbrook, with personal subscriptions from private individuals, gives the Agricultural Society sufficient backing to go ahead with this annual event which brings many strangers to the village, and has a considerable influence in encouraging the spending of time and money on this branch of stock industry throughout the entire district.

The organization is to be congratulated on its enterprising spirit which keeps the Winter Fair up to a high standard, and carries the event through successfully year by year. It has established a record hardly equalled in any other place of this size, and even in larger centres, in the province.

H. A. Fallis, president; H. Tate, vice-president; J. N. McGill, secretary, with Directors A. J. Henderson, W. Larmer, L. H. Winslow, J. A. Vance and L. W. Smith, were among the officials of the society who were indefatigable in their efforts to make the affair the success which it was unanimously conceded to be.

The prize-list is as follows:

PRACTICE MAKES GOOD MARKSMEN

Every Male Citizen of Argentina Between 18 and 45 Must Shoot.

BUENOS AIRES, Feb. 20 (Associated Press)—The reason Argentines rank among the best shots in the world, as shown in various international rifle contests in past years, is that markmanship is obligatory upon every male citizen of Argentina between the ages of 18 and 45. This system of compulsory military intsruction.

Not all citizens have to serve in the army, its ranks being recruited by lot but those chosen may reduce their one year term of service by three-fourths if they take the markmanship course. Those not chosen are obliged to take the course anyway.

Statistics recently issued by the ministry of war show that during last year 44,000 citizens took lessons at the 130 rifle ranges in the country and shot off 4,500,000 cartridges.

ROADHOUSE MAN KILLS DAUGHTER'S ABDUCTOR

Empties Shotgun Into Body —Good Morning's Work,' He Tells the Police.

SUFFERN, N.Y., February 20. — Cerry Palmarozza, a roadhouse keeper, shot and killed Thomas Checcke, 30, a contractor, on Main Street here on Wednesday.

Checke, who was married and the father of nine children, was indicted recently under the Mann Act after being found in Brooklyn with Helen Palmarozza, 18, the daughter of the roadhouse keeper. He was also indicted here for abandonment. Helen was to have been the principal witness against him, and, according to the police, he wrote her a letter on Monday asking her to run away with him.

Palmarozza was going to the bank in his automobile when he passed Checke . He stopped his machine, took a shotgun from the tonneau, and fired both barrels at Checke, and then, it is said, drew a revolver and fired more shots into his body.

Chief of Police Lunney, who was just a block away when the shooting occurred, ran up to Palmarozza, who, Lunney declared, grasped him b ythe hand, shook it, and said: "I did a good morning's work."

Palmarozza was locked up. He will be arraigned on Saturday morning before Justice of the Peace Wennstrom.

ALBERTA HOUSE FIFTH SESSION

Legislature Opened Thursday —Speech Refers to Relief of Farmers.

GOVERNOR ABSENT.

EDMONTON, Alta., Feb. 20.—The fifth session of the fifth Legislative Assembly of Alberta, opened yesterday afternoon with the usual ceremonies. In the absence of Lieut.-Governor Brett, the Speech from the Throne was read by the Hon. Horace Harvey, Chief Justice of Alberta.

The speech form the throne had but few outstanding features. After referring to the loss sustained by the province through the deaths of Chief Justice Scott and Senator J. L. Cote, and welcoming two new members of the Legislature, L. A. Giroux and M. I. Henry, Edmonton, the speech went on to describe the relief work that had been carried out in the southern drought area by the co-operation of the Provincial, Federal Governments and the railways. More suitable locations were secured for those who desired a transfer.

Although the 1924 crop was not so large as its predecessor, the revenue due to increased prices would be very satisfatcory. Dairy products had shown a big increase.

Transportation matters were given especial attention, reference being made to extensions in the Peace River country by either the Canadian Pacific railway or the Canadian National Railways, and a twenty mile addition to the Lacombe and North-western Railway, which will be financed by the province.

A United States' expert was making a survey of the irrigation area, and his report would be submitted at the present session, and Hydro Electric power scheme would also be up for discussion. Excellent progress was made in the highways scheme, and more permanent highways would be built this year.

The Throne speech also held out hope for an early settlement with the Dominion government on the return of Alberta's natural resources.

UNION OF WESTERN FORCES ADVOCATED

Mayor of Winnipeg Regards It Only Way to Impress the East.

WINNIPEG, Man., Feb. 20. — (Canadian Press).—Declaring that the east was dependent on western prosperity for its prosperity, and that therefore it was not economy that the west should be ruled by Ontario and Quebec, Mayor R. H. Webb of Winnipeg, speaking at the opening session of the Manitoba Economic Conference here yesterday, said: "One of the finest things we can do is to unite our forces from Fort William to the Pacific coast, irrespective of politics." He added, "We never will get what we want from Ottawa until the west is a unit."

Mr. Webb, who is a strong advovate of the Hudson Bay route, was referring to the endeavors made to have the Hudson Bay Railway completed, and Premier Mackenzie King's reported statement that for economic reasons the railway could not be built, the Mayor asserted that millions of dollars were being spent in Toronto and Montreal on works of less importance and urgency.

E. H. Marshall, of the Manitoba Education Association, convenor of the National Resources Committee, urged upon the Provincial Government the need for a survey being conducted of the natural resources of Manitoba, to ascertain definitely the possibilities of their development in order that economic use of them might be proceeded with "quickly and sanely." A resolution to this effect is under consideration.

Premier Bracken welcomed the delegates and emphasized the need for obtaining facts, unbiased, rather than prejudiced opinions, about Manitoba's economic conditions, the problems facing industry, and the suburban municipalities.

JAPAN AWAITS AMERICAN PLAN

Afraid Other Powers May Attempt Undue Limitation of Defensive Armaments.

PACIFIC ISLANDS.

Press). — The Daily Mail's Tokio correspondent reports that Japan will probably have nothing official to-day covering the proposed disarmament conference until she learns America's suggestions relative to the agenda.

In general the Mail's correspondent says Japan would welcome a broad principle for the further limitation of arms, but would decline to enter any conference in which the delegates of other powers might attempt undue limitation of "those branches on which Japan's defence denends."

In holding widely separated islands, such as the tropical Formoso and the Arctic Kuriles, Japan, according to the Mail's correspondent, is pinning her defence largely on submarines which she regards as virtually non-offensive so far as the Pacific situation is concerned.

PARENTS DANCE; CHILD CREMATED

Firemen Tried in Vain to Rescue Nine Year Old Boy.

BROTHERS HURT.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Feb. 20 (Candian Press).—Willie, nine-year-old son of ex-Alderman William W. Park, was burned to death and his two younger brothers are in the General Hospital in this city as a result of a fire at Park's residence here at eleven o'clock last night.

When the firemen reached the scene of the blaze, they had no idea there was any one in the house, as Mr. and Mrs. Park were attending a Rotary Club entertainment. Suddenly they were atttracted by the screams of the children from a rear upstairs window.

Firemen went up and were able to rescue the two younger ones, but Willie was dead when brought down. Reports from the hospital are that the children there are suffering severely from burns, but there are hopes they will recover. Park's home was of frame construction and the flames spread rapidly. The cause of the fire is not known.

Queen Maud is reported to have told a friend that if her novel were published it would be issued under a pseudonym, and nobody would have any idea as to the real identity of the writer.

GRAVE MOUNDS TELL HISTORY

Wonderful Find in Mongolia Goes Back Beyond 3,000 Years.

"MODERN" THEN.

LONDON, Feb. 20 (Canadian Press).—Announcement of the discovery of 150 grave mounds or Tumuli in Mongolia, believed to date from 200 B.C., is made in a communication from Leningrad by Col. Kozloff, of the Russian Geographical Society, who was leader of its mission to Mongolia and Tibet. The mounds contain important relics of the civilization of their period. Col. Kozloff believes the graves are of the Hang dynasty of China. The earliest appearance of Mongolia in history is in A.D. 619 to 690 under T'And dynasty in China. Inside the mound chambers were found coffins, silks, furs, jewels, pictures and the earliest of Chinese hieroglyphics of 3,000 years ago.

The relics include dainty silk bags resembling modern woman's vanity bags.

THE LADY CURLERS.

Congratulations are due to the lady curlers of Peterboro upon their triumph in bringing the Ontario Ladies' Tankard to this city.

Mrs. Hill and Miss Gladman and their rinks have succeeded in performing a feat that the curlers representing the sterner sex in Peterboro have never been able to accomplish, despite decades of endeavour, i. e., the capture of a Tankard.

The ladies made a fine showing in the competition last year, and they have followed up their sterling performance of 1924 by a complete triumph.

They have proved that the theory that had begun to be accepted as an absolute truth, namely, that it was impossible for Peterboro to be victorious in a Tankard competition, is a false one, and now the fair sex have shown the way and dispelled the superstitious idea that the doors were permanently closed against a Peterboro triumph in the historic competition, perhaps the masculine curlers of the city will take fresh heart and stimulated by the example go out next year and bring home the much-coveted silverware.

At least the ladies have blazed the trail and deserve general felicitations upon winning for their home city new honours in the world of sport.

THE HOME BANK.

With every sympathy for the unfortunate people who lost their savings in the collapse of the Home Bank, there are many persons in Canada who have heard with misgiving the announcement that the Federal Government feels morally bound "in equity" to partially recoup the depositors.

The precedent that would be established by such action would be a decidedly dangerous one.

Unfortunately, the Home Bank is not the only financial institution that has gone crashing down in ruins.

Throughout the country there are thousands of creditors who have lost heavily by such failures.

If the Government has a moral right to come to the rescue of the losers in one case, it is difficult to avoid the conclusion that these other victims have an equally valid claim upon the assistance of the Government.

The measure of assistance that is to be given has not yet been announced.

If it is to be of any service at all the sum will, however, be a large one, and the financial condition of the Dominion at present is not such as to justify the outlay upon any such doubtful undertaking.

GETTING A BAD NAME.

It is unfortunately true that the conduct of many of the hockey enthusiasts who have been attending games here this winter has earned for Peterboro the reputation of possessing some of the most rabid fans in the Province.

It is a reputation that no place envies, and surely it is time that Peterboro, with some reason to pride itself upon its importance among Ontario cities, was freed from this smacking of village ways and small-town behaviour.

The abuse of referees—in recent games two of the best officials in the sport, Messrs. M. J. Rodden and Lou E. Marsh have been unmercifully "booed"—and the tendency so noticeable at Wednesday night's junior game to shout insults at visiting players who happened to be hurt are factors that might well be banished from local contests.

It is often characteristic of the village mind to assume that the referee is always "against us," but Peterboro has seen enough good hockey in its day to have a broader viewpoint on such matters.

The Peterboro juniors came back from Brockville with warm praise for the sportsmanlike attitude of the Brockville fans toward them; the victors of Wednesday unfortunately cannot truthfully carry back a similar report in regard to their treatment here.

The only way to do away with these conditions seems to be the drastic one of making an example of the worst of the referee-baiters by ejecting them from the rink.

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCES.

In the course of events that followed the war there arose a demand for a change in the methods of handling international problems. The old method of dealing with them by what was known as "secret diplomacy" had proved not only ineffective, but, as it was claimed, iniquitous and disastrous.

Henceforth problems affecting the comity of nations must be solved, and foreign relations adjusted, in the full light of day. The cards must be laid on the table—and a round table at that; civilization could only be saved and a world peace assured by frank and free discussion in open conference.

Well, the world has had its fill of international conferences during the past few years, and he is an optimist who can discern a nearer approach to the millennium in consequence. Open discussion of international questions has, of course, advantages.

From what President Wilson termed the "matching of mind;" from a free exchange of views, however divergent; from the personal contact of leaders of public opinion in different countries, much may be gained. But, as experience has shown, the results are not always inspiring.

Certainly, public faith in these international conferences cannot be strengthened by what happened at the Opium Convention at Geneva. Here, surely, was an occasion for the display of those qualities, and the achievement of those results, which believers in the open door and round table had led a wondering world to expect.

Assembled were the representatives of some 54 countries for a purpose that was clear-cut and imperative—to devise measures for the control, if not suppression, of a traffic which is playing havoc with human happiness and human lives throughout the universe.

The delegates attending the convention were able and, in not a few cases, distinguished publicists, who had made a close study of the problem under consideration, and were familiar with the conditions of the traffic; and with the chief opium producing countries represented, along with those affected by the distribution and use of the drug, the way seemed clear for some definite understanding or agreement which in substantial measure, at least, would accomplish the object desired.

Yet, what happened? Instead of friendly discussion, there was, in the words of a special correspondent, "interminable bickering." The recognized courtesies and conventions of debate were, in certain instances, forgotten or ignored; angry recrimination took the place of argument, and continuous discord eventually culminated in open rupture.

To judge from the remarks of Mr. Loudon, the able representative of Holland, responsibility for the failure of the convention rests upon the shoulders of the American and Chinese delegates, who withdrew.

"International conference," he is reported to have said, "implied mutual concessions and mutual goodwill, and was destined to failure if one party had an imperative mandate to impose its will on the other parties under the menace of rupture, instead of instructions to take some account of an eventual divergence of views and of arguments which others might advance."

These are wise words, which only emphasize the truth expressed by Sydney Smith, the English wit, that "all great alterations in human affairs are produced by compromise." Yet they also indicate the limitations of just such conferences as that referred to where mandate and instructions, if rigidly adhered to produce discord, and if not adhered to, result in resolutions that have no binding effect.

In any case, a convention signed by the representatives of seven countries out of fifty-four, though better than none at all, can hardly be regarded as a vindication of a new order of diplomacy which seems to have a tendency to embitter, rather than sweeten, international relations.—Ottawa Journal.

THE PRESS GALLERY.

On Saturday the Parliamentary Press Gallery met and elected officers. What is the Parliamentary Press Gallery? Hearing the name, the average student of history has a blurred mental reaction about something that Burke once said about the Fourth Estate. Yet although for a century and a half in England, and for more than half a century in Canada, the Press Gallery has been as much a part of Parliament as the Speaker's Chair itself, it is extremely doubtful whether the public has the faintest realization of the Gallery's meaning, of its history, its significance, its functions, traditions and character.

In England, the Press Gallery, like most other features of democratic government, was cradled in stress and storm. Its birth, the establishment of the right of representatives of the press to report and present to the public the proceedings of Parliament, was achieved only after a long-continued struggle; and as late as the first quarter of the last century the conflict between parliamentarians and Press Gallery was frequently bitter. The press had achieved the right to report the debates; but under an ancient rule by which a member might rise, draw the Speaker's attention to the fact that there was a "stranger in the House," the Press Gallery could be cleared of its members. O'Connell, who was almost continuously in conflict with the British press, occasionally exercised the privilege.

In the Canadian Press Gallery, under the policy of news which is subscribed to by the majority of Canadian newspapers, there are two classes of reporters. These are, first, those who represent the Canadian Press, an organization of all the dailies of Canada, irrespective of politics, and whose duty it is to report what Parliament says as completely, as lucidly, and as accurately as human fallibility will permit. Their task, in a word, is to mirror Parliament exactly as it is, reporting simply the news, and leaving it to the editors to amplify, interpret and explain in the editorial pages. These reporters are specially chosen for their task; chosen because of knowledge of politics, because of particular aptitude for a most exacting form of journalism; and are expected to be scrupulously fair.

The second class are "special correspondents." Their duty is not so much to report Parliament as to interpret Parliament. There is a difference between news and truth. News signalizes an event; truth explains the causes underlying it. Thus, if Premier King rises in Parliament and claims a national surplus the Canadian Press reports what he says as news, but the special correspondent, whose duty it is to interpret, must explain, or, if necessary, destroy, the basis of the claim. He must tell why and how there comes to be a surplus, or whether the surplus has existence at all. The gossip of the lobbies of Parliament provides many an interesting political speculation for the "specials;" whereas the Canadian Press staff is debarred from speculative matters until they are "official" or "semi-official." And so all through Parliament's proceedings: the task of the special reporter is not so much to tell what Parliament is doing, as to tell why Parliament is doing it. In other words, the real duty of a special Press Gallery correspondent is to give light; to act as a public lamp and signal.

With exceedingly rare exceptions this task is faithfully performed. Often the Press Gallery is charged with unfairness, with rancor, with a disposition to show up Parliament in a light of contempt. Yet the truth is that correspondents rarely say as vicious things about politicians as politicians say about themselves. "The Irish," said Dr. Johnson, "are a fair-minded people; they rarely say good about each other." The sneer might be much more fairly directed at our legislators; and one may amusingly wonder what Mr. Meighen, were he transplanted to the Press Gallery, would write of a speech by Mr. King, and vice versa.

The Press Gallery has been, and is, the University of brilliant journalists. There is hardly a great editor in Canada today who was not graduated from it. Henri Bourassa, luminous in politics and journalism alike, gained his knowledge there. The late J. Israel Tarte was one of its members in the eighties; and going over the Gallery minutes—as interesting a bit of modern Canadian history as one can find—one comes across the names of Edward Farrer, the outstanding Canadian journalist of his day; of R. S. White, the erudite editor-in-chief of the Montreal Gazette; of Dafoe, of the Manitoba Free Press; of Sir John Willison, Dr. P. D. Ross, Albert Carman, editor-in-chief of the Montreal Star; Joseph Atkinson, proprietor and publisher of the Toronto Star; as well as of scores of others who have bulked large in journalism and in politics, too.—Ottawa Journal.

MONTREAL GRAIN.

MONTREAL, February 20 (Canadian Press). — Apart from a few inquiries from foreign houses asking for offers of Canadian grain, the export trade here was quiet yesterday. The domestic trade in oats was also slow, but prices were unchanged. Ontario No. 3 white oats were quoted at 66 cents, and No. 4 grade at 64 cents.

The demand for mill feed from local and country buyers showed no improvement, and the undertone was easy. Little business was transacted in rolled oats.

Owing to the continued weak advices from the United States on the egg situation and the more liberal offerings from that source, the local market displayed further weakness, and wholesale jobbing prices were reduced another two cents per dozen, which makes a net decline for the week so far of 5 cents per dozen and the prospects are that they will go lower. Extreme dullness marked the trade in butter. Sales of fodder made No. 1 white and coloured cheese at 20 1-4 to 20 1-2 cents per pound and No. 2 grade at 19 1-4 to 19 1-2 cents per pound.

Beans were quoted at $2.70 per bushel.

ROYAL YEAST CAKES

LARS KRISTIAN NEW PRESIDENT

Finland Elects Leader Who is Noted For Agricultural Research.

AGRARIAN PARTY.

On the 16th of this month Lars Kristian Relander was elected president for the Republic of Finland. He is 42 years of age, a doctor of philosophy and noted for his agricultural research work. He has been member of the Diet, and also acted as its Speaker. At present he holds the office of Governor for Finland's most eastern province, with residence in Wiborg. As politician, he belongs to the agrarian party, the most powerful of the centre parties.

In Finland, the president is elected for a period of six years. The people appoints, by universal suffrage, 300 electors, who in turn elect the president. At the final voting the two first polls are free; at the third and last poll, only two candidates who have received the most votes are considered.

The former president, K. J. Stahlberg, who was nominated when Finland gained her independence and became a republic, has stayed in office six years, and will retire on the 1st of March. He was formerly professor of law at the University of Helsingfors, and is an eminent scientist and administrator. To a rare extent he won the esteem and admiration of the Finnish people, and would, without any doubt, have been unanimously re-elected of all regardless of party differences had he not preferred to retire from office.

The council of electors was composed from the following elements: 68 belonging to the coalition party (conservatives), 35 to the Swedish party, 69 Agrarians, 79 Socialists and 16 Communists.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—The wet Tories are circulating the report that the Prohibition Union is a Grit organization, which I protest against, and consider it an open insult upon every dry Conservative. Compare such men are Sir George Foster, Arthur Meighen, H. H. Stevens, who are staunch prohibitionists, with J. A. McCausland, J. A. Currie and others of their type. A vast majority of the executive of the Prohibition Union of West Peterboro are Conservative from general principles, and have passed their mandate on to Premier Ferguson with no uncertain sound as was done on Friday evening, Feb. 13th, at George Street Church, when that noble body of manhood and womanhood, numbering at least eight hundred strong, rose in volume against the attitude of the present Government in power at Toronto. The next Provincial election promises to be a battle royal between wet and dry. Thanking you, I remain, yours, etc.,

Stomach Distress

MRS. CHAS. TRIMPER

Bear River, N. S.—"It is a pleasure to me to write a few lines about Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. In August 1923 I was taken sick and a doctor was called. He pronounced my case inflammation of the stomach and attended me for about a week, but I was getting worse. My son advised me to try Dr. Pierce's Discovery. I did so, and am glad to say in twenty-four hours I was out of bed. I am still taking Dr. Pierce's medicine. I have not had a doctor since. I am feeling well for a woman past sixty. I would highly recommend Dr. Pierce's Discovery to any similar sufferer."—Mrs. Charles Trimper, Route 1.

UNCLEANED 600 YEARS

Windows of York Minister Receive First Cleaning in Centuries.

HULL, Eng., Feb. 19.—(Associated Press).—There are windows in the York Minister of Hull which have not been washed in more than 600 years, it was announced recently by the Dean of York in making an appeal for a local fund for the preservation of these antiques which are still in active service. There is no collection of English glass in the world approaching that at York Minister, said the dean, and if the public allowed these windows to disappear their like would never be seen again.

Some of the windows which have been in place for six centuries were being cleaned for the first time, the dean asserted, and it had been found that the belief that washing might destroy the mellowing effect of time on the glass was without foundation.

In The Morning Her Tongue Was Coated HadBad Taste In Mouth

Miss Pearle L. Zinck, Barss Corner, N.S., writes:—"I was awfully troubled with my liver, and used to get such dizzy spells I would have to sit down while I was doing my work.

In the morning, when I used to get up, my tongue was coated and I had a bad taste in my mouth and often times, throughout the day, I was troubled with pains in my stomach.

I suffered in this way until a friend of mine who had used your MILBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS. told me of having taken them, so I decided to try them, and I can truthfully say that they certainly did me a lot of good.

I cannot recommend them too highly to all those who suffer as I did."

Fighting Middies Ready To Win Boxing Laurels

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 19.—(Associated Press.) — With more than 200 candidates fighting for places on the Naval Academy's 1925 boxing team, Coach Spike Webb feels confident that his drive for another intercollegiate championship will meet with success.

Among the promising prospects for the Navy outfit are Midshipmen Coleman, the 190-pounder who held down the heavyweight berth on the Plebe team last year, and John Charlson, winner of the Academy lightweight title a season ago. Rich Collins stands out in the bantamweight class, in which a number of good boxers are trying for the honors.

There is more talk of the ring sport among the Middies this season than ever before, and the game appears to be facing its greatest season at the academy.

Navy meets Queens, McGill, and Toronto Universities, of Canada, as well as Yale, Penn State, University of Pennsylvania, Syracuse and Catholic University, this year. After the season of dual meets Navy will box at the intercollegiate tournament at Philadelphia late in March.

AMENDMENT TO

Canada. In Paris a distinguished Canadian had sought an interview with the French president. This could not be arranged through the Canadian High Commissioner, but only through the British Ambassador. This perhaps was not a matter of capital importance, but it did involve national dignity, and Mr. Vein urged that Canadian diplomatic representatives should have at least as much status as those of countries like Greece or Belgium.

The only method which should be adopted with a view to bringing about any changes in the British North America Act would be by calling a conference with the representatives of the provinces, as suggested by the Minister of Justice, Hon. Ernest Lapointe.

No Need Shown.

Horatio C. Hocken (Conservative, Toronto West) said that real need for an amendment to the Act should be shown by those who advocated any change and he believed that only a small group desired alteration. Was there any idea behind this proposal for the independence of Canada?

"No," replied W. F. MacLean (Conservative, York South), the mover of the resolution, "but I am in favor of giving Canada complete autonomy in her own affairs by having a voice in the making and in the interpretation of her constitution, within her connection with the British Empire. The more freedom you will give Canada the stronger she will be."

To amend the British North America Act, said Mr. Hocken, would be most injurious to the Empire and to Canada. Canada could do more for civilization by remaining securely within the Empire. The mixing of Scottish, English, Irish and French bloods in Canada would produce a great breed.

"Would the Hon. Member have French spoken in every province, then?" asked Harry Leader (Progressive, Portage le Prairie).

"Well, I could make a speech on that, but I will say that it is taught in every province today," replied Mr. Hocken.

Crerar Favors Change.

Hon. T. A. Crerar (Progressive, Marquette) said that the motion before the House "goes to the very core of our national being, and is, therefore, a matter of first importance."

He felt that after hearing the speeches of Sir Henry Drayton and Mr. Hocken that "They must have been living in the realms of dreamland for the last ten years. "Canada has made great advances, mostly in the last decade. She had raised an army, had gained the right to send an ambassador to the United States, and she had signed the Halibut Treaty. The country had advanced far beyond 1867, and had risen to the dignity of fixing its own constitutional affairs. Mr. Crerar agreed wholly with the resolution. But in any amendment to the British North America Act the rights of French-Canadian citizens should be safeguarded and the fullest protection given them.

Leave It to Conference.

William Irvine (Labor, East Calgary) moved an amendment to the amendment of Mr. Woodsworth, providing that "no further action be taken on the proposed resolution and that the matter be referred to the conference proposed in the Speech from the Throne."

Herbert Marler (Liberal, St. Lawrence-St. George) reviewed the controversies leading up to federation. He could see that nothing in the Act could be changed to the benefit of either Quebec or the rest of Canada. To refer the matter to a conference as Mr. Irvine had proposed, would probably reopen the old serious problems that had made difficult the Quebec conference just prior to confederation. Nothing could be added to the Act to give further rights to the provinces, but something might easily be taken away from those provincial rights.

Mr Marler failed to see that any argument had been brought forward in support of an amendment to the British North America Act, showing that we were suffering any injury, as a whole, under the present constitution.

"We are not a nation for interior, but for exterior purposes," added Mr Marler.

"On the inside and not on the outside," interjected W F MacLean (Conservative, South York).

Andrew McMaster

A R McMaster (Liberal, Brome) declared that if any alteration to the Act should be considered necessary, a conference with provincial representatives, who were parties to the agreement, should first be held. The place to prepare any such amendment was in Canada, otherwise it would resultin a depreciation of our national standing.

If reasonable protection was given to minorities sixty years ago, it was reasonable to believe that the parliament of today would not take away that protection. Mr McMaster was in favor of the resolution, "because I believe in freedom, and not in restriction, because, after all, I am a Liberal and not a Tory." There was no reason to believe that a conference by the provinces would take away the rights of any province, as Mr. Marler had suggested. The whole matter was a question which might become a very practical one at any moment, with the question of Senate reform pending.

TORONTO "DRYS"

reading of the bill allowing the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Rail way Commission to raise money on its own bonds guaranteed by the Government for capital expenditure. The Premier explained that the T. & N. O. now had 567 miles of railway and investment to the extent of $30,000,000. The extension of the Kirkland Lake line into the Rouyn, he said, was under consideration. He said he had several reports on this extension, and that he was inclined to favor the proposition favorably without having reached a definite conclusion. Everything was all ready for an immediate start if the extension were decided upon.

Manning Doherty thought that, as the road had never been hampered under the present system, there was little need for the change. He thought that, by transferring to the railway its own financing, the Government was merely trying to reduce its "seeming capital expenditure" so that the position of the province would be shown in much better shape, as it would be minus the capital expended on the T. & N. O.

"We don't want the people lulled into the belief that they are not providing this money, no matter how it is arranged," said Mr. Doherty.

The Premier thought that all such proposition should carry themselves, and said that the new system would have a restraining influence on the commission. Moreover, it was desirable as a business proposition.

Malcolm Lang (Lib., Cochrane) reminded the Premier that a decision on the Rouyn extension would have to be made quickly so that supplies could be gotten in this winter while conditions were favorable.

Control of 'Busses.

Hon. George Henry got second reading giving the Department of Highways control of 'busses on all the roads in the province and not Provincial highways alone, as at present. He also amended the Act by abolishing the maximum number of passengers to be carried in 'busses.

F. C. Biggs thought that the municipalities should get some of the revenue derived from 'bus services.

The bill combining the rural loan and the northern Ontario loan commissions into one commission was also given second reading. The new commission will work under both the old Acts which remain unchanged.

The bill uniting the Frontenac and Kingston registry offices was also given second reading. Mr. Raney twitted the Government with not adopting this policy in Toronto, claiming that they had a good precedent in his action while Attorney-General. He contended that the appointment of Hon. Thos Crawford as registrar in Toronto could not be defended in point of public service, no matter how splendid a gentleman Mr. Crawford was personally.

Boost For Crawford.

"That is the first time I have ever heard a word of criticism against the appointment or qualifications of Hon. Thos. Crawford," said the Premier. "If there ever was a man who deserved consideration at the hands of the public it is Hon. Thos. Crawford. I think the honorable member (Mr. Raney) should apologize for what he has said about Mr. Cradford."

"I do not think any one could suggest that he could know or learn to perform the duties of his office," replied Mr. Raney.

"The position can only be filled by a lawyer and I have nothing to apologise for. I speak in nothing except the highest terms of Mr. Crawford as a private citizen, but that does not qualify him for the registrarship."

L. W. Oke (Prog., East Lambton) said that Mr. Raney owed an apology to the laymen of the province when he sought to put lawyers in all the important offices of the province.

Mr. Nickle introduced a bill allowing municipalities to add taxation to the extent of one mill this year for the relief of unemployment.

FRESH CAPITAL IS FRENCH NEED; LOANS PLANNED

Finance Minister Intimates Two Issues Amounting to $150,000,000 to be Put Out.

WORKING CAPITAL

Confidence Expressed in Financial Position of France.

PARIS, February 20. — The Finance Minister, M. Clementel, closed the general discussion of the finance bill of the budget by a speech in the chamber of deputies yesterday, breathing confidence in France's ability to overcome the difficulties of her financial situation.

"It is clearly understood," he said, "that the very cornerstone of the restoration of the treasury to a healthy condition is a foreign loan. Conversations have begun on this subject and I have a semi-official promise that as soon as the budget is voted an issue of $100,000,000 will be possible in America."

"This loan and one which will be raised for the devastated regions, will supply our coffers with fresh money, and we will be able to bring pressure on exchange."

This second loan, the finance minister described as one to be issued by certain of the devastated departments "abroad" to the extent of 35 to 40 million dollars. It is recalled that the power to issue such loans which formerly was granted devastated districts, has been suspended for a long time; so the government intends to change this policy, and again permit the raising of loans by certain sections of these regions.

Two Loans in View.

M. Clementel referred to two loans —the first of $100,000,000 to be raised in the United States for treasury needs, and the second, of $35,000,000 to $40,000,000 to be raised abroad, not by the state, but by the devastated departments, doubtless under state guarantee.

"France's treasury," continued the minister, "is in the same position as a great manufacturing house with all its factories going but hampered by insufficient working capital. If I could put in our coffers one billion fresh money the problem would be solved. At any rate the chamber can rest assured that it will be solved."

M. Clementel claimed great credit for the country, because after the most terrible war in history it had suppressed the extraordinary budget in five years, although an extraordinary budget continued to exist for twenty years after the war of 1870. There was not the slightest hope of raising an internal loan for the devastated regions, he declared; it would be dangerous even to attempt to float one after last year's failure. The fact was, he explained, the loan market was exhausted, because 240,000,000,000 francs had been asked from national savings in loans since 1914.

The Morgan loan had served for stabilizing the exchange. The dollar had been stable for the last six months, and the pound had risen only as regards the dollar, not as regards the franc. The pound, added the minister, had risen because of England's determination to recover her gold parity.

Thanks Friends of France.

M. Clementel concluded by thanking the true friends of France. "Repudiation is a word of German propaganda in America," he said.

"France will pay with a moratorium and delays permitting our indebtedness to be lightened by improvement of the franc.

"At the moment of settlement our great friends in America, and notably Byron T. Herrick (the American ambassador) to whom I pay homage, will be certain to show that cordiality they have always displayed towards us. In England Winston Churchill (Chancellor of the Exchequer) has shown himself to be the enlightened, clear sighted friend of France as much as of England, which country we must thank for the generous abandonment of 22 per cent due her and her acceptance of the idea of a reduction of the French debt."

ARREST EX-MAYOR ON THEFT CHARGE

Police Say That Lieut.-Col. Graham Abstracted $8,000 from Court Funds.

LONDON, Feb. 20 (Canadian Press).—A sensation was created last night by the arrest of Lieut.-Col. C. M. R. Graham, clerk of the First Division Court and ex-Mayor of London, on the charge of stealing $8,000 of division court funds. He was brought at once before Police Magistrate Graydon and liberated until tomorrow on $16,000 bail, provided by four sureties. Col. Graham before the war engaged in the men's furnishing business here. He raised the 142nd City of London Battalion, served in France and was wounded while company commander in the 18th Battalion. On his return he was appointed clerk of the First Division Court.

Provincial inspectors have been in charge of his office for some days.

ARREST FOLLOWS TORONTO INQUEST

Jury Did Not Think it Safe for Man to be at Large.

TORONTO, Feb. 20 (Canadian Press).—After an opinion from the jury that they did not think it was safe for him to be at large as he was "mentally unbalanced," a man who gave his name as Jack Adams, was placed under arrest at the morgue last night, on a nominal charge of vagrancy, following an inquest under Coroner G. W. Glendennan, into the death of Walter Sala, 11-year-old boy who last Monday morning was found in an upstairs bedroom at 152 Bathurst street, strangled to death. The man taken into custody was a boarder at a Bathurst street house and his arrest followed his evidence in the witness box, the inquest then being adjourned until 8.30 p.m. Thursday, March 5th, to allow the police time for further investigation.

Dr. William Magner, who performed the post mortem examination of the body, stated that death had been due to strangulation by external force.

THE EPISODE

By ALICE ROHE

(Written for the United Press)

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—Six characters who do not have to search for an author are more than a mere "Episode" at the Bijou Theatre. Here we have the author, Gilbert Emery, also a character in his own play. Mr. Emery is a good author as well as a good actor. Several years ago he wrote "The Hero," one of the best plays of recent years. This was followed by the successful "Tarnish," not nearly so good as "The Hero," but much more popular. Now comes "Episode," which isn't so good as "The Hero" and hasn't the popular theatrical appeal of "Tarnish."

It is, however, a very clever play, especially from the dialogue point of view. It is made most attractively interesting by the fine performance of Katlene McDonnell as the wife. "Episode" is really mostly talk. Whatever dramatic action there is arises from the psychological crises caused by this talk.

It's all about some smart people who are motoring down to Long Island to see the polo game and later dine with the Prince. The wife and her escort are interrupted by the money-chasing husband, who has refused to go. He returns home because he has remembered that this is the anniversary of their wedding. He yields to the invitation to accompany them after they had lunched out without him. He remains at home to meet a jeweler. Accidentally, when discussing giving his wife an emerald chain, he discovers a rare emerald ring in her jewel case. The jeweler, who recognizes the ring as his own sale, agrees to call him up and tell him the name of the purchaser. The husband's jealousy is aroused. The wife, when she returns, refuses to accept his attitude or divulge the donor. When the 'phone rings and the name of her escort—the husband's best friend, a married man—is revealed the second act curtain falls upon a genuine dramatic climax.

The third act, in which the wife explains, that left alone while her husband pursues his eternal business, she and Herbert have loved each other—but it has been merely an "Episode"—now past and done with.

The importance given to not breaking the dinner engagement on Long Island is the dominant motif sounding throughout the domestic tragedy. And—it ends by the husband forgiving and all going to dine with the Prince.

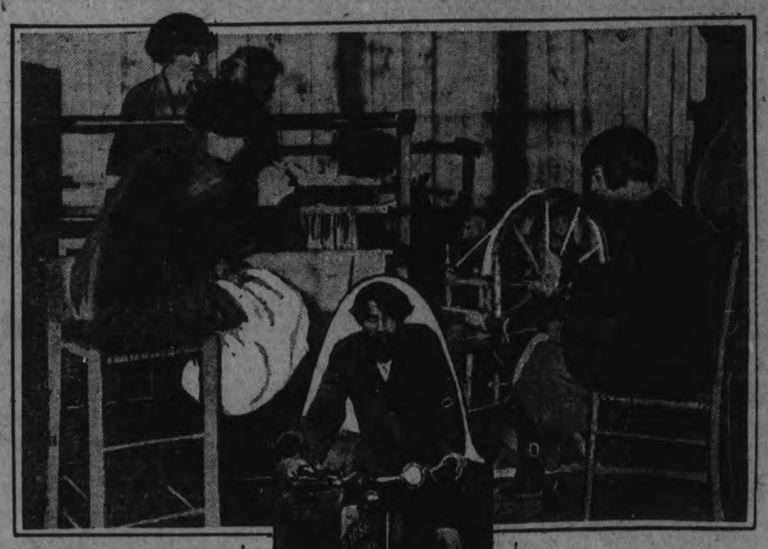
There is much clever conversation, but without the sure and convincing acting of Katlene MacDonald, "Episode" might not be so entertaining. Wm. Courtleigh plays the husband and Gilbert Emery the friend and former lover. Eugene Powers is excellent in the small bit of the jeweler.

HERMIT LEFT $50,000 FOR GRAVESTONE.

BUFFALO, N.Y., February 20.—Jacob Schenkler, an aged recluse, who was asphyxiated by fumes from a pipeless gas heater in his room in a Clinton Street rooming house on 30th January, left an estate of $50,000 all of which is to be expended in the erection of a memorial over his grave, it was learned yesterday.

There are no known relatives. The will did not specify the character of the memorial.

NO MARRIAGE, NO DIVORCE, NO BOSS, NO STRIKES, NO POVERTY, NO IRKSOME BONDS OF CIVILIZATION IN ENGLISH COMMUNISTIC COLONY IN COTSWOLDS



The upper photo shows the girls of Whiteway colony weaving cloth at looms worked by their hands and feet, while inset is Klaux, one of the most picturesque members of the free life colony.

WHITEWAY, England, Feb. 20.—Here in this little village tucked away in Cotswold Hills, lives 70 people to whom ordinary conventions of civilized life mean nothing.

No marriage — no divorce; no work for gain—no strikes; no rich—no poor; none of these exist in Whiteway colony. It may not be a practical arrangement for all the world, but it gives contentment here.

Little boys and girls call adults by their first name. "Father" and "Mother" are discarded titles.

Of the residents of the hamlet, two or three couples were legally married before joining the community. But in the main those who wish to marry simply announce their intent at one of the community meetings. Even this announcement is not necessary—they are at liberty to decide the matter for themselves and immediately set up housekeeping.

These "free" marriages are not always happy—the proportion of disagreements is about the same as in the outside world—but separation is as easy as marriage. The union is simply broken off and another contracted at will. The fact that children are the wards of the community simplifies this arrangements.

In harmony with their idea that all should be free to think as they wish, no acceptance of any particular religious tenets are demanded. Their creeds are widely different — Atheists, Tolstoians, even Moslems. Probably the Tolstoy Communistic theory is the most widely accepted. Following that theory they dispensed with all forms of money for nearly three years, but this brought about complications, imprisonment for non-payment of taxes, and "parasites" crept in who lived off the labor of the others.

So they decided to deal in handicrafts—to weave cloth more than enough to supply their needs, selling the surplus; and to enlarge their bakery that it might cater to the surrounding country.

The plan has worked. They turn out excellent products. There is no director or boss.

They have plenty of time for the joys of life. Every night there is music, chess tournaments or lectures.

Locks and keys are unknown. Every house is open. They all feel that they are essentially members of one family. If anyone falls ill, all the colonists help. Three of them are trained physicians.

No outside authority is recognized. Everything is settled by community discussion. If roads need repairing, the men turn out and fix it. If a new house is needed, they turn to and build it. They have installed a central heating plant that furnishes warmth to all Whiteway.

They have progressed far enough from the simple life to obtain an up-to-date radio set. So now any picturesque colonist may wrap his homespun cloak around him or her, and shake a sandaled foot to the music of the Hotel Savoy band in far off London.

AMERICA PLANS NATIONAL CONTROL FOR BOTH MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE

Senator Cappers' Resolution to Amend the Constitution Now in Hands of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

(By Paul R. Mallon, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

—WASHINGTON, February 20. — Congress wants to decide the marriage problem.

Taking cognizance of all the clamour in literature and drama, a movement is under way to allot the subject of marriage and divorce a mention in the constitution of the United States alongside Prohibition and suffrage.

The most favoured of half a dozen proposals to amend the constitution is one by Senator Capper, Republican, farm bloc leader of Kansas, which provides:

"The Congress shall have power to make laws which shall be uniform throughout the United States, on marriage and divorce, the legitimation of children and the care and custody of children affected by annulment of marriage or by divorce."

The resolution now is before the Senate Judiciary Committee. Hearings have been held and it is hoped by adherents of the proposal that it may be reported out before adjournment 4th March terminates the life of the present Congress.

"Agitation has been widespread for some time in favour of a uniform divorce law. Capper considers it ridiculous for each State in the Union to have different regulations for divorce. In New York and some other States, divorces can be obtained only upon one or two grounds. But in others many grounds exist.

"Divorce has been increasing with an alarming rapidity, until according to the latest statistics there is one divorce to less than every seven marriages in this country," Capper says. "There is only one reason for this—aside from the natural and incontrovertible perversity of human nature—and that is the ease with which the unfit and immature are permitted to marry.

"Divorce as an institution itself is not an evil. In fact, since marriage is a partnership which to fulfill its purpose must be conducted in harmony and co-operation, there are times when divorce is an absolute necessity. But it is the abuse of divorce which has become an evil.

"And these two factors—the marriage of the unfit and the abandon with which divorce is granted in some States have contributed to the high divorce rate which, if it continues, will in time disintegrate the family life of the nation.

"We have in this country 49 varieties of marriage laws, those of 48 States and in the District of Columbia. There are 48 varieties of divorce laws. One State, South Carolina, does not permit divorce on any ground. Seventeen States fix no marriageable age. In nine of these common-law ages of 12 for girls and 14 for boys have been formally recognised.

"In two States the marriage age is fixed at 12 for girls and 15 for boys. In one State it is 13 for girls and 14 for boys. In three States it is respectively 14 and 16.

"Although a majority of States prohibit the issuance of a certificate to a minor below the specified age for marriage without consent of the parents, 20 States prescribe no penalty for the official who issues the certificate without the required consent.

"Divorce laws vary even more astoundingly. From no ground in South Carolina to 14 grounds in New Hampshire the scale runs. While the majority of States recognise the divorce laws of other States, there are at least eight which do not recognise them unconditionally. And as the period of residence required before a divorce suit may be brought ranges from 6 months to 3 years, we see complications in the Court where the defendant in a divorce suit applies to the Court of his or her State to set aside a divorce granted to the plaintiff in another State whose laws conflict with the laws of the defendants' State.

"Often those securing divorces in a State outside their own State marry again and have children by their second marriages and returning to their own States are confronted with suits by the divorced wife or husband seeking to annul the divorce. When the suit is successful, this means that the second marriage is nullified ,and the children illegitimatised.

"This is a process without reason and wisdom."

Association Is Determined to Combat Form of Unfair Competition.

TRANSIENTS, TOO.

TORONTO, Feb. 20.—(Canadian Press).—With a circular letter already in the hands of the members of the Ontario Legislature and with a petition before the Statutes Revision Committee, the Ontario Retail Hardware Merchants' Association is determined to leave no stone unturned in the fight against the "unfair competition" of the retail shops operated by the Hydro.

No less vigorous will be their fight for suppression of the transient peddlers and "bell ringers" or house-to-house canvassers.

While action in these matters was postponed by the Legislature last year, the retailers hope to secure the necessary amendments during the present session and the adoption of the secretary's report last evening constitutes a mandate for the continuation of the struggle by the executive.

ABRAHAM A HEADLINER

As Much in News Today as in Days of Old Chaldea.

Abraham has headlines in our day as he might have had in his own. Archaeologists of the University of Pennsylvania, unearthing treasures long buried at Ur, in old Chaldea, find tablet writings indicating that the founder of the Hebrew people was obliged to flee thence to save his life from Elamite invaders. The discovery conflicts in no way with the account in Genesis and helps to fix Abraham as a real person in history.

He lived a very long while ago. Yet buried beneath his feet, and unknown to him as he led his herds over the Chaldean plain, were records of civilizations long dead and forgotten in his day. American scientists are now bringing these records to light. Dr. Robert W. Rogers of Drew Seminary tells of seeing pottery and silver ornaments dug up at Ur that were ancient even in earliest Bible times, yet match the best workmanship of to-day in beauty.

PARIS CANADIANS WIN.

PARIS, Feb. 20. — (Canadian Press).—A Canadian hockey team recruited in Paris defeated Switzerland 11 to 2 in the first round of the international hockey tournament last night. The British team defeated the Belgian team, 6 to 4.

The matches are being played at the Palais De Glace.

SOVIET PRISONERS ON HUNGER STRIKE

Former Political Offender, Here to Lecture, Gets Letter Telling of Bad Conditions.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20. — R. R. Abramovich, former member of the Moscow Soviet and one of the Central and Foreign Committee of the Russian Social-Democratic or Menshevik Party, in an interview at the law offices of Morris Hillquit, 19 West Forty-Fourth Street, made public information just received from his party's Berlin headquarters in the form of a letter, describing recent hunger strikes in the Soviet political prisons and discrediting recent despatches from Moscow which represented the political prisons as spacious, comfortable and sanitary.

At the same time, in a prepared statement, Mr. Abramovich, who is here for six weeks on a lecture tour aimed to bring the pressure of American progressive opinion to bear on the democratization of the present regime, denounced the methods of the Bolsheviki as a perversion of the Soviet ideal, but advocated diplomatic recognition of the Bolshevist regime and heavy loans to Russia by foreign countries.

The letter, dated Feb. 6, is from Dan, chairman of the Social-Democratic Party, and describes two recent hunger strikes, one of them in the political prison of Susdal, a fortress town about six hours' journey south-east of Moscow, while the other occurred in the Butyrki prison in Moscow itself.

At Susdal, according to Mr. Abramovich, thirty prisoners, including socialists, social-revolutionaries and Vladimir Levitsky, brother of the late Menshevik leader Martoff, went on strike for fifteen days in an effort to induce the prison authorities to remove sick prisoners from the cells to the infirmary. The strike ended with the death of one of the strikers.

The Butyrki Prison at Moscow is located in the buildings formerly occupied by the Rossia Life Insurance Company. There are imprisoned Gotz, Timofief and other heads of the Social Revolutionary Party who were sentenced two years ago after a sensational trial. The strike here had been in progress for eleven days when the letter was written, and there had been no word as to its outcome.

Mr. Abramovich declared that the Soviet authorities were resorting to 'eyewash' in the case of the Butyrki Prison, through which foreign journalists were recently escorted. The front part, he said, was used as a detention prison, and the rooms were airy, light and snacious. Convicted political offenders, he said, speaking as one who had three times been in the prison on his professional capacity of opposition politician, were housed in two small structures in the rear, where cells designed to hold four men were often crowded with sixteen at a time.

In a prepared statement Mr. Abramovich vigorously attacked the Bolsheviki for their perversion of the Soviet ideal, which, he asserted, was basically democratic. The Bolsheviki had substituted a single political party for a class, he declared, and had established terror as a political institution.

He declared that recognition by foreign powers would rob the Bolsheviki of their strongest argument, that the Cheka and political terrorism were necessary to combat counter-revolution and foreign meddling with Russia. He relied on the progressive public opinion of foreign nations, particularly the United States, to modify and democratize the present conduct of Bolshevism and to preserve the fruits of the revolution.

says Mrs. Experience

"Sunlight is so much more than ordinary laundry soap! It is a pure soap made from cocoanut and palm oils—two of the gentlest and most thorough cleansing materials ever discovered.

"These cocoanut and palm oils, I happen to know, are produced on the makers' own plantations. They are purified and blended to such a degree of perfection in Sunlight that it is really the most labour-saving, time-saving and economical soap I've ever used.

"Sunlight, of course, is purity itself—it contains no adulterating materials, which are useless to women as soap, but are often put in to make a bar look bigger. Every bit of Sunlight is pure, cleansing soap, so it just cleans and cleans and cleans—you can use it for every household purpose, for a little of it goes a long way. Sunlight keeps your hands soft and comfortable, too!" Made by Lever Brothers Limited, largest soap-makers in the world.

THE EGYPT OF THE NEW WORLD

GUATEMALA CITY, Guatemala, Feb. 20.—(United Press).—A prediction that within a comparatively short time Guatemala, from an archelogical point of view, will be regarded as the Egypt of the New World, has been made by Mr. Luthrow of the Indian Museum in New York.

This prophecy follows the result of exhaustive research throughout Mexico and Guatemala into the annals and history of the ancient Mayas—that remarkable Indian race which centuries before the coming of the early Spaniards inhabited these regions, building giant monoliths, temples and cathedrals which denote a degree of civilization which has astounded the scientists of today.

As stimulus to the researches in Guatamala the fourth centennial of the founding of the first city in Guatemala by the famous Pelro de Cortez in the conquest of Mexico, has been celebrated.

This ancient city is but a short distance from the present Guatemala City and is situated in a beautiful valley called Iximiche (Land of Maize). The celebration of the event was carried out on a stupendous scale and throngs visited Iximiche to witness the festivities and the dramatic pageants given by the Indians in picturesque attire.

Specialists in the field of archelogical research are enthusiastic over the prospects of new discoveries in Central America. They believe that in ancient ruins and far beneath the surface of the earth there are to be found traces of ancient civilizations that will vie with the secrets unearthed in the valley of the Nile in Egypt.

Among those interested in the work are Dr. Sylvanus G. Moreley, who has devoted many years of his life in the study of Maya ruins in Yucantan and Peten in the Northern part of Guatemala, and Professor William Gates, who for many years has lived in Guatemala making an extensive study of the Maya language.

The Geographical and Historical Society of Guatemala has inaugurated plans for co-operating with the archeologists and keep on record the matters of interest revealed by discoveries.

IMMIGRATION RUMOR.

MONTREAL, Feb. 20—(Canadian Press).—It was rumored in immigration circles yesterday that the Canadian Government will in the near future let down the bars on Continental newcomers and 4,000 would be allowed to enter, beginning some time next month.

"Poor Betty! She always looks tired"

BETTY was the office mystery. Once pretty, her beauty now lay masked behind an unwholesome complexion. Once vivacious, she now seemed eternally tired—a drooping figure of disappointment and dismay. Too bad she didn't realize that it was constipation which was stealing her strength.

But many men and women rid themselves forever of this devastating disease, by the simple, pleasant means of eating two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN every day—or in chronic cases, with every meal.

As Kellogg's ALL-BRAN journeys through the system, its fiber remains unchanged. It is what doctors call a bulk food—a bulk food which sweeps the intestine clean—a bulk food which absorbs and carries moisture through the intestinal tract, stimulating natural, healthy action. The NERVOUS WRECK

by E. J. Rath

"We must have all been pretty close together in the woods," mused Sally. "Think of that. Of course, Bob didn't know about us he couldn't have. But he must have been pretty hot on the trail of that gang. I suppose that's what Nosey was worried about last night, when he and Lefty went down to watch the main road. What I don't understand is Bob losing his horse. He must have been doing some scouting on foot and didn't figure on any storm messing things up. This one I'm riding, of course, must belong to somebody in the posse."

The Wreck grinned down at his mount. In some measure the black horse compensated for the loss of the flivver.

"I'll bet Bob's just crazy," said Sally.

"Sure!"

"Why, if anything happened to that horse—whew! He'd sooner let the whole gang get away than lose his horse.

"Well, he can have it back when I'm through with it" said the Wreck with an airy tone. "I'll exchange it for a flivver any time."

"And the humiliation of it," continued Sally, talking half to herself. "Think of a sheriff going out to catch somebody and having somebody else run off with his horse. Can't you see it, Henry?"

"I can see it fine."

"And there he is, back in the woods there somewhere, with nothing to ride, and probably the gang laughing at him."

"Well, it's a good laugh," agreed the Wreck.

"Why, it's awful!"

"Is it?" He looked at her sharply. "What's the idea? Do you want to go back and hand him his plug and say, 'Here we are. Take us to the hoosegow'?"

Sally shook her head impatiently.

"Of course not. We can't. But I'm just trying to make you understand what a frightful fix it is for a sheriff to be in. Oh, he must be simply wild! Just imagine yourself in his place."

"Say, are you trying to get me nervous about this?" demanded the Wreck. "Because you're wasting time, if you are. I can just eat this."

Sally eyed him with a speculative look as he began running his fingers through the mane of the black horse. She had never seen the Wreck looking quite so buoyant. Presently she began to laugh.

"I wish Bob Wells could see you," she said.

"Yes?"

"Oh, you needn't get belligerent I'm laughing at Bob. He'd just die of mortification. He'd either curl up and die or shoot you, I don't know which."

The Wreck shrugged and eased himself in the saddle. Then he began laughing himself.

"Well, what do we do next, Sally?"

"Keep moving, I suppose."

"Which way?"

It was getting to be a fine morning as she swung about in her saddle and began studying the country.

Then she led the way again, across a meadow. The Wreck could not understand her. In her place, he would have wanted to get to Chicago, even over the dead bodies of sheriffs and hold-up men, if necessary, do his buying and finish up what he started out to do. But here was a person who did not seem to care whether she completed her errand or not. It struck him as peculiar.

They broke into a trot and he did not mind it in the least. What did he care if he fell off?

Soon they were climbing a hillside, and when it became too steep for the horses, they dismounted.

"We'll leave them here," said Sally. "Just throw the reigns over his head and he'll stand. I think we ought to go up to the top for a better look."

CHAPTER XXII.

The Wreck Surrenders

It was not the highest of the hills, but it was bare at the top, so that it afforded them a panorama that boxed the compass.

"I'm sure that streak off to the north," said Sally, "is the main road."

The Wreck nodded his agreement.

"I've about made up my mind," said Sally, "to go back to the Bar-M. I don't want you to think I'm a quitter. But I'm not sure that I have any errands in Chicago. Not now, at any rate."

"That's all right."

"Saddle-sore?" she asked suddenly.

"No!"

"I think if you could always ride the sheriff's horse, Henry, you'd overcome your prejudice—provided the sheriff happened to be wanting it."

He grinned.

The Wreck was glancing in the direction where he thought Pittsburg lay when his eye was attracted by a movement of something in the meadow below them.

"What's that?" he asked, pointing.

"Two horses, with riders," said Sally promptly. "And they're following our trail."

"I left the rifle hanging on the saddle," he said, sheepishly.

"Let's hustle down and get it. Besides, we want our own horses."

Half running, half sliding, they started down the steep hillside.

"Keep behind the rocks and trees as much as you can," she advised.

They dodged into cover wherever they could find it, working downhill in a zigzag course toward the spot where they left the horses. The horses were not in sight.

"I'm afraid they've drifted down toward the meadow," she said. "What do you think we'd better do?"

"Keep going."

"But if they reach the horses first ——"

"We've got to take a chance. Maybe it's nobody who'll bother us, anyhow."

She had misgivings on that score, but followed him as he took the lead. A few minutes later, when he was several yards in advance, she saw him stop abruptly and make a signal for caution. He pointed to an opening in the trees.

"It's your friend and somebody else," he whispered.

The Wreck was right. Bob Wells, dismounted, had recovered his own horse and was subjecting it to a critical scrutiny. With him was a man whom Sally had never seen before.

"Out of luck again," she groaned.

"Oh, they haven't got us yet," said the Wreck, confidently.

"But they will."

Presently the sheriff began examining the ground and Sally pinched the Wreck's arm.

"There—he's looking up. Duck!"

There was a big boulder handy; they stepped behind it and flattened themselves.

"What'll we do?" asked Sally.

"We might work around to the side," he suggested. "But—they're coming now."

Up the steep slope they could see the sheriff and his companion.

"Well, I guess this is the finish," she said, grimly.

"Listen," whispered the Wreck, "you stay here."

"Where are you going?" She seized his arm.

"I've got a scheme. Leave it to me."

"We're both in this together, Henry ——"

"Let me go," said the Wreck, fiercely. "I know what I'm doing."

She released his arm.

"Please be careful, Henry. Please!"

"Sure." He spoke jauntily.

Rising suddenly to his feet, he winked reassuringly.

"So-long, Sally. You stay right here until you're sent for."

He stepped out from behind the boulder. She watched him with wondering eyes. Why—he was surrendering.

The Wreck's hands were lifted in the air as he strode down the trail. He had not gone half a dozen paces when the sheriff's gun covered him.

"Heigho," said the Wreck. "Looking for anybody?"

Bob Wells stared, and as he stared his mouth opened wide.

"Well, I'm a son of a gun!" he gasped.

"Uh-huh," assented the Wreck. "What's the idea?"

"It's the four-eyed dude!" said the sheriff, in a voice of wonder.

"Sure!"

The second man joined the sheriff, and both stared incredulously at the spectacled Wreck.

"So it was you who stole my horse," said Bob Wells.

"Just utilized him," said the Wreck. "And you've been running a stick-up game!"

The Wreck grinned.

"I decline to answer, on the usual grounds," he remarked. "You needn't keep that gun on me unless you're nervous."

The sheriff's glance roved the hillside.

"Where's your gang?" he asked, suddenly.

"Well, if I was a sheriff," drawled the Wreck, "and if I thought there was anybody else I wanted, I'd go and look for 'em."

"What would you be doing with two horses if you didn't have somebody else with you?"

"I'm a trick rider."

Bob Wells stood glowering.

"You're a fresh bird," he muttered.

The Wreck began playing with a handful of pebbles.

"We'll get your gang anyhow," said the sheriff.

The Wreck was humming a tune.

Suddenly Bob Wells remembered something.

"Where's that flivver of yours?"

This was news to the Wreck. He had supposed that the flivver was also captive.

"She's in Montana," he said archly.

Just then Bob Wells remembered another thing, and it startled him.

"What became of Sally Morgan?" he demanded.

"Oh, she got her train."

"If I had the least suspicion she didn't," said the sheriff slowly, "I'd shoot you where you sit."

Bob Wells turned for a whispered consultation with his companion.

"Well, no more nonsense," said the sheriff. "Lead us to your gang."

"Nobody around here, sheriff."

"Going to make us take a look, are you?"

"I'm not making you."

The Wreck's only hope now was that Sally had managed to disappear. He wanted to keep her out of it, at any cost.

"We'll take him along with us, Jim," said the sheriff. "You keep a good eye on him."

"You're a big fathead," said the Wreck, irrelevantly.

Out from behind her boulder stepped Sally Morgan, her eyes very bright and her cheeks red under the tan. She walked briskly ino he group.

"Hell!" said the Wreck.

Bob Wells fell back a pace and gaped at her.

"Sally!" he cried.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Getting Engaged.

The sheriff felt that he was staring at an apparition. Sally had taken her stand beside the Wreck. Why hadn't she kept out of it? thought the Wreck

"Sally Morgan!" The sheriff's voice was unsteady.

"Certainly," said Sally.

Bob Wells took a step forward, reaching for her, hesitated.

"But he said——" The sheriff glared at the Wreck.

"I heard what he said," remarked Sally.

The sheriff's eyes narrowed.

"Sally, you've been kidnapped!" he exclaimed.

She laughed.

"Don't be a fool, Bob."

"And don't finger that gun," added Sally. "Kidnapped! Do I look like a person who could be kidnapped?"

"You never took the train," muttered Bob Wells, staring at her.

Again he turned to the Wreck.

"If you've kept her a prisoner," he said, "you'll never get out of the state alive."

"Maybe," agreed the Wreck.

Sally turned a look of amazement toward him.

"Henry Williams!" she cried. "Don't you be a fool. And you, Bob Wells, put that gun away."

"I—I don't get it at all," said the sheriff, helplessly.

"Well, you'd better get it!" Sally exclaimed.

"What do you mean by chasing me all over the country?"

Bob Wells stared.

"You heard me. I said chasing me. Do you think I'm a criminal?"

The sheriff was dazed.

"I wasn't pursuing you," he faltered.

"Yes, you were. You pursued me up here, didn't you? I won't have it, Bob Wells. You wait till I tell Dad Morgan."

"I was out after a gang," said the sheriff. "How did I know——"

"It's your business to know."

"I didn't know it was my girl. I didn't know it was any girl."

"Your girl!" said Sally. "Bod Wells, you're a whole lot stupider than I thought you were."

The sheriff shook his head in a weary way.

"I'm all mixed up."

"You listen," commanded Sally.

She told it, from the very beginning. She told it with gestures and high inflections, but she kept it all in orderly sequence.

"So that's what happened and that's why I'm here," concluded Sally.

Bob Wells considered it for a minute.

"Why didn't you telephone home?" he asked.

"If you can't understand, it's not worth while trying to make you."

"It's mighty queer. I don't see how you can explain——"

"What?" cried Sally.

"A lot of things. You go running around the country with this man—God knows what kind of a record he's got—and you seem to think it's nothing at all."

"Stop!"

But the sheriff was recovering poise. He was a man whose rights had been trifled with. His bewilderment was giving way to resentment.

"What kind of a position does it leave you in?" he demanded.

Sally rested her hand on the Wreck's arm and regarded Bob Wells with a blistering stare.

The Love that never Dies

Your Home Secure

"A man's home is his castle". The protection of his wife and family—and of his castle—is the chief function of the life insurance policy.

It is difficult for the average man early in his career to accumulate sufficient wealth to guarantee that his income and his home will be perpetuated, should he be removed by death. By surrounding his home with the protection of life insurance, worry for the future is eliminated. This makes for a peaceful and happy present.

Each insured individual lends stability to the homes of other insured individuals. Thus life insurance becomes the greatest of co-operative systems in which the ideal of "all for each and each for all" is realized.

Procrastination is the greatest foe of family security. This "thief of time" is also the thief of home comforts for a bereaved family.

You should cease putting off this vital matter. Why not discuss your insurance programme with a life insurance man to-day?

USE ALPHABET TO WRITE NAME

Kagwadawwacomegishearg is Small Potatoes Beside Some Others.

A FEW SAMPLES

Close on the heels of the attention recently paid to Mr. I, a Chinese student, hailed as the possesor of the shortest name, there Comes Colonel J. N. Wolfson, who tested the memory of Filipino school children by betting they couldn't memorize his name in full. He lost $11.50 in prizes, even though his complete name, with 106 letters, is Josephus Adolphus Americus Vespucius Leonidus Wolsicanicus Alexandricus Naptalicus Luciu Quintus Cincinnatus Wolfson—unless the cables got some of it twisted.

He has twelve names in all, but that was exceeded a few years ago by an English bride who had one name for each letter of the alphabet. Any one could fill lines of type easily enough if he or she had an inventive godmother.

The real distinction in length of name would probably be given for linear measurement of the family name. On such a basis, Don Joan Iturriberrigorrigoicoerotaberricoechea would probably be a runner-up. It is a real name, culled from an Argentine newspaper and given to the English world by Punch. This name must be set beside another from the Spanish; in the year 1867 the employees of the Finance Department at Madrid included Don Juan Nepomuceno de Burionagonatotorecagageazcoecha.

The Argentine when introduced to the world found a challenge in a Cingalese student at London University a few years previous who needed thirty letters, but Mr. Ituri &c. won by eight letters. He was vanquished, however, by an old King of Burma, whose name was Stiritaribhavanadityapauarapanditasudhammarajamahadhipatinarapatasithu. The called him "King" for short.

Rabelias has M. Rostocostojambedanesse among his characters, and there is a giantess with an adequate name, Alcomiroziropoulopiliousitounitapignac. Beside her the Wisconsin Indian chief Kagwadawwacomegishearg is very small potatoes.

Alphabet Exhausted.

As for mere long words, not proper names, most speakers of English would guess at disestablishmentarianism or honorificabilitinitabus as holding the record and let it go at that. There are chemical combinations whose names run on for inches. The gazetteer contributes its own, including Drimtaidhvrickhmllichattan, which is in Argyleshire.

Wales has a village with almost as many letters as inhabitants; the British post office authorities take the first thirty letters as enough, but the name in full has fifty-nine, to wit: Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgogerychwyrndrobwllyllandyssiliogogogoch That is really short, for the meaning in English runs longer. It is: "The Church of St. Mary in a hollow of white hazel near to the rapid whirlpool and to St. Tisillio Church near to a red cave."

Thus nature in Wales outdoes fiction, for Rabelais himself, making words for the sake of making them, seldom exceeded morramborizeverzengirezequoquemorgascacbaquevezinemaffretiding, and he didn't try to tell what it means. Aristophanes, though, goes even further—he has one word that requires 169 Greek letters, or 179 English, to spell its seventy-eight syllables. The longest of German compound words, all run together, would probably split up in humility before it, and the stage performer who called himself a velocipedestrianisticalisturianologist would have to doff his hat to it.

Troublesome Words.

I have seen lists of the words most often misspelled," said the teacher, "but in my experience the one most frequently sinned against in print is 'gauge.' I have even found it stamped 'guage' on the manufactured article. The next most frequently used, 'buoy' certainly ranks high. 'Weird' seems to give some pepole lots of trouble, and almost everybody on a test will missppell 'deleble,' because better acquainted with its negative, 'indelible," which has changed its original spelling."

White fox fur and black dull crepe make this attractive spring coat that is lined with white crepe de chine. It has the smart flare at the hemline and the smooth, close fitted effect about the hips. The fur bands coming from the hemline to waistline are decidedly new.

Aged Radio Fan Asks For Shorter Sermons

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20. — (United Press).—From far-away Curacao, in the Danish West Indies, comes a complaint from a 75-year-old radio fan that the American sermons broadcast on Sunday evenings are too long. The elderly gentleman, who owns one of the few sets in the island, recently told a representative of the Department of Commerce that while he "listens in" regularly every Sunday to the sermons sent out from Pittsburgh and Schnectady, and enjoys them, he said he would like to see them shortened.

There are but half a dozen sets in service in Curacao, the department is informed. Radio equipment brought into that country pays only a 3 per cent. duty, and may be used without governmental restriction beyond seguring a letter of permission from the Governor and for which there is no charge.

Lack of contact with modern broadcasting and a fear of interference from static probably are responsible in part for the limited number of sets in use, while the cost of the class of equipment needed to satisfactorily receive programs from America may also be a factor.

According to two radio fans in Curacao, a good 5-tube set gives satisfactory loud speaker reception of the better known American stations east of the Mississippi.

CHURCH SOCIETIES MET IN MILLBROOK

David Beacon, Oldest Orangeman, Lives in Clifford, Ont.

MILLBROOK, Feb. 20.— The "Golden Link" Mission Circle held its February meeting on Tuesday evening at the parsonage, the president, Mrs. J. McKnight, in the chair. Twenty members were present.

Marie Kenyon and Margaret Howard had the programme in charge and the latter read the Scripture lesson from the 34th Psalm. Elsie Spence and Marjorie Skitch were appointed to look after the March meeting.

A reading, "The wish that came true," by Marie, was most appropriate for a young peoples' gathering, as was also the "Personal Message", outlining two days' activities in the life of a missionary doctor in Saskatchewan, which was read by Jean Burnham. A solo, "Flee as a Bird," by Mrs. G. W. Sayles, was much enjoyed, and the chapter from the study book, "Beneath the Smoke Stacks," given by Miss S. Hetherington, was most instructive.

During the discussion of business items the president brought up the matter of completing the autograph quilt which the circle has had under way for some time. Several new names were secured, and it is expected to have the quilt finished and ready to be auctioned off at the basket social the C.G.I.T. and C.S.E.T. groups are giving on St. Patrick's Day, Tuesday, March 17th.

Woman's Auxiliary.

The Woman's Missionary Auxiliary has the promise of an address from Mrs. (Rev.) A. J. Langford, Peterboro, for its next meeting the second Wednesday in March, and the circle will ask Mrs. Langford to remain for the evening and speak to its members, and any other who may attend. Both afternoon and evening gatherings will be open to the public, and will be of special interest to all missionary workers.

The annual rest fund collection was taken up, and the meeting dismissed with the closing prayer from the 19th Psalm.

Personal Paragraphs.

Mr. S. E. Eakins is in Toronto this week attending the annual convention of hardware merchants of the province.

Misses May Duncan and M. Needham were visitors to Peterboro on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Russell were called to Garden Hill on Saturday evening owing to the serious illness of their only daughter, Elizabeth, who has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. Jas. Beatty, and developed an attack of pleuro-pneumonia. The patient is making progress slowly toward recovery. Mrs. Russell returned home on Tuesday.

Canada's Oldest Orangeman.

The decision to have the annual Orange Walk in Millbrook this coming Twelfth of July for the first time in 18 years, lends interest to the fact that Canada's oldest Orangeman is David Beacom, of Clifford, Ont., who recently celebrated his ninety-seventh birthday. Becoming allied with the Orange Order in his 21st year, this veteran has not missed a celebration of the Battle of the Boyne in 76 years.

Coming to Canada from Enniskillen, Ireland, eighty-three years ago, in 1842, Mr. Beacom, who was showered with congratulations from friends far and near on his birthday, has resided continuously in Huron County since that time.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, February 20 (Canadian Press).— With predictions current that wheat trade in the United States will be on a domestic basis during April, May, and June, wheat scored a brisk upturn in price yesterday to $1.87 1-2, May delivery, but then profit-taking on a liberal scale led to a reaction.

Euchre and Dance Was Very Enjoyable Function

HARWOOD, Feb. 20. — The euchre and dance held on Friday evening under the auspices of the Harwood W.I. was well attended and a great success. In fact it was one of the most enjoyable events of community life for a long time.

The first part of the evening was spent playing progressive euchre. Mr. Jack Minifie and lady partner won the prize in this, and Mr. Hilliard O'Connell and partner, the other prize. After euchre there was dancing until the "wee sma hours." A prize for waltzing was awarded to Mr. Victor Ferguson and Mrs. Honeywell, whose graceful dancing was much admired. The judges were Mrs. L. R. Isaac, Mr. Garnett McMahon and Mr. Houghtailing. The Minifie Orchestra furnished suitable music for dancing. Altogether the evening was much enjoyed.

SOCIAL GATHERING OF ODDFELLOWS

Rebekahs Entertained at Millbrook by Lodge No. 308.

MILLBROOK, Feb. 20.—The officers and members of Millbrook Lodge I.O.O.F. No. 308, were hosts for a very pleasant social gathering in the Lodge Rooms on Tuesday at 8.30 p.m., when they entertained the members of "Golden Sheaf" Rebekah Lodge, No. 176.

About one hundred guests were in attendance. Unfortunately those who were to have contributed to the programme were unable to give the assistance arranged for, but several tables of progressive euchre provided enjoyable entertainment during the first part of the evening. Music and dancing after supper was served, rounding out the pleasure of the occasion most acceptably.

Winners of the first prizes were: Mrs. W. E. Ball (box of bon-bons), and H. R. Armstrong (pair silk socks). Consolation, Miss Gertrude Harkness and Mr. Jas. Hales. An overplus of ladies made it necessary for some to take gentlemen's places at the card tables, and five "men" had to draw for the winner of first prize: Mrs. H. J. Armstrong, Mrs. Wilbert Thorne, Mesrs. Cecil Sutton, E. Armstrong, and H. R. Armstrong, the latter getting the lucky cut.

The commitete in charge was Brothers C. C. Garside, F. N. Alcorn, D. Sheppard and F. Wells.

A second series has now been arranged, and the winning debaters in these first groups are to play off or rather debate off. The subject of the second debate is "Resolved that the influence of John Knox in Scotland was, and is, as great as that of Wesley in England."

FREE STATE BARRISTER.

O'Higgins, Minister of Justice, Never Passed Examination For Bar.

DUBLIN, February 20 (Associated Press). — A distinction without precedent in the history of the British or Irish bars was conferred recently upon Kevin O'Higgins, Free State Minister of Justice, who without the formality of an examination, was called as a barrister, that is, given permission to plead in the Free State Courts.

Mr. O'Higgins at one time passed the examinations required of solicitors, but never was admitted to the legal profession.

Memorial Hall.

Maple Leaf Lodge No. 351, Ladies Orange Benevolent Association took a progressive step this week, when they purchased from Mr. W. C. F. Rorabeck the house and lot at the corner of Orange and George streets at present occupied by Mr. Killick. The ladies have been working for three years now with the objective of raising money for the erection of an Orange Memorial Hall, to commemorate the service and sacrifice of the members of the Orange Order, who fell in the great war overseas. Their effores have been attended with success, suficient to warrant the purchase of a site, and they have now secured a central and suitable one. As soon as funds will allow, they expect to erect a building upon it that will serve the purpose of a lodge-room and also probably a dance hall or auditorium, the latter occupying the ground floor and the lodge-room the second floor. This may not be accomplished for some little time yet, but the ladies have it in view, and are to be commended for their enterprise. It will be a worthy addition to that part of George street.

London's Famous Abbey Is Filled With Junk

LONDON, Feb. 20. — (Associated Press)—The proposal to overhaul Westminster Abbey so that more of its treasures and beauties may be revealed, has led C. W. R. Nevison, an English artist, to remark that the Abbey is more like a departmental store than a church. The opinion that some of the most beautiful things in the Abbey cannot be seen because of the overcrowded memorial statuary is shared by many lovers of the historic building, including Canon Westlake, the Abbey historian.

"The proper course is to get rid of some of the ecclesiastical junk at present in the Abbey," Mr. Nevison told the Westminster Gazette. "I think it could be cleaned out without offending anybody's susceptibilities. Ultimately many beautiful things could be discovered which cannot now be seen."

ILLNESS CLOSES OMEMEE SCHOOL

Children Quarantined as Precautionary Measure—Auction Sale at Doube Farm.

VILLAGE NEWS.

OMEMEE, Feb. 20.—Mr. J. J. Doube, a resident of our village for the past two years, held a very successful sale on his farm at Doube's Bridge last week. Since Mr. Doube left his farm, his brother, Mr. Thomas Doube worked it on shares, but last fall Thomas purchased a farm in Western Ontario, leaving Mr. J. Doube with quite a stock of horses, cattle, implements, etc. Owing to poor health, Mr. Doube was unable to carry on, hence the sale. There was a very large attendance and everything offered for sale went to a good figure. The farm, which was offered was not sold: milch cows brought from $50 to $60 each. Young cattle, two years old, $31 each. A work-team brought close to the $150 mark: 300 bushels of oats from the granary sold at 65 to 66 cents a bushel. Hay in the mow sold at from $10 to $15 per ton. The machinery, household furniture, and other articles brought a fair price. Mr. Wm. Howden wielded the hammer to the satisfaction of all.

Epidemic Closes School.

Omemee is experiencing its annual visitation of spring diseases: mumps, chicken-pox and a mild form of scarlet fever are reported. The Medical Health Officer is taking no chances, however, and all are in quarantine. School is closed for one week for fumigation and all children are ordered to "stay in their own back yard" for eight days. Consequently our village looks almost like "the deserted village" for a few days. All entertainments were cancelled in the hope of stamping them out.

ITCHING ECZEMA DRIED RIGHT UP WITH SULPHUR

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying a little Mentho-Sulphur, says a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation, soothes and heals the eczema right up and leaves the skin clear and smooth.

It seldom fails to relieve the torment and disfigurement. Sufferers from skin trouble should get a little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like a cold cream.

SEALS PLAGUE COAST

Gunboats Despatched to Protect Fishermen's Nets And Fish.

NEVIN, Eng., Feb. 20.—(Associated Press). — A plague of seals along the South Carnarvonshire coast recently put the fishermen temporarily out of business and caused the Government Ministry of Fisheries much annoyance. The seals ate the fish nearly as fast as the fishermen could catch them, for a time, and often tore empty nets to pieces as if they were bent on showing their dislike at finding their "dinner buckets" empty.

On one occasion the seals swarmed into the fishermen's favorite haunts in such numbers that the gunboat H. M. S. Doon was despatched to Carnarvon Bay and, with the aid of residents along the coast, who brought out their hunting pieces, 15 seals were killed in one drive, but even this did not put an end to the pest. Another time, Lord Wavertree and a party of friends who were playing golf, saw a drove of seals sunning themselves on the rocks and, abandoning golf sticks for rifles, killed five one day and six the next.

It has been established that the seals have a breeding place in caves near Nevin, and the Government is considering what steps to take to rid the coast of the nuisance. The seals of this colony are known as the common seal and the gray seal, which have inhabited various parts of the British coasts for many generations, but not in such numbers, ordinarily, as to cause such an inconvenience to fishermen. The fur of these specimens has no particular value commercially.

BEARS BOTHER TOURISTS

Jam, Fruit and Vegetables Tempt Bruin to Summer Cabins.

ST. PAUL, Feb. 20.—(Associated Press.)—The mischievous black bear has become so annoying to settlers, tourists, campers, villagers and others in Minnesota's vast forest lands that he has been made the object of proposed legislation.

A bill introduced in the Minnesota Legislature would appropriate money "for the relief of individuals for injuries suffered to their persons and properties by reasons of attacks from bears."

Under the protection of a state law the bears, according to game wardens, have rapidly increased and these officers liken their number to Minnesota's famous 10,000 lakes.

Flour, vegetables, jams, fruit and other delicacies brought into the woods for human consumption offer the greatest temptations to the bear family, game wardens say. Last summer the wild berry crop was exceptionally poor in Minnesota, and the hungry bears frequently pried the screens or doors from frail summer cabins to help themselves.

State Ready To Explore Long Lost Nevada City

RENO, Nev., Feb. 20.—(Associated Press).—The recently discovered ancient cliff dweller city sometimes referred to as Pueblo Grande de Nevada, or Lost City, located along the banks of the Virgin River in Southern Nevada, is largely on Federal land, and, in the opinion of Governor James Scrougham, should become the property of the state and a separate state department created to govern it and conduct further explorations.

Nevada has several claims against the Federal Government for public lands, and the governor, in a recent address at Lovelock, said some sort of compromise agreement may be arranged whereby the state will become sole custodian of the buried city area.

Two or more thousands of years ago exploration has developed, people thought to be the ancestors of the Pueblo Indians of to-day, established the city which, after reaching a high stage of development, was allowed to go to ruin. Whether it was deserted by its residents voluntarily, whether they were all slain or captured and carried off by their enemies, or all died of disease, is a matter for speculation. In any event the city was deserted, and in time became buried under sand and debris so that hardly a trace of it remained until recent discoveries.

What is believed an irrigation system has been found, and from this it is presumed the city's inhabitants were agriculturists and made the desert bloom in much the same manner as it does to-day in certain sections of the west.

Archaelogical investigation is expected to go forward rapidly this summer. Many mummies and much pottery from the ruins are now being studied.

Novel Appeal Planned To Aid Delinquent Boys

CHICAGO, Feb. 20.—(Associated Press.)—Plans for the production of "The Passion Play" several times a year in Chicago, the proceeds from which would be turned to the juvenile court to aid in its work of reclaiming boys who have drifted into lawlessness, was announced to-day by Cornelius C. Craine, superintendent of the Big Brothers Society, the sponsor.

The play will be given in five acts and 14 scenes, in the home of the Chicago Civic Opera company. The first performance is announced for March 15. Principals in the cast have been chosen with a view to continuing them in their roles year after year, Mr. Craine said.

"Our workers in the juvenile and boys courts have noticed an increase in juvenile crime," Mr. Craine asserted. "The Big Brothers, an association of business and professional men here who reclaim boy delinquents, decided to do something to offset the influences. We collected a sum of money with which to hire the proper stage producers, actors and writers who could produce 'The Passion Play' in as reverential a manner as possible. We think the play would impress and regenerate thousands of youngsters in the crowds and it would equip the Big Brothers with a sum of money for the expansion of their educative work among delinquent boys.

"Every cent of profit is to go to this anti-crime work among the boys who come into Chicago's courts."

THAT THREATEN THROAT & CHEST

The germs of colds, grippe, influenza, and throat troubles are a real peril to everybody. Carried in with the air we breathe they fasten on to the soft delicate membrane of the breathing passages, multiply rapidly and spread irritation and inflammation wherever they go.

The safest and best means of combating this germ peril, is to dissolve a Peps tablet in your mouth whenever the throat feels in the least sore or inflamed.

Peps are a soothing, invigorating and germ-destroying medicine. Their volatile fumes thoroughly disinfect the throat, bringing quick relief from pain and irritation. They put an end to mischievous germs before they are able to carry trouble along into chest and bronchials.

Genuine Infection-Killing Tablets.

Note that every genuine Peps tablet is wrapped in a silver jacket to preserve its freshness and strength. It is also stamped with registered name—PEPS.

PEPS

Whilst PEPS are an expensive remedy to produce the demand has become so great that it has now been found possible to reduce the price to 25c. box of 16 silver-jacketted tablets. Of all druggists.

TO REDUCE FOG BILL

LONDON, Feb. 20 (Associated Press).—Londoners have tackled with renewed energy this winter the problem of reducing their fog bill which often causes a loss to the community of $5,000,000 a day.

Scientists have concluded that while it was impossible altogether to abolish fogs, as provided by nature, it is possible to have comparatively cleaner ones by doing away with the soft coal smoke evil caused by some 4,000,000 to 5,000,000 smoking chimneys.

Officials of the Coal Smoke Abatement Society estimated recently that there were 600,000 inhabited houses in London nearly every room of which, including the kitchen, has its open fire place by which the homes are heated. These fires pour their quota of dirt and soot into the air all day long and far into the night. Ordinarily the soot is carried off by the elements, but when a heavy fog sets in the particles remain suspended in the atmosphere, shutting out the sun entirely, and turn daylight into darkness. Clean fogs could not do this.

During a recent fog here, which lasted the better part of three days, as most of them do, scientists estimated that there were from 250 to 300 tons of soot floating about in the air within the London area. Statistics have been compiled showing that London's annual soot-fall amounts to something like 75,000 tons.

Every individual in the city is affected, more or less, by the heavy fogs and smoke nuisance. Traffic sometimes comes almost to a standstill, and shop dealers often close up their stores because of lack of business. During the fog season this winter alone it has been estimated that the loss to the community has been at least $35,000,000.

By a system of education, promoters of the idea of a cleaner fog hope eventually to do away with the open smokey coal fire place for heating. These would be replaced by gas, electricity, central heating or the use of stoves burning anthracite instead of the bituminous fuel which has caused so much of the trouble.

Dr. John S. Owens, who has taken a leading part in the smoke abatement movement for more than 30 years, says that within 10 or 15 years virtually all the open fire places will have been done away with. Broadly, speaking, London will be virtually a smokeless city, and when the fogs do come, they will at least be clean.

HOPE SIGN IN MIDNIGHT SKY

No Doom Written Among Stars—Serene Brooding Presence.

REIDT WAS WRONG

Robert Reidt was wrong. There was no sign of the Second Coming in the midnight sky. Yet there were signs of something even better—signs past counting. Every star was a sign of that better thing; of the sure and serene presence everywhere and always of something too great to be comprehended, though not too great to be trusted as friendly. The disappointed man of Patchogue has gone away with his bewildered family—in a flivver and not in a cloud, as the headline writer says. Perhaps those little children will grow up to read sky signs better than their father, and come to understand that Robert Reidt was right, in a way, and didn't know it.

Another Of Them.

Hudson Maxim's father was another man wh oexpected to witness the Second Advent. That was the time of Millerism, when whole townships donned ascension robes of white and waited on the hilltops. Says Mr. Maxim in Clifton Johnson's lately published account of the inventor's career:

"My father stood out in the front yard that memorable watchnight and looked toward heaven. He stood there alone, for mother didn't believe a word of the new creed. She jeered at him, and said: 'When you see Christ a-comin', call me, and I'll come out and ketch hold of your coat-tails and go up with you."

Hudson was a small boy then. He is seventy now, and the end of the world hasn't perceptibly occurred yet.

FADS OF THE FLAPPER

Dogs Go Collarless That She May Flash Her Unconventionality.

The flapper was so named, it is said, because she wore pigtails that flapped—she had not yet reached the age to do up her hair. Along came the bevish bob, the pigtails were amputated, and still the name stuck. Nay, more, it spread upward in the age scale until it threatened to include almost any unmarried woman under 40.

Nice people say now that "flapper" isn't to be used. They can't see that it is a better name than ever before. When the typical young woman wears arctics that flap noisily around her heels as she walks, what else can you call her A new word will have to be coined and a new way of wearing overshoes must become the rage before "flapper" will cease to be heard in these regions.

The flapper's busy mind is forever inventing means of calling attention to her unconventionality. Shuffling around the wintry streets in goloshes turned down like the boots of a swashbuckling pirate is only one thing she does. Ltaely she has taken to wearing, in bad weather, a yellow slicker suggestive of the fishing banks and cod liver oil. Around the slicker collar are loops for a strap with which to draw it tight. In place of the strap, however, she wears a dog collar bearing the name, the license number and the residence of the pet from whose neck she has borrowed it.

Perhaps the new fad explains why so many collarless dogs have lately been noted by the dog catcher.

All Gingham Here

THIS young woman is doing her bit for the gingham industry—her dress, hat and parasol are all made of that material. The dress has the long sleeves and close-fitting collar that fashion is so insistent upon, as well as red buttons and bias banding on the hem of the skirt and the panels. In a very short time such dresses will be in season.

WHEN DREAMS COME TRUE!

A POT POURI OF SPRING STYLES.

By HEDDA HOYT.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Feb. 20 (United Press).—The spring style show staged by the National Garment Retailers' Association at the Commodore Hotel recently offered us a pot pouri of the spring styles which suggests jewel and flower colors, pleats, jabots, full skirts, long sleeves and headfitting bonnets.

There are many new styles to be brought out this spring. First, one gets the idea that the straight-line silhouette is doomed. Except in actual tailored and sports types, all frocks shown introduced skirt fullness. While the casual observer might have overlooked this evidence of fullness in skirts, it was there nevertheless.

Lines were supple rather than severe, flat pleats were generously used in sheer materials posed over straight-lined slips. Sometimes the pleating fell at the sides in panel effect, again it was concentrated at the front. The backs of all frocks remained plain and straight-lined. Some of the dancing frocks were extremely full, measuring four or five yards around. Again circular, cut skirts, which were slender over the hips, expressed the full hemline.

Even many of the tailored models got away from the sheath line by using the slashed skirt. The flounce flare which has been the style this winter is not shown in spring models, since the fullness appears to begin from a low waistline rather than from the knees.

Printed Materials.

Printed chiffons were numerous. Sometimes the background was white with flower colored designs and sometimes black was the background for the same colors. The most interesting thing about the printed frocks is the fact that so many of them are made on tailored lines with long sleeves and close-fitting necklines. Their only trimming or decoration being gilets, or jabots in solid color. Many gowns for the coming season have long sleeves and short, set-in sleeves are used only on resort models. Sleeves have slender-fitted lines, although occasionally there is a model with pleated puffs just above the cuff.

Most of the multi-colored frocks were worn with felt hats which matched one of the colors of the material. Red and yellow felts seemed to predominate.

Hydrangea, cyclamen, amber, golden tans, grays with pinkish cast, biscuit and pinkish blond shades were those sponsored for semi-formal frocks. Yellows, reds, white and flowered prints formed the sports collection. For evening wear lovely pastel shades, blues, pinks, blonds and orchid were favored.

Coats of ensemble suits invariably were trimmed about the hems with fur borders, but their collars were entirely unrelieved by fur. Sometimes the cuffs also had a fur band, but the ensemble must be minus a fur collar to be smart, it would seem.

Sleeves Come Back.

We will dress a bit more severe this season than last since most necklines are rather highfitting and tailored and sleeves long. The half-baked look we had a season or so ago due to the wearing of sleeveless frocks for street wear in past.

Hats will be more ornate. Plain felts have been killed off by their popularity. Of course, there is no attempt to draw us back to those over-trimmed bonnets of past seasons but the spring hat must have some individual trim to bring it out of the ordinary.

It is predicted that felts will be worn clear through the summer season, as they were last year. Women have grown so accustomed to these little soft shapes that stiff straws do not entice them. Felts trimmed with flowers are one of the newer notes. Crowns are growing lower and the head-shaped crown will be worn this spring.

MOVIE NEWS

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 20.—(United Press).—Back of the big gates of the Douglas Fairbanks studios there is a bustle and rush for the first time in many months. "Doug" is starting his next picture.

It's been quite awhile since "The Thief of Bagdad" was completed, after which Fairbanks and his wife, Mary Pickford, packed a bunch of trunks and voyaged over to Europe for a long vacation.

But they are back now and both are active on new productions. The line-up in front of the casting director's office is in evidence each day as plans for the next cinema opus progress.

Fairbanks is screening "Don Q," a colorful adventure-romance set in Spanish locale—a typical swashbuckling rapid fire Fairbanks film, of the type which made him famous and keeps him at the forefront of picture favorites.

"Don Q" is a sequel to "The Mark of Zorro," one of Fairbank's popular productions of some years ago.

"What we really do in this new story," said Doug, "is to carry on the adventures of Zorro. We take him from the picturesque California of the middle nineteenth century to the even more picturesque Spain of the same period. There will be all of the Latin fire and dash in the picture, which can best be described as a romantic melodrama."

In the new offering, Fairbanks will play a dual role, Zorro, the father, and Don Q, the son. The dashing Zorro of the first picture, grown older but still a sword-slashing demon, is replaced by his adventurous, romantic son who inherits all his father's courage, wit and charm.

Mary Astor, who was under contract to Thomas H. Ince up to the time of his death, has been selected as Fairbank's leading lady and will be seen as Dolores, a Spanish beauty, whose fascination impels Don Q to many valorous deeds.

Sabastian, most villianous of two villians in the piece, will be portrayed by Donald Crisp, who is also directing the picture. Jean Hersholt, Warner Oland, Lottie Pickford Forest, sister of Mary Pickford, and the Duchess De Lanti are other prominent characters in the cast.

* * *

Fairbanks has just learned that he almost won the $10,000 Adolph Zukor prize given to the writer whose story or play made the best motion picture produced in the year ending September 1, 1924.

The award, it will be remembered, went to Rafael Sabatini for his "Scaramouche," a Rex Ingham production.

According to Robert Sherwood, one of the judges and a well-known New York critic, the committee was at first in favor of awarding the prize to Elton Thomas, author of the story of "The Thief of Bagdad," Fairbank's last production.

When the committee tried to find Thomas, it was discovered the name was fictitious and there was no such author, so the award went to Sabatini.

"Elton Thomas is my nom de plume," Fairbanks explained with a chuckle. "I wrote "The Thief of Bagdad." In fact, I have written several stories under that name."

Mary Pickford says she is now working on a film story for herself and that she may name "Mrs. Elton Thomas" as the author.

* * *

Earle Williams has returned to active work before the camera after a serious illness which kept him off the screen for several months. His newest role is the feature part in "Bigamy," produced by Charles Hutchinson.

* * *

Clara Bow, the flapper specialist, has taken to milk baths—not as an aid to beauty but because her role in "Eve's Lovers," a Warner Brothers production, demands it. Miss Bow claims a milk bath is quite refreshing and as good as water—once in awhile.

Anne Cornwall, petite Wampas baby star, has just returned from several days spent in the frozen depths of Yosemite valley, doing her part as leading lady for Tom Mix in "The Rainbow Trail."

City Churches Crowded To Welcome Ex-Convict

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 20.—(Associated Press).—A man who, as a confessed criminal and an undesirable, left Minneapolis 32 years ago by order of the police, recently returned, a convert to Christianity and a leader in welfare and criminal rehabilitation work. He is John Callahan, superintendent of Hadley Rescue Hall, famous rescue mission in the Bowery, New York, and chaplain of The Tombs prison.

Conditions surrounding the man's departure from Minneapolis and his subsequent return, according to Callahan himself, offer a great contrast. Driven from this city in its infant days as a convict "too crooked to tend bar" and as a confessed thief, Callahan on his return found Minneapolis paying homage to him in almost unprecedented manner.

Callahan spent one week here, and was swamped with visits and messages from Minneapolis' leading men and women.

Welcomed by the bench and bar, the pulpit and the home, Callahan had a program of activity which engaged his time on an average of 14 hours daily. He spoke before many of the leading local civic, business and church clubs, in addition to innumerable other gatherings. On the only Sunday spent here Callahan visited different churches to speak briefly, and special afternoon services were held to give the parishioners an opportunity to hear him.

"Faith in the Bible," Callahan told his audiences, "made me good and kept me good." He still carries the same little copy of the New Testament given him the night of his conversion.

Baking U. S. Pies Baffles German Domestic Expert

POTSDAM, Feb. 20.—Baking an American pie was the stiffest proposition put up to Louise Wyneken, of this city, formerly teacher at the Domestic Science and Trade School of Nienburg, when she went to America recently to study American home life as a cook. In a series of articles contributed to the Berliner Tageblatt, she narrates her personal experiences. The apple pie episode came during her second week in America.

"With diabolical cunning," she writes, "the lady I worked for singled out a pie for me, greenhorn that I was, to bake. This American national dish was a mystery which I dared not attempt to solve, as I had been in the country for less than two weeks. I therefore made a tip-top German apfelkuchen, which looked almost like a pie and certainly tasted better to me. Result: The other disdained it."

Grapefruit was another dish that stumped Miss Wyneken. "The first course," she observes, "was grapefruit. Every American child, of course, knows how to prepare it, but I didn't."

On the whole Miss Wyneken found that American servants have better quarters than German, even the luxury of a private bath, and that they are treated politely, but that, nevertheless, "being a cook in America is no more fun than being one in Germany."

WITHDRAW MOTION TO AMEND THE ACT

MacLean Abandons Plan to Have Parliament Change B.N.A. Act.

OTTAWA, Feb. 20. — (Canadian Press).—A resolution of W. F. MacLean, Conservative member for South York, asking that power to amend the British North America Act be granted to the Parliament of Canada was withdrawn last night by the mover. The amendment and sub-amendment were also withdrawn. For hours, members from the four parties in the House discussed the question raised by Mr. MacLean. In addition to the resolution, two amendments, both emanating from a Labor member, were before the House. The first, moved by J. S. Woodsworth, Winnipeg Centre, provided that consent of all provinces be obtained before the British Parliament was asked to grant powers of amendment to the Dominion.

In the amendment to this, William Irvine, of East Calgary, proposed to refer the whole matter to the Provincial conference mentioned in the Speech from the Throne.

Both the Premier and the leader of the Opposition spoke against the motion and amendments.

YOUNG SHAH AT NICE DEAF TO PERSIA CALL

Settles Down to Enjoy Riviera Life.

NICE, February 20. — Deaf to the insistent pleas reaching him from home that he return to direct the adjustment of internal difficulties of his country, the Shah of Persia has arrived in Nice and blandly established himself for an indefinite sojourn amid the flowers and under the blue skies of the Riviera.

With a suite of five and a retinue of servants, the Persian ruler installed himself in a palatial apartment, and promptly booked a table for a joyous carnival dinner to-night.

According to members of his entourage, the Shah does not intend to allow affairs of State to interfere with his pleasure and will continue his usual Continental life.

Meanwhile he has been receiving long documents from the Prime Minister revealing unsettled conditions at home which require his personal presence and attention.

Officials of the Shah's entourage are considerably worried by His Majesty's indifference, but they have been unable to persuade him of the seriousness of the consequences which might develop from his continued absence.

Danish Court Overrules Jailing Without Trial

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 20.—(Associated Press).—The recent action of the Ministry of Justice in ordering interned, without further trial, a prisoner who had served four terms for immoral conduct, has roused a demand for more specific legislation dealing with this class of offenses. The Superior Court of Copenhagen ruled that the Ministry of Justice had no authority under the law to impose internment without a trial, and ordered the man released and compensated to the amount of 1,200 crowns.

The case created a profound sensation throughout Denmark and numerous prominent persons have been outspoken in their approval of drastic action with regard to offenders against public morality. The author, Alga Eggers, in an open letter declared that "the whole people ought to send the Ministry a vote of thanks."

Baby monoplanes, measuring 12 to 16 feet between wing tips, with a fuselage of 9 to 12 feet, will be made They will use a 40 horse-power motor and be capable of making 76 miles per hour.

They will carry one person.

Duraluminum instead of fabric wings will be built, with special devices to ensure safety.

The company says Army engineers have endorsed the design as suitable for private, police, and forest supervising work.

FIST FIGHT STIRS 2 TOWNS

School Club Rivalry Said to Have Caused Boy's Serious Beating.

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y., February 20. — School authorities here and in Larchmont were aroused yesterday by rivalry between the High Schol clubs which resulted in a fist fight between John Towle, 19 years old, son of Fire Chief George S. Towle, of Larchmont, and Charles Duperly 16, of 41 Woodbine Avenue.

Duperly received a broken jaw and concussion of the brain. His condition is serious.

No police charges have been made against Towle.

The bout took place on the tennis courts of Larchmont Park. Towle told Judge Schafer he and Duperly had agreed to fight.

Mrs. Towle declared the fight resulted from club rivalry, and said she understood the boys met on the court with the sanction of school teachers. The school authorities deny this.

NEW AIR ROUTE VIA NORTH POLE IN HIGH FAVOR

Transfer Passengers for New York, London and Tokio Lines.

HUB OF THE WORLD

Will in Time Be Located At Earth's Top in Frozen North.

By John Gunther, United Press Staff Correspondent).

LONDON, England, Feb. 20.—"North Pole Station! Change for New York and Tokio!"

At some not too distant future some such call as this may be heard on one of the great airships which plan flights from London and New York to the Orient—via the North Pole.

According to Britain's foremost expert in commercitl air navigation, the desolate reaches of Arctic wasteland, now untenanted save for Eskimos, igloos and sperm whales, are certain to become "the hub of the world."

He is Col. the Hon. the Master of Sempill, Scottish laird and director of numerous aircraft concerns. In an exclusive interview with the United Press he told his amazing story.

The Shortest Route.

"It is quite apparent," Col. Sempill began, "that in theory a trip from London to Tokyo across the top of the world"—he paused to emphasize that idea—"such a journey by way of the Polar regions is a great deal shorter than around the Indian Ocean or across Siberia.

"You must look at a globe to see it properly. Maps in the mercator projection are useless. But on a globe, it is easy to trace out a possible air route from London up to Scotland, Norway, and the northern coast of Russia; then dip across the pole and the ice regions; then finally across the shoulder of Asia to Saghalien and Japan.

"This is a journey of about 4,500 miles. The present land way is 9,000 miles, just twice as far.

"From London to Japan now takes 3 weeks. By the air route it will take 3 days.

"So much for London to Tokyo—in theory. Let me add that New York say, to Peking, is just as clearly defined on the globe, as saving in miles and minutes and even a bit more practicable. The New York-Peking route would intersect somewhere in the Arctic the London-Tokyo route—where we would have an international air station with mooring masts and equipment."

Col. Sempill paused. So much, he said of the theory of the trip. Thus far it was clear sailing. But in practice, too, he said that it was almost clear sailing. He explained as follows.

A Safe Route.

"I can't speak for America and the New York route," he said, "but the London-Japan journey is more or less a sure thing. I predict that within fivt years such a route is being operated regularly by giant aircraft."

Perhaps it may not be amiss to mention that Col. Sempill has only just returned from Japan, where he was officially invited to undertake the organization, equipment and training of the Imperial Japanese Air Service.

Many persons in America will also remember Col. Sempill. He headed a British technical aircraft mission to the United States in 1918. He was, by the way, the first man to fly a Handley Page machine in America. He also flew and tested the then new U. S. D-4 type of airplane at Dayton.

Col. Sempill went on to discuss the problems of his great flight.

"We must get rid of the idea that the Arctic is terrible," he said. "By land or boat it may be impossible, but surely not by air. It is the hub of the world for air navigation.

"In the olden days travel to the east was impeded by bugaboos—stories of sea monsters, great storms, mysterious and death dealing islands. We are in the same mytological point of view toward the Arctic now.

"Of course, there will be difficulties. One thing is fog. We must learn to combat fog.

"But the idea that such a trip will be frigidly cold is entirely erroneous. Quite the contrary in fact. The regular traffic will take place in summer.'

Here Col. Sempill paused for a bit of a surprise.

Will Be No Night.

"The boat will leave London, say early in the morning. It will reach Norway by the next morning. After that—there will be no night. Remember, we shall be flying in the land of midnight sun. After the first night ,the trip will continue in 72 hours of consecutive daylight."

The Colonel has specific plans almost ready for his gigantic undertaking.

"The dirigibles used," he said, "will probably be about 880 feet long, with luxurious accommodations for between 50 and 100 passengers, a good amount of freight, and mails. They will be capable of travelling about 70 miles an hour.

"They will be ships of such patterns that if necessary they can do London-Tokyo without a stop. However, it is entirely possible that if an American company goes in for the New York-Peking flight, then at the intersection of the routes somewhere in the Arctic, we shall have masts and a station

"If the trip were a non-stop one, then naturally there would be fewer passengers.'

Col. Sempill, who is the oldest son of the 18th Baron Sempill and thus a scion of one of the oldest noble families in Britain, at present is the head of the International All-Steel Aircraft Syndicate, Ltd. His immediate plans are for the trip he outlined for the first time to the United Press.

He was vastly impressed by his trip to America and hopes to go soon again.

"America should realize that she leads the world in navigation by air," he said. "The United States is too modest a country. The round-the-world flight by the navy planes was a very remarkable flight indeed.

"I have the most profound admiration for your activity in air development. We here have either no enterprise at all or else ill-advised enthusiasms. I am very glad to hear that the Akron people plan a dirigible to match our own R-101.

"By the way, you in America should realize that you have in your country one of the most admirable chieftains of aeronatics now living. I mean my friend, Admiral Moffett."

Col. Sempill has not undertaken his task with mere technical knowledge. First and last he is a flyer himself. His war record—he was a squadron commander of the R.A.F.—was most distinguished. He is only 31 years old.

REFUGEE LADS AND COLLEENS SMILE CHEERILY AS THEY TELL FAMINE TALE OF EMERALD ISLE

Refugees from famine-stricken Ireland are flocking to America. Among them were Sarah and Delia Craven (left to right), and (inset) Joseph Coyne.

BY GENE COHN

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—"Ay, and it's a bad country. It's the good saints only that know what will be becoming of the old folks, what with no peat for the fire and no potatoes for the table, and what with the children sleeping in the hay to keep warm and no milk from the cattle and the children crying for their food.

"It's a good day in Connemara when they be having more than one meal, and that bread. And no money to leave and no money to stay, and some too weak to walk, and where would they be a-walking to?

And all along the seashore little cabins, ten by eight, with ten or a dozen people living in every one; three or four families to every few acres of rocky land, and no crops and no turf and the flu spreading. Ay, it's a bad country."

Thus, with dramatic simplicity, the first refugees to America draw the pictures of Ireland's west coast famine zone. The Cunard liner Coronia has just brought them to America.

A spare and wiry young man is acting as their spokesman—Joseph Coyne, from Clifden in the most westerly hill country of Connemara. It is there and in the fiord-like Belmullet country to the north that the suffering is greatest though through most of Galway and much of Donegal the people fear death and sickness even worse than in the black year of 1847.

But youth is quick to forget. Already the background of misery and suffering was giving way to a foreground of adventure and conquest in the new land. "Puppy loves," born in transit, were to be noted in sly winks and the slip of an arm around a waist.

Romance was riding even as the lean-faced spokesman talked of the somber rocky country of the Connemara coast, where the long rains have ruined the potato crops and there is no turf for the fire. Only flour to make buns and bread. And the coal which the Free State government is rushing will be of little avail, for there is no place for burning it.

Two girls from Galway, pink-cheeked and excited over the adventure of entering a new country, shyly add details to the story. They are the sisters Craven, Delia and Sarah.

Soon they hope to be making money and rushing it back to the old folks that they may escape before it is too late.

Mere boys and girls made up this first refugee party. Only youth can flee the dread zones now, they say.

"All the young folks be leaving fast as they can," says Miss Delia Craven. "It is hard to get the old folks away, even when hunger and sickness comes. All who can are fleeing. They are going everywhere: to South Ireland where times are better, to Dublin, to England and as many as can to America."

As they tell their story groups of immigrants from half the counties of Ireland stand about the deck. Such are the conditions of life in Ireland that some are learning for the first time of the shadow of terror hanging over their fellow countrymen in the west, though tales had been passed about during the ten-day trip from the old country.

"Ay, it's bad enough when things are good," concludes Coyne, "and then it's a grind for turf and potatoes; a fight for mere existence. There's little patches of land for planting and some cattle to graze in the hills. Now the cattle die and the old folks will go next and the babies will go first. Ay, it's a bad country."

Lady Sykes May Offer Winning Horses For Sale

LONDON, Feb. 20.—(Associated Press).—The announcement from America that Lady Sykes, widow of Sir Mark Sykes, has entered colts for the Futurity Stakes of 1927 and fillies for the Matron Stakes, 1926, has aroused much interest in horse-breeding circles in England.

The Sledmere Stud, owned by Lady Sykes, is one of the most important privately-owned thoroughbred breeding establishments in the world, and was founded more than 100 years ago. Last year 17 Sledmere-bred horses won 27 races, valued at $185,000. The famous flying filly Mumtaz Mahal, was bred at Sledmere and when a yearling was sold for $45,000.

While it is believed that Lady Sykes' object in sending horses to America to compete in certain races is to find an eventual market there for the competitors, it is also reported that the first move was made from the American side. The manager of the stud fell in with the suggestion and entered 25 horses.

BRITISH TO CO-OPERATE.

Endeavour to Build Up Another International Armament Conference.

LONDON, Feb. 20. — (Canadian Press).—The Daily Mail says the British Government has decided to co-operate with the United States in an endeavor to build up another international armament conference. The newspaper adds that Austen Chamberlain, British Foreign Secretary, has arranged with Frank Kellogg, retiring United States Ambassador, who is to become Secretary of State on March 4, to attend such a conference during the summer, if an agreement can be reached with the other great powers.

LIGHT FROM BLIND TEACHER TO OTHERS

Free Correspondence School Established in Winnetka, Illinois.

WINNETKA, Ill., Feb. 20.—(United Press).—A free correspondence school for the blind has been established, tested and found to work in this city, recently proclaimed by Prof. William Bailey of Northwestern University as the best managed town in the United States. Its schools, also proclaimed the best, have been augumented by the Hadley correspondence school for the blind, which offers grade school, high school and university work for sightless students.

The school was named for its founder, William Hadley, an eminent Chicago educator, who was struck blind in 1915. Stricken, almost overnight, Prof. Hadley wondered if his study and education were to be of any avail. Then he was asked, after five years of study, if he could teach the Braille system by mail.

Winnetkans, appealed to, supplied enough funds to start a course. For the first year the financial status of the school was haphazard guesswork. A firm foundation was built thereafter, but the roster of pupils has been growing faster than the resources, and there is some discussion relative to the taking over of the schodl by the University of Chicago.

Personal letters, exchanged between students of the school, has revealed many human stories. One blind girl, who had been taught short story writing, expressed her gratitude by writing: "When the light went out of Prof. Hadley's eyes, the windows of heaven were opened for us."

Prof. Hadley himself says: "If I had to choose between having my sight back, or my work, I would choose my work."

FOSTER UPRISING.

Allegation Made That Money Has Been Furnished to Promote Revolt.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Feb. 20.—(Canadian Press). — Anxiety has been caused here by the statement in the Moscow Investia, a Soviet newspaper, that four million gold rubles have been sent to the Balkans to promote an anti-bourgeois uprising this spring, the efforts to be concentrated in Bulgaria and Greece.

Another disturbing circumstance has been the violent campaign in the Belgrade press alleging anarchist uprisings and bloodshed in Bulgarian centres of population.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By SISTER MARY

LOSE WEIGHT.

Juice 1 orange, 4 level tablespoons uncooked wheat cereal without sugar and with skimmed milk, 1 cup salmon salad, 1 cup clear tomato soup, 2 lamb chops, 1 cup sorrel and cabbage salad, 1 cup diced carrots and turnips, 1 whole canned pear, 3 tablespoons strawberry water ice, 2 macaroons, 1 toasted bran muffin, 1 gluten roll, 1 pint skimmed milk.

Total calories, 1192. Protein, 279; fat, 276; carbohydrate, 637. Iron, .0177 gram.

Sorrel is considered an excellent spring green. Its tartness combines well with cabbage. Season sparingly with lemon juice.

The protein content of skimmed milk and whole milk is practically the same, the great difference being in the fat content. So when you drink skimmed milk you are losing the fat which you do not want. These calories can be used to advantage in extra vegetables to supply bulk to your diet.

The salmon salad is made by combining flaked canned salmon and shredded leaf lettuce with lemon juice. Serve on a bed of shredded lettuce.

If possible choose rib lamb chops rather than shoulder as the rib chops are not so fat.

GAIN WEIGHT.

Juice 1 orange, 1 cup boiled rice with 2 tablespoons seeded raisins, 1 soft boiled egg, 1 cup cream of tomato soup with 1 tablespoon whipped cream, 1 cup salmon salad with 2 tablespoons mayonnaise, 2 pork chops, 4 tablespoons milk gravy, 2 tablespoons mashed potatoes, 1 cup carrots in ¼ cup cream sauce, 1 cup sorrel and cabbage salad with 2 tablespoons French dressing 1 whole canned pear on 1 large piece sponge cake with 2 tablespoons whipped cream, 2 tablespoons strawberry water ice folded into 2 tablespoons whipped cream, 1 large piece chocolate layer cake, 2 toasted bran muffins, 2 tablespoons grape preserves, 2 slices nut bread, 2 Parkerhouse rolls, 4 tablespoons butter, 1 tablespoon sugar, 4 tablespoons cream, 1 pint whole milk.

Total calories, 4213. Protein, 348 fat, 1862; carbohydrate, 1803. Iron, .0191 gram.

The twelve raisins add approximately 100 calories as well as some iron to the gaining diet. So eat raisins if you would gain.

This salmon salad combines flaked canned salmon and shredded lettuce with mayonnaise to make moist in place of lemon juice. Then a heavy oil mayonnaise masks the whole and 1 hard boiled egg is used as a garnish.

Pork chops are suggested in place of lamb chops as they are richer in fat and usually less expensive if the housekeeping allowance is running low.

FORM COMMITTEE TO BOOST CANADA

British Government and Dominions to Form Imperial Economic Body.

LONDON, Feb. 20. — (Canadian Press).—Negotiations between the British Government and the Governments of the Dominions for the formation of an Imperial Economic Committee are well advanced, according to the Daily Mail.

The Mail says that it is probable that a large part of the available funds will be spent on advertising and on various schemes for bringing the products of the Dominions more prominently before the public of this country. With this end in view it is likely that the services of those familiar with publicity work will be secured so they can serve among the British representatives.

OPPOSED TO PAYMENT.

Two Thousand Enthusiasts Hear Caillaux Say France Can't Pay Debts.

PARIS, Feb. 20 (Canadian Press) —Joseph Caillaux, former premier of France and returned exile, came back into active political life last night before 2,000 of his enthusiastic supporters, who dined with him in the Magic Citiy, and 2,000 more who crowded into the aisles and went without dinner to hear a speech which they awaited as forecasting his politics.

Caillaux opposed the payment of war debts by France. He said: "Our associates and allies will understand the impossibility of paying what they demand, except by abandoning to them a portion of our claim on Germany."

Journalism Ruins Nerves Of Its Ardent Devotees

LONDON, Feb. 20.—"Journalism is a nerve-wracking profession," Lord Burnham told the guests at a Newspaper Press Fund concert.

"Although our profession," he continued, "has a great deal of attraction superior to any other, it involves a vast amount of wear and tear. There are very few who do not suffer from it. Sometimes, looking back at the years of the war, I am surprised that we are not broken down by the anxieties and responsibilities we bore. Those anxieties and responsibilities may not be recognized so much in Downing Street as we know them in Fleet Street. You know the stress and strain we went through in our different capacities to serve the Commonwealth to the bes advanage in its hour of desperation."

MENUS FOR A FAMILY.

Breakfast — Apples, cereal, thin cream, broiled bacon, poached eggs on toast, corn bread, marmalade, milk, coffee.

Luncheon — Scalloped mutton, whole wheat bread and butter sandwiches, sponge cake pudding, milk, tea.

Dinner—New England boiled dinner, head lettuce with Russian dressing, Boston brown bread, apple roll, milk, coffee.

Serve cold, juicy apples in their natural state for breakfast. The fruit must be pared for children under school age but if the skin is carefully masticated by the older children it should be eaten, by all means. The most valuable mineral salts lie under the skin and the skin itself adds the ever necessary bulk to the winter diet.

Children under school age should not be given the meat of the boiled dinner but may have the vegetables. Meat was included in their luncheon so is unnecessary at dinner time. Children under ten years of age may need a lamb chop or broiled beef patty in place of the boiled corned beef for dinner.

Scalloped Mutton.

Remove skin and fat from cold cooked mutton. Cut in thin slices. Put a layer of buttered cracker crumbs in a well-buttered baking dish. Add a layer of sliced meat, sprinkle with salt and pepper and cover with a layer of cold boiled rice. Dot with bits of butter and add a layer of meat and rice. Pour over two cups of tomato sauce, cover with buttered crumbs and bake 20 or 25 minutes in a hot oven. The dish should be baked long enough to brown the crumbs and make the whole very hot.

Tomato Sauce.

Two cups canned tomatoes, 1 small onion, ½ cup diced celery, 2 whole cloves, 2 tablespoons brown sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 1 tablespoon butter.

Melt butter in saucepan, add onion peeled and cut in thin slices. Simmer over a low fire for five minutes. Add remaining ingredients and simmer, covered, for 20 minutes. Rub through a colander and add enough boiling water to make two cups.

Sponge Cake Pudding.

Twelve thin narrow slices of sponge cake, ½ cup peach or apricot jam, 2 cups boiled ustard.

The pieces of sponge cake should be cut the size of lady fingers. Spread piece with jam and put in a deep dish. Pour over boiled custard and let stand until the cake absorbs the custard, from one to two hours. Serve with or without whipped cream.

Boiled Custard.

Two cups milk, 3 eggs (yolks), ½ cup sugar, 1-8 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Scald milk in double boiler. Beat eggs slightly with salt and sugar. Slowly add milk, beating constantly. Return to double boiler and cook over hot water until mixture coats the spoon. Remove from heat and when cool add vanilla.

QUEBEC CAN'T PASS CHURCH UNION BILL

Says Authority, as Warning to Promoters—Appeal to Courts.

MONTREAL, Feb. 20—(Canadian Press).—The Gazette in a news story under a Quebec date line today says: "There is to be no Church Union Bill as now before the Quebec Legislature adopted this session. This may be considered as practically settled.

"The bill is off until next Tuesday or Wednesday, and it is learned that if the promoters of the bill insist on it going through as now drafted it will be impossible to pass the bill, and it will be killed. The promoters were so notified to-day (Thursday) in what must be taken to mean an official notification under the circumstances.

"The opinion from high authority is that there must be an appeal to the courts so that the Quebec Legislature may have guidance. The members do not feel that they are qualified to deal with the matter."

KING'S CONDITION SLOWLY IMPROVES

Doctors Remained Longer Than Usual in Patient's Room To-day.

LONDON, Feb. 20. — (Canadian Press).—A bulletin issued from Buckingham Palace this forenoon regarding the condition of King George, who is suffering from bronchitis, said: "In spite of a somewhat restless night, the King is making slow progress."

Doctors remained rather longer in the patient's room this morning than on previous occasions, and when their bulletin did not make its appearance at the usual time, some anxiety was felt regarding the King's conditon. Early callers at the Palace, however, were reassured when later it was announced that His Majesty was making slow progress.

It is stated in court circles this afternoon that the improvement noted in the King's condition is continued, although the rate of progress is not so rapid as might be desired. The Prince of Wales, who has been regularly informed regarding His Majesty's condition, called at the Palace this afternoon to see his father and take luncheon with Queen Mary.

COUNCIL WOMEN ANNUAL MEETING CHOSE OFFICERS

Mrs. Arthur Stevenson is Returned as President by Acclamation.

TWELFTH REPORT.

Petition Provincial Council to Provide Two Matriculation Tests in Year.

The twelfth annual meeting of the Local Council of Women took place yesterday afternoon in the green room of the Young Women's Christian Association, with Mrs. A. Stevenson in the chair, and an attendance of about forty ladies. The election of five vice presidents, and a convenor of the Houshold Economics committee, the only positions not filled by acclamation of the affiliated societies, took place, and reports were heard from the standing committees and the allied organizations, to whom Mrs. Stevenson extended the hearty good wishes of the Council for success in the coming year's work.

Positions filled by acclamation were those of president, Mrs. Arthur Stevenson; corresponding secretary, Mrs. A. Mowat; recording secretary Mrs. J. Wearing, and treasurer, Mrs. N. D. Seaton. Mrs. (Com.) A. A. Smith was elected by acclamation also to the convenorship of the committee on Equal Moral Standard; Miss A. Walton to that of Films and Objectionable Printed Matter; Dr. Jessie Birnie, assisted by Mrs. G. Helson, to the committee on Public Health; Mrs. C. E. Jamieson to the Education committee; Miss Helen Bonnycastle to the committee on Mental Hygiene; the president of the Women's Art Association, Mrs. J. E. R. Muro, to the committee of Fine and Applied Arts; Mrs. M. A. Morrison to the Immigration committee; Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner to the League of Nations committee; Miss H. Moffat to the committee on Laws; Mrs. J. Mills to Professions and Employment of Women; and Mrs. W. R. Morris to the committee which has to do with Soldiers' Pensions and Dependents.

The sub-executive was appointed to interview Mrs. Wearing and persuade her to take the convenorship of the committee on Citizenship.

Elections by ballot resulted in the appointment of Mrs. J. B. Mann to the convenorship of the committee on Household Economics, and in the following vice presidents being named: Mesdames G. Helson, F. A. Hodgson, J. Mills, S. F. M. Touchburn and Miss A. Lancaster.

Returning officers for the vote were Mrs. J. B. Mann and Mrs. C. Snider; tellers, Mrs. J. J. Pollock and Mrs. E. Manning.

President's Remarks.

Mrs. Stevenson, in her opening remarks, spoke of the aims of the National Council, as a whole, being "the prevention of waste, the providing of unity and the producing of force," and said "I don't think there has been one social reform accomplished in the Dominion in the past twenty-five years that the Council has not done the pioneer work for."

Mrs. Stevenson referred with regret to the holding of elections for municipal offices on a holiday and asked interest of the members in the Well Babies' Clinic and the subject of maternity care, for a vigilant eye to objectionable matters in connection with moving picture shows, and a study of citizenship and the League of Nations.

The corresponding secretary, Mrs. A. Mowat, giving the twelfth annual report of the Local Council of Women, spoke of the remarkable growth of the child welfare movement, and reviewed the work of the council in various endeavors. Mrs. Mowat, in the absence of Mrs. N. D. Seaton, also read the treasurer's report, showing total receipts for the year as $129.45, including balance from last year of $34.70, and expenditures of $106.51, leaving a balance on hand at present of $22.94. Receipts from Mrs. Thorburn's lecture were $18.61, with expenses of $17, leaving a balance of $1.61.

Reports of Committees.

Reports of the standing committees were then given. Dr. Jessie Birnie reviewed the work of the Well Babies' Clinic, showing a very successful year just passed, with a large attendance at the Tuesday afternoon clinics, and interest taken by the attending physicians and the public at large. Dr. Birnie commended the assistance given by Mrs. W. Galbraith and the Misses Best and Giles, and spoke of the generous help given by the following: The G.W.V.A., who give a room, rent free; the Thursday Club, who supply infants' outfits, the King's daughters, who provide tea at the meetings, and the donations from the Graduate Nurses' Association, the 57th Regimental, Otonabee and Peter Robinson Chapters of the I.O.D.E., the Female Voice Choir and private individuals.

Mrs. J. Mills added a word of appreciation to what she termed Dr. Birnie's "modest" report, saying that work done by the Well Babies' Clinic was wonderful.

Other brief reports were given by Miss A. Walton, for Objectionable Films and Printed Matter, recording nothing objectionable in either or in the posters exhibited around the city; by Mrs. J. B. Mann for Household Economics, by Miss H. Moffat on Laws, and by Mrs. J. Mills, on Professions and Employment of Women.

Reports from the affiliated societies were given as follows. Catholic Women's League, Mrs. F. A. Howgson, who also gave the report for the Women's Art Association; Graduate Nurses' Association, Miss I. Devell; 57th Regimental Chapter I.O.D.E., Mrs. S. Clegg; Peter Robinson Chapter I.O.D.E.; Miss M. Storey; Ladies' Aid Society of Knox Church, Mrs. J. J. Pollock; King Edward Home and School Assoc., Mrs. Jas. Gerard; King George Assoc., Mrs. V. Hamilton; Queen Alexandra Home and School Association, Mrs. K. Simpson; Mission Circle, Trinity Church, Mrs. B. McLeod, who also gave the report for the Women's Auxiliary to the G.W.V.A.; Mission Circle of Murray Street Baptist Church, Mrs. W. H. Kidd; George Street Church W.M.S., Mrs. H. S. Strong; St. John's C.W.A., Mrs. J. Mills; All Saints' Women's Auxiliary, Mrs. W. J. Lundy; Women's Teachers' Guild, Miss Olga Johnston; Protestant Home, Mrs. E. E. Harvey, who also gave the report for the Young Women's Christian Association; W.C.T.U., Mrs. A. B. Cunningham; Ladies' Aid, Mark Street Church, Miss S. Hamilton; female voice choir, Mrs. R. Bugg.

Assent to Resolution.

The council gave its assent to forwarding a resolution to the provincial council, which petitions that council to ask the Ontario Government to amend the educational act, so as to allow students who are earning their own living to have an opportunity to take matriculation examinatioins at least twice a year. Mrs. Stevenson explained that, up to last year such secondary examinations were allowed, but that excuses of economy had caused the government to cancel all but the one examination, thus working a hardship on those students who are earning their own living and find it a difficult matter to get up thirteen subjects for examination at one time, whereas High School pupils have every consideration during a three-year course to write on these subjects.

R. Morris was appointed auditor of the Council's books for the year.

A vote of thanks to The Peterboro Examiner for good work done for the council during the year was moved by Miss A. Walton, seconded by Mrs. R. Bugg, and passed by the meeting.

Americans May Organize Country Club in London

LONDON, Feb. 20.—(Associated Press).—An American country and residential club may be organized in London in the near future. One of the historic tracts near London where Henry VIII. used to hunt has been suggested as the site, and as there is plenty of space for golf, Americans interested in the deal rather look upon this place with favor.

It has been proposed by the prime movers in the idea to take misspell 'deleble,' because better this including a splendid Georgian mansion known as Addington Park, one of the show places of this section. The site of the proposed club is near Croydon, the large airdrome from which London planes arrive and depart for the Continent, and until a few years ago was the country seat of the Archbishops of Canterbury.

The hunting lodge of Henry VIII. stood near where the mansion is located. Originally this site was granted by William the Conqueror to his cook on the peculiar condition that he and his successors should present at royal coronations a certain mess of pottage in an earthenware pot.

Prohibition Efficiency.

Manufacturers Laud Measure as Producing Better Workmen in U. S.

CARDIFF, Feb. 20 Associated Press)—Prohibition has increased the efficiency of American workmen by 20 percent, says a report by Sim and Coventry, Ltd., tinplate market in 1924. The report adds that this factor must be taken into consideration if it ever comes to clear cut competition between the American and British tin plate workers.

"It is fashionable in some quarters to laugh at prohibition," the report continues, "but this calculation seems to suggest that, rather than a laughing matter, it is a factor of very real importance.

TORONTO, Feb. 20.—(Canadian Press).—"We cherish very lovingly the memory of the departed, the flowers symbolize the beauty and fragrance of her nature," said Rev. The utmost simplicity marked the service, which was attended only by relatives and a few close friends.

LAUDS INFLUENCE OF GOOD READING ON THE WORLD

Newspapers and Magazines Are the University of Men on the Street.

INFORMATIVE TALK.

By W. H. Harrison, of Toronto, to Local Social Hygiene Council.

A brief address on "The Influence of Books on Morality" was given to about forty-five people in the Public Library Hall last evening by W. H. Harrison, of Toronto, secretary of the Canadian National Newspapers and Periodicals Association, speaking under the auspices of the local branch of the Canadian Social Hygiene Council.

Rev. James W. Gordon, pastor of St. Andrew's Church, occupied the chair, and introduced the speaker. Mr. Gordon, in a few sentences with regard to good reading, said: "I think I could trust the children in my own home against almost any temptation if I could control the books they read during the next ten years."

Influence of Reading.

"There is nothing more typical of our age than the development of the art of reading. Printing, which is so closely allied with reading, is the mother of all the inventions and all the arts, and has done more outside of the church, to influence the life of the people of to-day than any other thing. A splendid illustration of the speedy distribution of an idea, got by the public press, is the fact that six months ago, none of us knew anything about crossword puzzles. Now you find them everywhere. Newspapers and magazines are the most influential educational factors in the world to-day, outside of the church, from which their influence is not divorced. They are the post-graduate course, the university of the man on the street," said Mr. Harrison.

The Printed Word.

The speaker referred to the "tie-up" existing between morals and reading, which he considered one of the sources of morals and alluded to the trend of the times toward realism in the printed word. "The world to-day is strong for realism. Even if it is the realism of the gutter, they will condone it, as long as it is the semi-confessional type of reading they want. Realism is fine if you can take it sensibly, but it is the manner of approach taken by an author that counts. It is like comparing nudity and nakedness. There is nothing bad in nude art, but there can be a lot of badness in nakedness."

Mr. Harrison spoke of a tendency exhibited by the press of the United States to make reports snappy and jazzy, and of the "sane, healthy press we have in Canada, with a decent outlook on life. There is a good deal of spicy reading coming into the Dominion from the country to the south of us." Investigation at news stands from time to time had caused him to reach the conclusion he said, that the majority of such reading was purchased by young boys and girls, "who are in the formative stages, and immature, mentally, morally and physically."

The Facts of Life.

The speaker was in favour of frankness with children in regard to the facts of life, but again asserted that the manner of approach was the main thing. He was not in favour of a general censorship of books, and thought that a habit of prohibition of certain reading matter often led to young people securing it in secret fashion later. He was rather in favour of supplying the needs of the young, growing minds with plenty of material of the proper sort, and said, when speaking of the commercial aspect of good reading, "morality and virtue are not only Divine decrees, but they are good, common practice. They are expedient."

Mr. A. Mowat, moving a vote of thanks to the speaker, thought that less reading of papers and magazines, and a return to the good books, the classics of the Old Land would be a desirable thing.

Mr. F. H. Dobbin, seconding the vote, said: "I am convinced that the lower the class of reading that you put into the hands of the reader, the more you will emasculate his mind, until presently his mental capacity will reject anything that does not satiate his craving for the sensational. But, in the long run, are we not getting what we ask for? Is it not a question that if there was no demand for that kind of reading it would cease to be supplied?"

Read the Newspapers.

Rev. Mr. Gordon, presenting the thanks of his audience to Mr. Harrison, advocated the reading of a great number of newspapers and of less subject matter in each of them. To purchase many papers and read only what was of interest in each, was his advice. He though that, with reading, like butter, it was a case of discovering the difference between eating good and bad butter by constantly eating good butter.

Dr. Ray Scott, president of the local society, announced that in March, a talk would be given by Miss Frances Brown, from the Toronto Department of Health, and that in April, Professor Sandford, of the University of Toronto, would speak on Sex Education.

Latest Comment on Grain and Industrial Markets.

Closing Quotations on Principal Active Stocks.

CHICAGO'S CLOSING GRAIN LETTER.

Wheat.—Export trade news was bullish and caused some late buying of wheat. Russia was reported by English cables to have bought 70,000 tons of flour. The equivalent of 3,150,000 bushels of wheat and New York wired that two steamers were loading with wheat for Russia. Export sales otherwise were 800,000 bushels. Clearances were the largest for some time; however, the market eased off in the late trade, and there was a lot of local pressure in addition to considerable profit-taking by longs.

The local cash demand was slow. Receipts are moderate, and stocks should show large decrease at various points this week. It is expected Kansas City will be materially reduced by the shipments to Gulf ports covering recent export business. Much will depend on the export trade developments, but we look for fairly heavy clearances for comparatively light receipts, and believe that conditions are shaping gradually more in favour of the bulls.

Corn.—Corn prices finished a little higher in spite of the heavy profit-taking and the reaction in wheat. The deferred months were especially strong. Receipts were 142 cars here with primary receipts of 581,000 a year ago. The cash market was steady with sales of 40,000 bushels. Country offerings are light.

OATS.

Selling of oats was too heavy for the demand and prices closed lower, the handicaps of big stocks offsetting the prices for the time being. Receipts are extremely small, however, and it is probable that there will be irregular export buying to help.

RYE.

Rye closed with a big advance, which probably reflected a better export inquiry, although no big sales were reported. On the dips favor buying rye and would not be surprised if the Eastern stocks which have been a bug-bear so long would disappear more rapidly than expected.

FOLLOW PASTORS LEAD

KINGSTON, Feb. 20. (Special.)—The congregation of St. Andrew's church, Picton, of which the Rev. C. I. Cowan, B.D., is the pastor, voted against union.

Believing that there would be a diminution of income as a result of the vote, and in order to keep the church self-supporting, the pastor voluntarily reduced his salary $200. He refused to take his cheque for the full amount, and has called upon the members of his congregation to follow his lead in doing more than ever they had formerly done to keep the church strong and vigorous.

FRANCE TO HAVE LEVY ON CAPITAL

Admitted to be the Only Solution of Her Financial Troubles.

DEPUTIES ALARMED.

PARIS, Feb. 20. — (Canadian Press).—Official circles conceded to-day that a capital levy in some form or another is among the plans the Government was studying for the solution of France's financial troubles. This was admitted in those circles to be the proper interpretation of the declaration made in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday by Finance Minister Clementel, which first came to notice when printed sheets on the financial debate were distributed to the press.

The discovery caused a sensation in the press gallery. The majority of deputies, when consulted, appeared somewhat alarmed at the blunt way in which the Finance Minister announced that a capital levy will doubtless become necessary.

A Change in Term.

Proofs for the Journal Officiel were consequently modified, the phrase being made to read "special contribution" instead of "capital levy."

Whether the idea is presented in one form or other, the meaning is that those who possess fortunes would be called upon to give part of them to the State, it was said this morning in official circles.

"Levy" is more brutal than "contribution," it was pointed out, and Frenchmen dislike the idea of constraint and are less likely to be alarmed by the use of "contribution." But both mean the same thing in the end.

PETES BRING HOME THREE GOAL MARGIN IN FIRST OF PLAY-OFFS WITH PARKDALE FOR THE GROUP

Regained Their Arena Stride and Style and Led All the Way—Paddlers Lacked Watson and Jeffrey, But Played One of Best Games This Season.

FLASHES OF LIGHTNING HOCKEY

Petes Showed Better Combination in Spite of Parkdale's Close Checking and Tight Defence — Delighted Their Supporters.

By F. D. C.

By beating Parkdale Canoe Club 5 goals to 2 at the Toronto Arena last night, the Petes grabbed off a nice lead for the second game of the series in Toronto tomorrow night, and barring accidents, Joe Dwyer and company should represent Group No. 1 in the finals against Niagara Falls or Stratford next week.

The blue shirts were never worse than even with Parkdale at any stage of last night's game and were in front all the way after Parker scored their second goal just before the end of the first session.

They were leading 2 to 1 at the first and 3 to 2 at the second, while in the final dash they added two more counters, with no response from the Paddlers.

Parkdale were without Harry Watson, on the casualty list with a bad shoulder, and Don. Jeffrey, who is on his honeymoon, but the Canoeists played with a commendable determination, led by Mose Lount, who turned in a great card, and went down with their colors flying. There was more than one Toronto critic who declared that the Paddlers played better hockey with Watson off, inasmuch as the rest of the crew were thrown on their own resources, and thus challenged gave the best they had. And their best, especially defensively, was very good, for the Petes had to battle for every goal they got.

Flashes of Form.

It was not the best game by any means the S.P.A. winners have played in Toronto, although there were times, especially in the first ten minutes of the second period and for most of the last session, when the blue and white team were hitting on all eight cylinders.

With last night's game under their belt—incidentally, their eighth successive victory this season at the Arena—the Petes should be at the top of their form in the final game of the series tomorrow night. They developed some great combination at times last night, and in this department of the game had a wide margin over the Paddlers, whose offensive efforts were largely individual.

Dwyer, with his injured hand protected by a metal pad, performed in great style, despite the handicap, while McLeod and Parker handled the Parkdale attack so efficiently that the Paddlers found it almost impossible to break through. In fact, both of their goals were scored on rifle shots from outside the defence.

Up in front Bailey and Collins were perhaps the pick of the attacking division, with Ranger playing the best hockey he has shown for a month. Bailey scored two goals, his first being the best effort of the night, and he was always dangerous on the attack, while Collins was good going both ways and figured in some beautiful passing plays.

For Parkdale Mose Lount was unquestionably the star. He was strong defensively and his rushes supplied the chief Parkdale punch, being responsible for one of the Paddlers' goals, while he was a menace on every raid. Lou Harris supported him effectively, while on the line Scotty Cawkell was the most useful performer, with Harrington also showing clever hockey.

The Paddlers have not yet given up hope.

Not Routed Yet.

They declare that the Petes will not win the round without a desperate fight in the final game.

The blue shirts, however, start the second tilt with a three-goal lead and are confident that the margin will carry them through to the senior finals with the Big Six winners.

The Line-up.

Peterboro—Goal, Dwyer; defence, Parker and McLeod; centre, Collins; right wing, Bailey; left wing, Ranger; subs., Rose and Burgess.

Referee—M. J. Rodden.

Bailey Cuts Loose.

The checking was close in the opening moments of the game, and for some time neither teams could break away effectively. Both had shots from outside, but they were easy for Dwyer and Collett. There was little advantage for over half the period, until Irwin Bailey pulled off one of his characteristic rushes to start the scoring and give the crowd its first real chance to yell. Bailey grabbed the puck at his own end of the Arena, outfooted the Parkdale forwards in a dash down the right rail, and swung in past the defence at top speed. Harris tripped the flying Peterboro right wing, but Bailey heaved the puck past Collett as he fell for a beautiful goal, while Referee Mike Rodden gave Harris the gate.

The Petes did not have the numerical advantage very long, for on the next play Bert McLeod tripped Harrington and was sent to join Harris. Both players were back, however, when Mose Lount, the Parkdale defence player, put the teams on even footing by a nice play. He hooked the rubber away from Parker at centre, dodged a couple of checks, and went down alone, shooting from outside McLeod to beat Dwyer with a pretty shot.

The Petes came back fast and lost several promising openings before Parker put the blue shirts in the lead. He pokechecked the rubber away from the Parkdale forwards and let drive a fast shot between the Paddlers' defence pair. Collett blocked the first drive, but Parker tore in to bat the rebound past him for the last counter of the period.

Second Period.

There was a noticeable acceleration in the pace at the beginning of the second period. The Petes opened at top speed, and showing some snappy passing, kept the Paddlers' defence busy. Ranger hit Collett between the eyes with a swift shot from the side and the game was held up until the Parkdale goaler was patched up. After seven minutes of fast hockey, Collins and Bailey combined neatly for the Petes' third counter. Bailey went in on top of Collett after taking Collins' pass, and the Parkdale net guardian had little chance to save. However, he succeeded in making a great stop a moment later when Bailey worked inside again and looked to have a sure goal.

The pace, which had been lightning fast for ten minutes in this period, slackened a bit at this stage, but Cawkell enlivened the proceedings and gave the Paddler rooters a chance to exercise their lungs by going down alone and pumping in a fast high shot from outside the defence that got away from Dwyer. The score remained at 3-2 for the balance of the period.

Petes Increase Lead.

The Petes had the whiphand throughout the final dash. Right off the reel Parker nearly scored when he hit both posts on a rebound, with Collett at his mercy. Cawkell drew a penalty for charging McLeod, but the Petes failed to score while he was off. They tallied soon after he came back, however. Bailey tore off a nice rush, but shot wide. The rubber rebounded off the end of the rink and dropped outside the Parkdale net, and Ray Rose arrived in the nick of time to bat it past Collett.

Three minutes after a neat bit of combination by Collins and Ranger was converted into the last counter of the night. The rubber was exchanged several times, and when Collett dived to block an expected pass to Ranger at the goal mouth, Collins outguessed him by sliding the rubber behind the Parkdale goaler as he slid out of the citadel.

The same opportunity cropped up a minute or two later when Collins and Bailey broke in together. This time Collins reversed the play and tried to flip the rubber to Bailey close-in, but Collett guessed right and slid into the pass, making a fine save.

The Petes were masters of the situation for the balance of the game, but could not add to their lead, although they had several good chances.

Bailey drew a penalty for tripping, but Parkdale could not take advantage of the opening, and the final bill found the score unchanged.

WARKWORTH GIRLS BLANKED VISITORS

Defeated Campbellford by 3 to 0 Before Big Crowd.

WARKWORTH, Feb. 20.—One of the largest crowds that ever packed the skating arena saw the local girls defeat Campbellford's Ladies Hockey team on Tuesday night by three goals to none. It was Warkworths' night, and justly too, for they had most of the play and won on their merits.

The game was a good exhibition of fast, clean hockey and the combination and backchecking of both teams was a treat to watch. Warkworth ladies rushed well but found Campbellford's rear guard hard to get through and Harriett Potts in goal made many sensational stops. She is a star goaler. Evelyn Irwin could break away very fast and skate with more speed than her teammates, for this reason found herself alone on many occasions when nearing the Warkworth goal. The clever stickhandling of Jennie Boyce was one of the big features of the game. Mildred Copperthwaite scored two of the winners goals and Mabel Campbell one.

The teams were as follows:

Warkworth—Goal, Nellie Greenly; defence, Jennie Boyce and Mary Somers; centre, Mildred Copperthwaite; right wing, Mabel Campbell; left wing, Pearl Drewry; subs, Verna Thompson and Irene Hermiston.

Referee—D. S. Thompson.

HOCKEY SPECIAL SATURDAY AT 1.30 P.M.

Block of Toronto Arena Tickets on Sale at Wright's—A Great Chance for the Fans to Line Up With the Team.

A big crowd of Peterboro fans will go to Toronto tomorrow on the special C.P.R. train leaving at 1.30 o'clock, for the second game of the series with Parkdale in the Senior O.H.A. semi-finals. Although the Petes won by 5 to 2 last night, the Paddlers are counting on the services of Harry Watson to turn the tide in their favour in Saturday's clash. The Petes, however, came through last night's game without serious injuries, the only casualty being Bert McLeod, who got a rap on the chin from Lou Harris' stick that made his teeth ache for the rest of the game. He will be out there as usual tomorrow.

Tickets for the game may be obtained at Wright's until train time tomorrow, the Peterboro Club having secured a block of seats.

The special train will leave Toronto at midnight, giving the excursionists about eight hours in the Queen City.

KING EDWARD SCHOOL READY FOR FINAL GAME WITH QUEEN MARY'S

South End Youngsters Defeat King George 3-1 at Brock Street.

PROMISING BOYS

King Edward School team won the right to play the final game with Queen Mary when they defeated King George 3 to 1 yesterday afternoon at Brock Street Arena. The battle was a thriller from the minute the youngsters faced-off and it kept the two camps of loyal youthful supporters always in an uproar urging on their heroes.

For youngsters the pace was dizzy and play swept rapidly from one end to the other on combination play or lone rushes.

For King George, Donald Clarke and Pat Calladine formed a splendid defence pair. It was one of Calladine's bullet-like shots, after one of his rushes, that beat Bannon and Clarke was always with the play. Ronald Moray covered centre ice like a blanket, his back-checking being persisent and effective. The rest of the crew all played like titans too, but the youngster who stands out most in the game was the one who stood between the goal posts, Norman Calladine. This little fellow, who doesn't reach the top of the nets, turned aside the shots cooly with his big stick. At one stage Cripps went through the whole King George team and bore down on the lone pewee in the nets but little Calladine stepped out, went to his knees and stopped the shot.

Bill Cripps stood out for his team getting two of their goals, and its a safe bet that in a few years this boy will be wearing a blue and white sweater. Austin, at centre, played fine hockey and Bannon in the King Edward nets handled himself well.

The lineups:

King Edward—Goal, Bannon; defence, Bill Cripps, Loyd Pugh; centre, Bill Austin; left wing, Donald Moffatt; right wing, Gerald Soames; subs, Bill Sturs, Orm Seabrook.

ZACK WHEAT TO MANAGE SUPERBAS?

Notified to be Ready to Assume Brooklyn Reins if Robinson's Recovery is Delayed.

Zack Wheat has received orders to be prepared to step into managerial shoes and direct the Brooklyn Superbas.

Wheat's appointment is not official yet and even Zack himself is not smiling over the announcement, for if the veteran outfielder is to handle the reins then it means that Wilbert Robinson has not recovered sufficiently to return to his duties.

And Zack, while willing to do anything for Robby or his owner, Charles H. Ebbets, wants the rotund Wilbert back with the boys.

However, it is known that Robinson is regaining his health slowly. Perhaps he will be back on his feet in another month and with the Dodgers when they start training at Clearwater, Fla.

If the doctors advise a further rest then Zack Wheat, veteran outfielder, is to sit in as the team manager.

Wheat Popular With Players.

While Wheat's selection undoubtedly was made by Magnate Ebbets without consulting each and every member of the Brooklyn club, it meets with the approval of all of the players.

No one is more popular in his own set and around the National League circuit than Zack. He has been at the game for a long time, joining the Superbas in 1909 and has been with them ever since.

Wheat is not a "firebrand." He does not crack a whip, but players who have been in the league for many years point out Zack as one of the smartest in the circuit and entirely fitted for the managerial job of any team.

Was Understudy to Robinson.

Wheat was Robby's understudy several times last summer when the pilot was stricken. He had all of the boys hustling with him and Zack did a bit of it himself, as he was second to Rogers Hornsby in the swatting race with a mark of .375.

Wheat will be 37 years of age next May, proving that an athlete can carry on for a long time.

There isn't a single member of the National League of 1909 who remains in the organization today, barring Babe Adams.

Hans Wagner was the swat leader that year with a .339 average and names that were famous but have passed on are Si Seymour, Larry Doyle, Fred Snodgrass, Heine Zimmerman, Frank Chance, Sherry Magee, Frank Schulte, Jack Murray, Tommy Leach, Joe Tinker, Jimmy Sheckard, Roger Bresnahan, Fred Tenney, Charley Dooin, Mathewson, Sam Leever, Mordecai Brown, Vic Willis, Ed. Reullbach, Nap Rucker, Bugs Raymond and many others.

The White Sox settled with Happy Felsch for $1661 ....We forget the amount Abe Attell settled with him for.

CAMPBELLFORD BEAT TRENTON IN FAST GAME

Best Hockey Played in Covert's Arena This Season Marked Tussle.

SCORE WAS 4 TO 3.

Baker Was Fastest Man on the Ice and Starred Everywhere.

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 20.—Trenton and Campbellford High Schools met here last night in a second round Interscholastic Hockey League game, and the local students emerged on the big end of a 4 to 3 score in the best game on local ice this season.

The ice was in good condition and a crowd that packed every available inch of Covert's Arena was kept in a frenzy by the brilliant dashes up the ice of both teams, clever goalkeeping, and the closeness of the score, never more than one goal separating the teams at any stage. Trenton presented a well-balanced team, with plenty of speed and lots of hockey ability. They had a slight edge on the night's play, but found it difficult to get the rubber past Fox. The young goalie was right on, and he gave one of the best displays between the sticks at the Arena this winter. The three that beat him were from close in.

Cliff. Baker, at centre, was the fastest man on the ice. His brilliant rushes down the ice brought the crowd to their feet in an uproar. He was handed a stormy passage by the husky Trenton defence, but they failed to slow him up. He showed a lot of speed at times, and was good defensively. He was going better near the end of the game than at the start.

Ward Baker failed to show his usual speed, perhaps due to an injury to his foot at the start of the game.

The team as a whole has played better hockey than they showed last night, and while to the victors belong the spoils, they were perhaps lucky to qualify for the next round, on their game last night.

The Trenton boys showed good sportsmanship, and were the first to congratulate Coach Stephen's boys on their victory.

First Period.

Trenton pressed from the face off. Bohan and C. Purdy carrying the puck down, but Fox turned Purdy's shot aside, and Ward Baker carried it to Trenton's end. The play was very fast, with the puck going from end to end. Both guardians were playing good games, with Fox having the most to do. Ward Baker relieved a Trenton rush, and flashed down the side to plant one in the corner of the net from 15 feet out. The period was 10 minutes old, with three minutes to go. Bowen raced down the other side and right in on top of Fox to even the count.

Second Period.

The local boys played their best hockey when the score was even, and they carried the play to Trenton at the start of the second. Cliff Baker carried the puck the length of the rink and passed to Ibey at the goal mouth, in one minute. They battled away, with honours about even, for the most of the period. With two minutes to go Filion grabbed the puck at centre and wiggled his way in on top of Fox to even the count again.

Third Period.

It looked as if the team to score first would win the game, and the boys set a dizzy pace. When the period was five minutes gone, Reynolds checked Filion at the 20 feet line and slammed the rubber at Heaney. The Trenton goalie stopped the shot, but it rolled over his foot into the net.

But Trenton were not beaten yet, and two minutes later Johnston grabbed the rebound of Bohan's shot and slipped it into the net before Fox got set for it.

Bowen, Filion, and Bohan followed each other to the penalty bench in quick succession, but Purdy and Johnston shot the puck down the ice, and the local kids failed to tally in the half-minute they were off.

When Bowen came back they flashed down the ice and around the three Trenton boys in on top of Heaney with just 4 minutes to go.

Trenton sent every man up on the attack, but failed to find on opening in Fox's defence, and Principal Greig's boys were winners on the round, 9 goals to 8.

Referee Charles Holmes handled the game in fine style, handing out five penalties to Trenton and two to Campbellford.

STUDYING FOODS

Studying how and why foods affect the body as they do, Mr. Mann of Anytown found his second lesson to be concerned with the composition of foods.

Time has shown that certain materials are most useful as food. The subdivisions include proteins of different varieties, fats and carbohydrates or starches and sugars. To these we add water and the mineral salts and have the basis of all foods. But lately science has added vitamins to the list.

Vitamins are bodies of unknown nature existing in certain foods and essential to nutrition. Their chemical nature is unknown so they have become designated as vitamin A, B, C, etc.

The first two are the "water and fat solubles" so essential to body nutrition, while vitamin C is found in orange and lemon juices and when they are lacking in diet, scurvy has been found to result.

It will soon be necesary for Nurmi to lose a race in order to attract any attention in this country.

AMER. WOOLLENS HAVE BIG DEFICIT

Canadian Industry is Not the Only One to Suffer in Depression.

Experiencing the worst year since its incorporation in 1899 the American Woolen Company, in its annual report just made public, shows loss after taxes and charges for 1924 of $4,025,865, and a deficit after dividends amounting to $11,969,837. This compared with a profit in 1923 of $9,326,623 and a surplus available for dividends of $6,660,212, or the equivalent of $8.84 a share earned on $140,000,000 common stock after deducting preferred dividends.

The deficit before dividends last year was $6,944,420.

Commenting on the adverse conditions prevailing in the woollen industry during 1924, Andrew G. Pierce, president, told stockholders that veteran mill men characterised the depression as the worst since the Civil War.

"Manufacturing raw materials and labour costs," said Mr. Pierce, "were far higher than in 1923, while sales were disappointing. Aggressive plans were made to overcome apathy of buyers by offering goods at low prices, but response in both heavy weight and light weight seasons was unsatisfactory, especially in men's wear lines, which constitute the production of the largest mills."

The company on 31st December reported a profit and loss surplus of $22,127,356, compared with $33,596,725 at the close of 1923.

The balance sheet as of 31st December showed cash on hand of $5,904,893, acounts receivable of $30,243,204, and inventory of $49,975,795. On the liabilities side were notes payable of $11,195,000 and accounts payable of $7,176,389.

The report also showed among the liabilities $4,063,176 "reserve for taxes and contingencies," representing the balance of a special reserve of $5,500,000 set up as of 31st December, 1923, out of profits for 1923, the sum of $1,436,824 having been applied against that reserve during 1924.

Mr. Pierce said the company has been fortunate in being able to supply itself with raw materials at attractive figures and has as usual provided for necessary replacements and additions to machinery.

NEW STREET LIGHTING.

Particulars Given by Manager H. O. Fiske—Seven Times More Light.

The sample of new street lighting being tried out consists of 53 lamps of 400 candle power each, spaced 200 feet apart, situated on Dennistoun avenue, Water street from Smith street to the Isolation Hospital, and George street from Smith to Hilliard street.

The lamps are mounted on four feet spear head brackets, with 18 inch radial wave reflectors, and are displacing lambs of 48 candle power each, or in other words, this area will be illuminated by 21,200 candle power or between seven and eight times as much lighting as formerly in use.

These lamps are mounted from 20 feet to 23 feet, according to tree conditions. They will be taken care of by control switches, and are only operated from dark until dawn, instead of twenty-four hours per day, as with the present system.

HAPPY BRIDGE PARTY.

Seventeen Tables Played at I.O.D.E. Event.

The Otonabee Chapter I.O.D.E. held a very pleasant bridge party last evening at the home of Mrs. J. A. Aylmer, Weller Street. A large number of ladies were present, seventeen tables of cards being played. The guests were received by Mrs. Aylmer and the Regent of the Chapter, Mrs. F. L. Robinson. Mrs. G. L. Stevens acted as general convenor, with Mrs. T. C. Elliott, assisted by Mrs. C. White, and different members in charge of the tables were Mesdames A. Weddell, J. A. Robinson, R. Hunter and C. S. Cummer. Little Jean Robinson officiated at the door. Miss M. English looked after the decorations, each table being effectively centred with black tulips on a red heart base, and Mrs. R. R. Hall and Miss L. Hamilton had charge of the score cards, in a color scheme of red, white and gold. At the conclusion of the cards, prizes for which were won by Mrs. Walter Belleghem, Miss S. Burnett and Mrs. G. Helson, a delicious lunch was served.

W. M. SOCIETY REPORT.

The report of St. Paul's W. M. S. was read at their annual meeting in December and published in the local press. At the church's annual meeting on Wednesday it was not considered necessary to read the report again, and it was consequently taken as read. The society's treasurer, Mrs. G. S. McKee, gave the financial statement.

CHIEF NEWHALL PRESENTS REPORT TO THE CITY POLICE COMMISSION

Estimates For 1925 Fixed at $25,172 —Crime Statistics for 1924.

LAUDS MRS. SMITH.

In the absence of His Honour Judge Huycke, chairman of the Police Commission, Mayor J. J. Turner and Magistrate O. A. Langley yesterday waded through the estimates for the year, and succeeded in lopping off $470.00, leaving a total of $25,172.50.

Last year the estimates called for $27,873; the City Council reduced this to $25,000 even, and the Commission spent $25,009.63, thus keeping better within its appropriation or allowance than many other departments of the City Council which contributed their share toward the big overdraft.

Provision has been made in the estimates for a salary for another constable, who will bring the total on the force to the unlucky number 13. If Police Matron Mrs. Smith can be considered a member, however, she retrieves the new year's force from the menace invoked by the number.

And Chief Newhall considers Mrs. Smith a very vital part of his staff, paying unstinted tribute to her efficiency in his annual report. Mrs. Smith, working with her husband, Adjutant Smith, of the Salvation Army, has been tireless in her efforts to help those unfortunate enough to come within the clutches of the law.

The Chief says of Adjutant and Mrs. Smith, "without their excellent services there would be a vast number of unsuccessful cases finding their way into Police Court."

Annua Report.

Although he mentions regretfully the necessity for cutting off the auto and motor cycle patrol of other years through shortage of staff, Chief Samuel Newhall's annual report shows on the whole a satisfactory condition in the enforcement of law in the city. He again points out that there are 55 miles of streets and alleys in the city, and only a force of six men by day and six men by night available to patrol the entire city. This total includes all ranks, and from it must be taken men to man the police station and operate the police car.

The following extracts give the salient points in the report, which will be published in full at a later date:

There were 314 cases disposed of during 1924, the greatest number, 70, being for breach of the Ontario Temperance Act; next were breaches of the Dog Bylaw, 36; vagrancy, 24; breach of the Amusement Tax Act, 21; and breach of the Highway Traffic Act, 20. Of these 314 offenders, 270 owned Canadian nationality, and Ireland was vindicated by having only 4 sons in police court, while England had 18 and Scotland had 10.

By religion, there were 94 Roman Catholics, 80 Presbyterians; 79 Methodists; 45 Anglicans; 7 Salvation Army, 4 Baptists, 2 Orthodox, 1 Hebrew, and 2 without any religion, they profesed.

Most of the offenders were between 21 and 30 years of age, with 41 to 50 years next.

Marriage Helps.

Even if only by a small margin, marriage evidently has a beneficent effect on members of both sexes, at any rate insofar as restraining them from crime is concerned. There were 148 married male offenders against 151 unmarried, and 5 married female offenders as compared with 10 spinster ladies.

Excellent State.

One heartening part of the report was that dealing with the record of articles lost and found and stolen and recovered. Although the value of property stolen was $18,560.91, a big increase over 1923, with $7,242, there was $16,824.84 worth of this property returned on recovery, leaving only $1,736.07 missing. Of $4,006.35 worth of property reported lost, the police force was instrumental in having $3,485.95 returned.

CANNOT CONTINUE WATER DIVERSION

Delegation From Chicago Received But Slight Comfort at Washington.

WASHINGTON, February 20. — A delegation from the Chicago Sanitary District received but slight comfort from Secretary of War Weeks and a number of engineers of the Army Department, when they urged this morning that Chicago be allowed to continue the diversion of water from Lake Michigan despite the recent Supreme Court decision, which forbade taking ten thousand feet per second from the lake.

At the opening Mr. Weeks stated that engineering experts had made a thorough investigation of the question, and had declared that the present diversion was injurious to navigation, and said he did not desire to hear any argument attempting to justify a permanent diversion of the ten thousand feet figure. He said he would not grant permission to exceed the diversion heretofore authorized except as a temporary measure.

The criminal news of the day indicates the younger generation has little trouble making its mark—usually with a pearl-handled revolver, too.

Dogs of all kinds, sizs, colours, and dispositions are competing for prizes at the annual national dog show of the Westminster K. C., now being held at Madison Square Garden, New York. At the left is "Hercuveen Chum," one of the biggest St. Bernards at the show, who kindly consented to furnish transportation for "La Rex Doll Pon Pon" and "La Rex Doll Snowflake," two of the tiniest Chihuahuas at the show. And on the right is "Sergeant Jigg," pride of the U.S. Marines, and a real "Devil Dog" himself.

TOM MIX IN NEW ZANE GREY FILM

Sons may inherit the sins of their fathers, but they also come into paternal virtues. Zane Grey cited an instance in his book "The Last of the Duanes," and Tom Mix emphasizes the fact in the picture which opens at the Capitol today.

Buck Duane appears to be a rather timid young man when the picture opens. eems as though everybody else has notches on his gun and callouses on his knuckles. But Buck doesn't fight. Even at a dance, he permits a range bully to get away with everything, including the girl.

But Buck has promised his mother he won't fight. She lost her husband that way after he had cut a dozen notches in the handle of his Colt. She doesn't want her son to grow the same way. But right there you know that with Tom Mix cast as Buck Duane, something has to happen.

It does. Buck has inherited his father's lightning hand and sure eye. When the smoke clears away Buck rides into the outlaw country until the trouble blows over. There he meets again the little girl who had driven through the Duane ranch some months earlier Jenny, the girl, now is a captive on the ranch of a bandit leader Buck rescues her and finds himself in love.

It would not do to spoil the surprise at the end of the picture by relating it here. But, like a rainbow after a storm, this film sends a brilliant ray across the entertainment horizon. Marian Nixon as the leading lady for Tom Mix is a bit of sunshine by herself.

AT THE GRAND

A SPLENDID BILL.

The vaudeville and special feature picture bill at the Grand for the last three days of this week is a double attraction of unusual merit, and the whole programme was greatly enjoyed by last night's audience.

The splendid impression made by the vaudeville numbers the first half of the week is enhanced by the three acts which started last night. The honors of the bill are carried off by Lynn and Wosley, whose comedy work is responsible for gales of laughter, while the woman member of the team displays a fine voice to fullest advantage. It is one of the best acts of its kind seen here in some time. Patsy Delvano, in a musical number, plays the accordion with rare skill and effect, and the Three Rianos contribute a whirlwind tumbling and acrobatic act that contains some novel features.

The feature picture is "The Midnight Express," a screen version of a railway story that carries a punch with every foot of film. It is frankly melodrama, but the story is developed with skill and realism, and the result is a picture that holds the interest of the audience until the final fade-out. Action is the keynote of the film, and there is not a dull moment anywhere. There are times during the picture when the spectator fools like shrieking aloud, so exciting are some of the episodes. Elaine Hammerstein is the lovely heroine of the story, and does some of her best screen work in "The Midnight Express."

The double bill should attract capacity audiences to the Grand to-

AT THE ROYAL

"THE SAWDUST TRAIL IS "HOOT" AT HIS BEST."

On our way out of the Royal last night we overheard many remarks, such as "I like that Hoot Gibson," "Hoot is some body." "I like him because he doesn't seem to act, he's so natural," etc. Well(to tell the truth, that's just why we like him ourselves. He's so darn natural. In other fords he has that personality that is winning him friends with every new picture.

Essentially there is in all of them the fundamental setting in which the youthful star has risen to screen fame—the West. Gibson made his bow to filmdom as a cowboy and as a cowboy he has ridden far into the portals of motion picture popularity. There is always something pleasing about a Gibson picture. If the story doesn't please some people, Hoot's horsemanship will. To see that chap ride a bucking horse is worth going through the rain for.

But Universal has proved, as this Royal theatre's film proves that it is unnecessary to present Gibson in straight westerns to put him over. It has featured him in pictures which have very little of the western atmosphere, and the Gibson pictures seem to appeal more than ever. The

FIRST SHOWING IN CANADA OF "A CAFE IN CAIRO"

At Shea's Hippodrome, Toronto, and the Royal Peterboro, on Monday Next.

Next Monday another big production makes its bow to Canadian audiences. Priscilla Dean's latest "A Cafe in Cairo," comes to the Hippodrome, Toronto, and also to the Royal, Peterborough. Both engagements commence on the same day, Monday next.

The mystic land of the Nile, where once the incomparable Cleopatra wove her magic spell, is visualized with all its lure and mystery, and a pulsing drama of adventure and love is unfolded with rare artistry in "A Cafe in Cairo," Priscilla Dean's latest picture.

The elusive melodies of native instruments mingle with the silken swish of the diaphanous garments of the sinous dancing girls in the House of Stars.....A young American on a secret diplomaic mission.....The entrancing beauty of Naida, the fascinating Houri.....moonlight and the lure of the desert.

This is the setting for this intriguing and fascinating story.

From all advance notices this is Priscilla's most elaborate production.

AT THE REGENT

FRED THOMSON'S BULL DEMOLISHES COSTLY SET.

A china shop may be the ideal setting for a wild bull, as the old simile suggests; but a wild bull can get a lot of action out of any setting, believes Fred Thomson, F.B.O.'s western star! If any further corroboration is needed for this statement, ask officials of the United lot, or any of the artisans who were working there when "Jocko" made his appearance!

"Jocko" is Mr. Thomson's underslung two-ton bull; and he is about as vicious an animal as any Goliath would care to meet. He is kept in a heavily re-inforced pen at the United such time as his master isn't using him. But one day, just when the studio employees had a lavish set representing a Spanish courtyard under the rays of the California sun, some ill-advised person opened the gate to "Jocko's" pen.

The ill-advised person went right away from there; and so did the stucco "Masonry" and uprights of the Spanish courtyard, which was the first thing that greeted "Jocko's" blood-shot gaze as he made his charge for liberty.

Artists, artisans and others who were about went right away too; while "Jocko" charged and recharged, smearing the Spanish courtyard into a very fair imitation of Yokohama after the Japanese carthquake. From fence tops and adjoining sets everybody screamed directions, but nobody could do anything. Studio executives, hastily summoned, rushed about issuing orders which nobody could carry out! Meanwhile "Jocko," covered with stucco, cement and splintered beams bellowed his challenges to a petrified gallery.

Before he put the studio completely on the bum, it was decided to shoot "Jocko." But there was no expert marksmen present, and a lot of questions about anybody's ability to kill the big bull with the first bullet. What he might do if hit and not brought down was a menacing possibility in the minds of all.

Meanwhile a hurry call had been put in for Fred Thomson at the F.B.O. lot next door. Fortunately, the actor was talking over a scenario for his next production, and although in street clothes he immediately rushed over to the United Studios. His entrance was as welcome as it ever was in a picture drama; for he is the only man in the world who can handle the bull. And he got "Jocko" back into his pen after a desperate struggle, to the infinite relief of the "treed" and harrowed employees of the United lot.

This "gentle" bull is one of Fred Thomson's opponents in "Thundering Hoofs," the picture now showing at the Regent Theatre.

MOST NEW PHONES IN HOMES
The annual report of the Bell Telephone Company points out that for a net gain of 50,607 telephones for the year 1924, it was necessary to instal no less than 128,872 instruments, of which 78,265 were subsequently taken out or transferred. This is no doubt a fair index of what might be termed the business and residence turnover during the year. Of the net gain in telephones, 77 per cent. consisted of services installed in homes.

OVER 40,000 EVERY DAY.
The Bell Telephone Company's annual report seeks to explain the steady increase in the use of the long distance telephone by pointing to the great volume of sales effort that the modern merchant is expending over the telephone. The explanation is probably the correct one. Some wonderful examples have been cited of what can be accomplished by telephone when careful plans are laid beforehand. The daily average of long distance messages is now considerably over 40,000.

SHELL TO PROTECT BUILDERS IN COLD

New Hotel at Lake Louise Being Constructed in Winter.

A unique method of construction is announced in connection with the building of the new Chateau Lake Louise in Alberta, on the site of the hotel partly destroyed by fire last Spring. The building work this Winter is necessary if the hotel is to be completed in time for next Summer's business.

In order to give protection to the 350 men employed on the work, the new hotel will be built entirely within a wooden, airtight shell to keep out the heavy snow and severe cold. The shell will be extended upward as each floor of the chauteau is added.

More than 21,000 tons of material will be used in the building, all of which must be hauled from the Lake Louise railway station, three and a half miles distant, over a narrow gauge tram line having a 4 per per cent grade.

A feature of the building will be walls of practically solid plate glass from the ground floor up to the dining room, giving a wonderful view of Lake Louise.

IN MEMORIAM.
In loving memory of our dear brother, John Cross, who died February 20, 1924:
Forget him! No, we never will,
We loved him then, we love him still,
His memory is as fresh to-day
As in the hour he passed away.

Oft and oft our thoughts do wander,
To that grave not far away,
Where we laid our dearly loved one,
Just one year ago to-day.

BRITAIN DEFERS GIVING VOTE TO YOUNGER WOMEN

They Must Still Wait Until 30 Before They Are Enfranchised.

BALDWIN'S PROMISE.

Premier Says He Will Later Keep His Pledge of Equality.

LONDON, Feb. 21. — (Canadian Press).—Women in the British Isles will still have to wait until they are thirty years of age before they will be granted the privilege given to their husbands and brothers at the age of twenty-one. The House of Commons refused yesterday to give the bill, which would have established political equality with regard to sex, its second reading. The vote was 220 against 153. Sir William Joynson-Hicks moved an amendment to postpone franchise reform action until later in the life of the present Parliament and that motion was passed.

The Government's attitude, as revealed in the debate on the measure, aroused considerable suspicion among the Opposition members, Ramsay MacDonald frankly declaring his belief that the Government intended to evade the franchise if possible. The Government's election pledge was to grant men and women the franchise on equal terms, and Premier Baldwin in closing yesterday's debate, repeated that was his intention. But neither the Premier nor the Home Secretary, who bore the brunt of the discussion from the Government side, allowed it to be known at what age the franchise would be equalized and the impression persists that the Government desire is to raise the age qualification from 21 years to 25 for men and to lower that of the women from 30 to 25.

Women in Majority.

The Home Secretary pointed out that there are to-day more than 11,000,000 men voters and 8,000,000 women voters on the register. He said if the proposed bill were passed, the women voters would exceed the men by more than two million.

"That's all right," interjected Lady Astor.

What the Home Secretary proposed was to hold a conference in 1926, of all parties, to revise the whole question of franchise reform and to introduce the new Government bill in 1927.

Lady Astor, in another speech, announced her intention to vote for the present bill, and she complained that although her attitude had not implied any want of confidence in Premier Baldwin, she felt the stand taken by the Government was very embarrassing because it looked as though the Government was reluctant to do anything.

Mr. MacDonald characterized the idea of raising the voting age of men to 25 years as an "unholy transaction," and warned the Government that his party would refuse to consent to the proposed conference.

The Conservative, F. A. McQuisten, suggested that the voting age should be 'twenty-five or marriage,' adding that twelve months of marriage would make any young man feel like twenty-five.

Woman Twits Members.

Miss Ellen Wilkinson, the woman Labor member for Middlesbrough East, seconded it. She said that some people argued that if the vote was given to the younger women they would invariably vote for the best-looking candidate. This caused some laughter in the House.

"Looking round this House," Miss Wilkinson said, "I cannot see that there is any need for members to be worried, but I take it we shall see a division in the lobby of those members who are not quite sure of themselves in this respect." More laughter followed.

Arthur Henderson (Labor, Burnley) supported the bill on the clear understanding of all parties that it would not come into operation until the next general election. The Speaker, he said, should preside at a conference to consider the effect of the measure on such questions as redistribution, cost of elections, and corrupt practices.

COUNCIL TO SUE FOR PARK MONEY

Committee to Press for Collection of $750 For Stevenson Park Rental.

ESTIMATES $4,670.

At the Parks committee meeting last night the estimates for 1925, including $2,720 for parks, $1,050 for rinks and toboggan slide and $900 for the bathing beaches for a total of $4,670 were passed.

The city engineer presented reports from the caretakers of the difefrent public parks. The reports showed that the south end and Riverside rinks were the best attended. At the south end in one week there were 1,351 attendants and at Riverside Park there were 1,093.

A letter was received from the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board stating that there was nothing to prevent the council renting Riverside Park on a percentage basis. The Mayor moved that the Council be asked to advertise for tenders for the rental of the park from April 15 to November 15. A letter from the Peterborough Baseball and Athletic Association asking for the rental of the park on a ten per cent basis was received.

A letter was received from the Canadian Pacific Railway Company stating that they could not build a new station here this year.

The licensing of the refreshment tent in Inverlea Park and others cause some discussion. Many of the aldermen felt that they took a lot of business from the regular tradesmen besides keeping open till late at night and on Sundays.

It was decided that the city solicitor should press for the payment of the remainder of the rental of James Stevenson Park for 1924, amounting to $750, and that he should enter suit if necesasry.

The Nichols Park Trust will be asked to permit the city to clean out the drain in the Bathing house at Inverlea Park and the chairman reported arangements were being made to have the Hydraulic Power Company build a new retaining wall at the bank.

MR. BURNHAM IS STANDING PAT ON O. T. A. CHARGES

Re-affirms Statement Why Native Wines Not Included in Restrictions.

REPLIES TO DENIALS.

And Says, "These Prohibitionists Are a Lot of Artful Dodgers."

TORONTO, February 21 (Canadian Press). — "Not the slightest trace of truth in it."—Sir William Hearst.

"Absolutely false."—Rev. Dr. T. A. Moore.

"Perfectly absurd."—Rev. Dr. S. D. Crown.

These denials were given this morning to statements attributed to J. H. Burnham, ex-M.P., in a Peterborough despatch to The Globe, that prior to the framing of the O.T.A. the then Premier Hearst had called Dr. Moore and Dr. Chown in conference, and that after the O.T.A. had been framed "beer proof and wine proof" in the restrictions, the framers of the Act had insisted on native wine not being included in the restrictions because it would mean the loss of the grape growers' vote.

The statement by Mr. Burnham was first published in The Examiner of Thursday, under "Voice of the People."

REAFFIRMS STATEMENT.

Interviewed in Peterborough this morning immediately on receipt of the above denials, Mr. Burnham reaffirmed his statements touching Sir William Hearst, Rev. T. A. Moore, and Rev. Dr. S. D. Chown. "I am told,' Mr. Burnham said, "that they deny my statement that they had anything to do with leaving intoxicating wines in the O.T.A. My reply is that those wines are there now. I have tried for years by correspondence with Dr. Moore to get them excluded from the Act, but could not do it. To say that it is a lie is to say that they have had nothing to do with the intoxicating wines in the Act now is to say that they have had nothing to do with the Act and what comes under it, which is a transparent falsehood."

"What I said is true," Mr. Burnham declared, "and these Prohibitionists are just a lot of artful dodgers keeping the country in a ferment for their own ends."

ANOTHER VERSION.

After studying the report in the Globe, Mr. Burnham told the Examiner this afternoon:

"The letter I wrote to the Examiner regarding the permission by the O.T.A. of the conception of highly intoxicating wines got mixed in the Toronto papers by a political reference which I did not make. What I stated was that the leading temperance workers knew that the O.T.A. permitted highly intoxicating drinks and that this was done for the purpose of attaching the votes of the grape growers and wine makers. The proof of my statement is that the provision is still there, that the prohibitionist leaders make no attempt to have it removed, and that votes were won for the O.T.A. accordingly."

HOW IT STARTED.

This is the statement printed in the Examiner of Thursday on which the controversy started:

"It is just as well that the inside history of the O. T. A. should be known. A famous licensed victualler lawyer, whom I know well, was sent for by Sir William Hearst and his O.T.A. friends, such as Rev. Albert Moore, Rev. Dr. Chown, D. D., and what not, to draw up a liquor-tight act He did so. It excluded all alcoholic liquor over 2½ per cent.

"The lawyer, knowing the 'wet' side to perfection, knew how it could be made 'dry,' and being a lawyer, was open for engagement.

"But Hearst, Chown, Moore & Co. were aghast when they saw what the lawyer had done. 'You have shut out the grape growers, and their native wines. We will lose their votes.' 'What do you want then?' said the lawyer. 'Exclude native wines,' they said. 'But native wines are highly intoxicating,' said he. 'We don't care how intoxicating they are; we must have the votes,' said the temperance workers.

"So the lawyer excluded native wines and the prohibitionists got the native wine votes. Yet these are the people who are kicking about five per cent. beer and talking about honour."

This was signed by Mr. Burnham.

SEVEN CHILDREN SAVED FROM FIRE BY LITTLE GIRL

Twelve-Year-Old Margaret Davis Heroine of Threatened Tragedy.

BRAVED FLAMES.

Returned a Second Time to Fire Swept Building on Rescue Mission.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Feb. 21.—(Canadian Press). — Twelve-year-old Margaret Davis was the heroine of what might have been a fire tragedy here last night, when by her own efforts she rescued seven children from almost certain death in a blaze that swept a three-storey house on Main Street.

There were ten children in the house when the blaze started. Four belonged to Mrs. James Mott and the others brothers and sisters of Margaret Davis.

The only exit was at the front of the building, and immediately on the outbreak of fire Margaret seized two of the Mott children, their mother taking two more and carried them from danger. Despite the flames and smoke, Margaret returned to her burning home and bore other little ones to safety, the youngest of whom was 18 months old.

CHAMBERLAIN TO CALL ON HERRIOT

Will Discuss With French Premier Matters of Inter-Allied Interest.

WASHINGTON PARLEY.

LONDON, Feb. 21 (United Press).—The first informal discussion between France and England of the projected disarmament conference at Washington may be expected within two weeks, government officials believe.

It is understood that Foreign Secretary Chamberlain will call upon Premier Herriot in Paris on his way to the League of Nations Council meeting at Geneva, March 8th.

At this conference, which may be delayed until Chamberlain's return from Geneva, the report of the inter-Allied Commission regarding German disarmament will also be discussed.

KINGSVILLE, Ont., Feb. 21 (Canadian Press).—Conservatives of South Essex at one of the largest conventions ever held in Western Ontario yesterday afternoon nominated Eccles J. Gott, of Amherstburg, as their standard bearer to contest this constituency against Hon. Geo. P. Graham at the approaching Federal election.

LEAGUE'S RIGHT OF ENQUIRY INTO AUSTRO-GERMAN ARMAMENTS TO BE DEBATED AT MARCH SESSION

Plan For Settling International Disputes by Peaceful Method is Major Problem.

TEN DANZIC ITEMS.

France to Oppose Any Special Inducements to Induce Germany to Enter.

GENEVA, Feb. 21.—An exchange of views on the Geneva protocol from the pacific settlement of international disputes will take place at the next session of the council of the League of Nations on March 9.

A communication concerning the approaching session was issued yesterday. It announces the number of items on the agenda as twenty-two. The communication accords first importance, after the Geneva peace protocol, to discussion of the council's rights of investigation into the armaments of Germany, Austria, Bulgaria and Hungary; the private manufacture of arms and the dispute between Greece and Turkey. The council will complete its plan of organization, drawn up last summer, with a view to exercising its right for the investigation of armaments of former enemy countries. Practical application of this plan to the Rhineland zone will also be studied.

The reports circulated in Geneva that Turkey as a non-member of the League of Nations may refuse an invitation to appear before the council to present her side of the Greco-Turk conflict have not been confirmed and last night's communication makes no mention of Turkey's attitude.

Consent to Enquiry.

The minority questions, including the position of the Turkish minority in Western Thrace and the Greek minority in Constantinople, are on the agenda and the communication says both Greece and Turkey have consented to an inquiry on these matters by the council. It is thought that while Turkey resents an investigation of the question of the expulsion of Patriarch Constantinos on the ground that this is purely a domestic affair, she may decide to accept discussion of the patriarch question under the heading of minorities.

The general relations between Poland and the Free State of Danzig may produce special difficulties at the council's session. Ten items on the agenda concern Danzig alone. These items include the question of the postal service which recently caused trouble between Poland and the free city of Danzig.

Admissioin of Germany

Although the question of Germany joining the League of Nations does not appear on the agenda, officials said last night that there was considerable likelihood the council will take some action on the last German note, and that the council may decide to send a formal answer to Berlin.

The French spokesman who recently was in Geneva in connection with disarmament matters indicated that France would oppose any plan to accord Germany special privileges as an inducement to her to join the league. He said Germany should be content with a place as a permanent member of the council and expessed the opinion that Germany sitting at the round table for conciliation and peace offered the best way of ironing out all difficulties

King Is Making But Slow Progress Toward Recovery

DEFIED POLICE FOR OVER THREE HOURS

Ran Amuck With Revolver, Firing Into Homes at Relatives.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., Feb. 21. —(Canadian Press). — John Smith was shot and probably fatally wounded early this morning after defying the police for more than three hours, and keeping them at bay from a barricaded house in 27th Street.

Smith ran amuck with a revolver last night, firing more than a score of shots into two houses occupied by relatives, and then took refuge in a nearby house. The police were afraid to fire on the house owing to the risk of killing innocent occupants. Smith fired more than a hundred shots from a cellar window in the direction of the police on guard outside. After firing had continued some time, the family made a dash from the house and escaped safely.

The police then opened fire. Smith ran to an upstairs window and climbed on to the roof of a shed, and from this he was tumbled to the ground by three police bullets. He is now in hospital in a grave condition.

WOMANS DEATH SELF-INFLICTED

Mental Depression Actuated Suicide, Coroner Decided.

That the death yesterday of Mrs. John H. Cameron, 72, of 494 Aylmer Street, was so clearly a case of suicide that no inquest is necessary, was the statement made by Coroner Dr. T. W. H. Young last night when interrogated by The Examiner.

Mrs. Cameron took her own life by slashing her throat with a large knife.

Mr. Cameron, husband of the deceased, was sifting ashes in the backyard, and on his entering the house heard his wife moaning. He found her in the bathroom, bleeding to death, and had her rushed to the hospital, where she died shortly afterwards.

No reason, beyond an unwarranted depression, is assigned for the deed.

Mrs. Cameron (nee Emma Roberts) was born in Pickering, and was married a few months ago. She was formerly a nurse.

Two sisters, Mrs. Sample and Mrs. Ashby, survive, both residing in Vancouver, and a brother lives in one of the Western Provinces.

The funeral is this afternoon, interment being made in Little Lake Cemetery.

FAMILY ESCAPED.

Falling Picture Warned Them of Burning House.

WINNIPEG, Man., Feb. 21. — (Canadian Press).—Two persons were injured in a fire which early on Friday morning destroyed the home of Fred Bodnar, a suburban resident. A falling picture awakened and probably saved the lives of the family, who made their exit through a bedroom window which Bodnar broke with his fists, lacerating his hand. His six-year-old daughter, Marjorie was lifted through the window by her father, and received a severe wound from a jagged piece of glass. She is in hospital, but will recover.

Labor Leaders Deprecate Kirkwood's Criticism Of Prince's Argentine Trip

LONDON, Feb. 21.—Ramsay MacDonald, former Premier, and John Robert Clynes, who was Lord Privy Seal in the Labor Government of Mr. MacDonald, speaking at different places last night, both deprecated the recent attack in the House of Commons by David Kirkwood and other Laborites on the forthcoming tour of the Prince of Wales.

Mr. MacDonald and Mr. Clynes, the former speaking at Swindon and the latter at Hornchurch, resented especially the suggestion that the Prince should defray the cost of his tour from his own pocket... They emphasized that the tour was a public duty on the part of the Prince.

"We can't cure the case of the poor widow and her children by being small minded and petty," declared the former premier... "The magpie nature which sees in the glitter of a button the whole of its world is not befitting to the Labor party."

MURDERS MARK SOFIA UNREST

Chief City of Bulgaria Is a Seething Pot of Plot and Counter Plot.

188 ARE KILLED.

ROME, Feb. 21. — (Canadian Press). — Belgrade reports serious unrest in Bulgaria, where fights are going on between the Government and Communists, who are supposed to have had recent help in money and arms from Moscow. Sentries at the Royal Palace at Sofia have been bombed. Last month 36 political murders were committed besides 152 ordinary murders and 162 attempted murders. Two hundred and seventy-two were wounded in political fights. The situation is further complicated by the preparation of a military plot against the Government, which is very unpopular throughout the country. The Premier suspects the young King of trying to form a military government with the help of Generals Zankov and Lasarev.

Bombs at Ball.

The court ball was dramatically interrupted by the discovery of several bombs behind the curtains in the ball-room. These were supposed to be intended for the King by the Cabinet, which was present in full. Arrests made on the spot were kept secret, but it is said that 80 military officers were among them. Zankov and Lazarev managed to escape. Apparently two plots exist. One is a Communist plot to establish a Soviet and banish or else kill King Boris; the other, the King's plot to form a strong military government, of which the present Cabinet disapproves as much as it does the Soviet idea. Hence, both were supposed authors of the bomb preparations in the Royal Palace as well as the King's own officers arrested by the Cabinet. It is thought most unlikely that King Boris can weather a storm, owing to his lack of character and his readiness to listen to unscrupulous plotters, some of whom are agents provocateurs of the Soviet Government.

TWO KILLED BY TRAIN.

BROOKLYN, N.Y., February 21. —Anna Frawley, 5, and her brother Edward, 2, were instantly killed, and their mother, Mrs. Rose Frawley, 31, was perhaps fatally injured, by a motor van which ran them down while they were crossing a street.

FIFTY MEN ARE BELIEVED DEAD IN MINE BLAST

Over 120 Miners in Underground Workings When Explosion Occurred.

FUMES ARE DENSE.

Dead Bodies Recovered Were Burned Beyond Recognition—Many Rescuers.

SULLIVAN, Ind., Feb. 21.—(Canadian Press.)—In an explosion of gas that wrought the greatest mine disaster in the history of the Indiana coal fields, 51 men are believed to have been killed almost instantly at 10.15 o'clock yesterday morning in the City Coal Company mine, on the outskirts of this city. There were 121 miners in the mine at the time of the explosion, which occurred in the third and fourth entries north, where most of the men were at work who were killed. C. O. Thomas, check wayman at the mine, officials of the mine, an drescue workers, all were of the opinion that there is no possible chance of the men being alive.

The miners who were injured were brought to the surface at once. The work of bringing out the dead proceeded slowly, the bodies being brought out singly. Rescue workers were handicapped by the fumes of the gas which flooded the mine immediately after the explosion.

The dead have not been identified on account of the burned condition of the bodies.

Those in charge of the rescue efforts were of the opinion that few if any of the entombed men would be brought out alive.

The interior of that part of the mine in which the explosion occurred at 10.30 o'clock on Thursday morning was wrecked, and the fumes have been so dense in the workings that men have been unable to penetrate into the entries effected.

120 Miners at Work.

One hundred and twenty men were in the mine at the time of the explosion, the cause of which has not yet been determined.

Every mine rescue team in the Indiana and Southern Illinois coal fields has been ordered to the scene.

All doctors in Sullivan County were called to the shaft of the mine. Cots from furniture stores in Sullivan were requisitioned and placed near the entrance to the mine as the rescue squad went down.

Elmer Davidson of Sullivan was the first injured man to be brought from the workings. His chest was crushed when slate and rock loosened from the roof of the mine by the blast fell on him.

Women Flock to Mine.

Thousands of persons, including wives and children of the trapped miners, flocked to the scene.

Authorities had difficulty in keeping the crowd back from the shaft.

The explosion occurred in the north-east shaft of the mine where the fifty trapped men are held by a cave-in of rock and dirt.

The men in the opposite side of the mine were not affected by the explosion, and made their way to the surface without asistance.

The mine had been in operation for less than a year.

FIFTY MEN ARE BELIEVED DEAD

Heart-Rending Scenes.

SULLIVAN, Ind., Feb. 21 (Canadian Press).—Latest reports of the most appalling mine disaster in Indiana's history say that rescuers are hopeful that al lof the bodies remaining in the coal pit will be recovered some time today.

The scene around the mouth of the wrecked mine is heart-rending. Weary, grief-worn women are awaiting for their loved ones, dead or alive, while a score of men toiled are hopeful that all of the bodies of thirty-five of the fifty-one miners entombed in the explosion yesterday. Mine officials agreed it was improbable any of the trapped men would be found alive. Mine experts said the cutting machine, working close to the wall of an abandoned mine had cut through the partition releasing a flood of gas that had accumulated in old working. Flame from miners' larmps ignited the gas and caused an explosion.

Sullivan dropped all other pursuits in its efforts to bring solace to bereaved and alleviate the sufferings of families of victims. The local chapter of Business and Professional Women's Club undertook the task of ministering to the group of women at the mine. The Red Cross gave attention to immediate needs of stricken families.

SIXTEEN BODIES.

A cave in discovered early this morning in the City Coal Company's mine near here will halt for several hours the work of rescuing the miners entombed in the mine yesterday by the explosion. Sixteen bodies have been taken out. It is believed the death list will total 51.

MAXWELL

The Secret of Maxwell Popularity Is Excess Values

Ask good Maxwell owners the reason for their enthusiasm. Ask them the secret of the car's popularity.

One will place the emphasis, perhaps, on the car's agile qualities, another on its ease of riding and handling, while still another will express wonder at its economy.

When you sum it all up it means just this: Never before has the public been able to buy so much fine motoring for so little money.

No matter what your own experience as a motorist may be, if you don't know the new good Maxwell you have a genuine surprise awaiting you. For thorough-going quality you have never seen anything in the four-cylinder field like this Maxwell-Chrysler achievement.

The backbone of Maxwell quality is sound engineering. But investors in the good Maxwell enjoy further advantages in the fact that the car is built almost in its entirety within its own plants, even to the smallest and most insignificant parts. This is assurance of still higher quality, still greater values.

If you want to compare the good Maxwell with others be prepared to go outside the Maxwell field.

We are pleased to extend the convenience of time-payments. Ask about Maxwell's attractive plan.

STEEL WORKERS USED AS PAWNS IN INDUSTRIAL STRATEGY GAME

Presbytery of Sydney Calls By Resolution For Royal Commission to Investigate British Empire Steel Corporation and Its Methods.

MINERS ARE IN DIRE STRAITS.

SYDNEY, N.S., Feb. 21.—(Canadian Press).—Declaration in favor of the appointment of a commission to investigate British Empire Steel Corporation organization, financial methods, and operations, including wage conditions and the cost of living in this district, is made in a resolution passed by the Presbytery of Sydney.

The resolution, as given out by a committee of the Presbytery, sets forth that the Presbytery believes that some immediate action is necessary "if business and social life is not to disintegrate entirely." It points out further that many workers are in dire state and compelled to accept charity in order to subsist, three hundred families in Sydney receiving aid from the relief association.

The resolution refers to a report issued by a committee of citizens at Dominion No. 6 as revealing "a similar or worse state of affairs" among the miners. Reference is made to the steel plant as having been practically idle for the past six months and as still "practically shut down," though "we are creditably informed that there are sufficient orders on the books to warrant its operation at the present time." Therefore, the resolution says, it is submitted:

1—That a Royal Commission of competent and distinterested men be appointed at once with full authority to investigate thoroughly the organization, financial methods and operations of the British Empire Steel Corporation, including wage conditions among its workers in this district.

2—That while suspending final judgment on the question of the wage, the British Empire Steel Corporation is able to pay its miners, we believe that the 1924 rate should be continued, pending the report of the Royal Commission.

3—That the steel plant should begin operations immediately, since we are convinced that there is no justification whatever for further using the idle steel workers as pawns in the game of industrial strategy.

HIGH PROFITS FOR COFFEE GROWERS

Planters in Brazil Reaping Benefit of $1,000,000 for Advertising.

SANTOS, Brazil, Feb. 21.—(Associated Press).—The $1,000,000 which local coffee growers have spent advertising coffee in the United States seems to be coming back into their bank accounts. According to figures released by the American consulate in this city, green coffee exporters shipped 749,8944,376 pounds of coffee to the United states during 1924, worth $139,007,766. This is a drop under 1923 of less than two per cent. in quantity, but an advance in value of nearly 40 per cent.

There has been much criticism in the United States of the system of daily control of shipments at the ports of Santos and Rio de Janeiro, where the demand is maintained at a high level throughout the year by a control over the sale of the crop. It should be noted, however, local dealers set forth, that this public control over sales is lxed on the basis of the average crop. With entries at 35,000 bags a day into Santos and 12,000 bags a day into Rio Janeiro, the year's arrivals under the original plan, started by the federal government, gave a total of 14,100,000 bags, calculated on a basis of 300 working days a year. This figure is above the average crop for the last ten-year period.

After the July revolution in Sao Paulo was crushed, the federal government ordered the railways to give right-of-way to coffee shipments, and daily arrivals were soon doubled.

Dr. W. L. Schurz, American commercial attache at Rio de Janeiro, has been in Sao Paulo endeavoring to secure a better system of collecting crop statistics and storage vgures for the trade. It is also understood that he intends to tell the Brazilian growers and traders that housewives in the United States have been known to smash corners in food products, and that a ruinous coffee strike is a possible event of the future.

It is undoubtedly true that large [illegible] are being secured on coffee [illegible]ons at the present time. The h[illegible]st price ever recorded for a coffee fazenda was paid a short time ago by an English company organized in Brazil, which paid the equivalent of $2,500,000 for a farm of 2,500,000 trees. At present prices the average crop grown on this farm is worth about $1,800,000. A resident population of 3,200 people live on the farm. Wages are low.

If prices remain high it is thought that rapid development in acreage may occur in Minaas Geraes, Sao Paulo's neighbor on the orth, where there is a large amount of unsettled land suitable for coffee growing.

Issue Book On Planning Of Community Hospitals

OTTAWA, Feb. 18. — (Canadian Press).—To meet what is stated to be "a dire need", the federal department of health has issued a book of 100 pages on the "Planning of Small Community Hospitals."

Hospital authorities estimate that there should be five to seven hospital beds to every thousand of population though in Canada in 1923 there was but one bed to every 347 of population. "Fifty-six per cent of the population live in rural districts," according to the introduction of the book, "many which are located at a distance from hospital service making it costly, and detrimental to acute physical conditions to transport the patients to large hospital centres. The question therefore of distribution of hospitals throughout rural districts is one of moment and urgency."

The publication is, it is stated, in response to Dominion wide enquiries made to the department for guidance in the undertaking of community hospitals and it is the intention of the department to distribute the information to every municipality in Canada as well as to public libraries, architects and women's organizations.

The book deals exhaustively with the details of the site designs, erection and equipment of the small hospital, giving photographs of Canadian rural hospitals and architects drawings of ideal buildings. In all there are eighty-two illustrations together with specific instructions as to each step to be taken as the building progresses. The book was prepared by B. Evan Parry, supervising architect for the federal department of Health.

"Back was Very Painful I am now Well Again"

Mrs. Wm. Walker, Webbwood, Ont., writes:

"I was sick for several months with my stomach, I had pains in the back, and how I used to dread wash day, for my back would pain so that I couldn't lie down when night came. I also had gas on my stomach, and my appetite was so poor that sometimes I did not care whether I ate or not. The doctor gave me medicine, of which I took a number of bottles without benefit. At last I started to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and although I have only used three boxes, I am quite well again."

HIGH SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT AT CAMPBELLFORD

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 21.—The High School Assembly Hall was filled to its utmost capacity on Friday night for commencement night. The programme and the play given were excellent and the principal and staff deserve much credit for the splendid entertainment given.

The programme was as follows:

Chorus, "Come Lads and Lassies," High School pupils.

Presentation of graduation diplomas, by Dr. O. C. Watson, one of the members of the Board of Education. Before presenting the diplomas, he made a few remarks in reference to the beautiful new high school and its splendid equipment.

Those receiving diplomas were: Helen Black, Allan Bonnycastle, Harry Boyd, Grace Brakenridge, Isabel Cleugh, Irene Davidson, Mary Dunham, Roy Elmhurst, Karl Haig, Ethel Hall, Cecil Longmuir, Arthur Loucks, Gertrude Murphy, Grace Orr, Margaret O'Connor, Violet Patrick, Evelyn Reynolds, Helen Riendeau, Edith Stillman, Alta Smith, Jack Twigg, and Anita Williams.

Chorus, "Robin Adair," High School girls.

Presentation of I.O.D.E. Scholarships and Mr. C. S. Haig's medal.

The former were presented by Mrs. W. H. Ashton, Regent of the Campbellford Chapter of the I.O.D.E., who spoke especially of the work of the I.O.D.E. along educational lines, mentioning the amount of money spent by the society to educate the boys and girls of the fallen heroes. There are three scholarships or prizes of ten dollars each to those taking highest marks on three subjects in the middle school; the subjects being: French, English and British History.

Those receiving the three scholarships were: French, Gertrude Murphy; English, Jean Craighead; British History, Emma Massie; each receiving a cheque for ten dollars presented by the donor, C. S. Haig, principal of the Public School.

Medal Presented.

In his remarks, Mr. C. S. Haig, Principal of the Public School, spoke of the object of his giving the medal. This is the second year and it is given to the pupil in the Junior Fourth Class who takes up the work in one year and has the highest marks at the entrance. Last year Allison Moffatt received it, and this year the honor fell to Helen Caddy, who obtained the highest marks.

Trio by three girls, "Fair Shines the Moon Tonight," by Helen MacDonald, Isabel Bygott and Cherrie Turner, who responded with an encore.

Presentation of the Board of Education Scholarships by Major J. M. Bygott; first prize fifteen dollars, second prize ten dollars.

Major Bygott after speaking of the new high school and its fine equipments said that the attendance this year is the highest it has ever been. At present there are two hundred and one students attending, which is twenty-two more than any previous year. He spoke also of the excellent work the teachers on the staff were doing. Those receiving the scholarships were:

First Form—Margery Ackerman and Cherrie Turner.

Second Form.—Nettie Ford and Bertha Hardy.

These were given to those standing highest in the final examinations last June.

A very pleasing feature which came next on the programme was Mr. Earl Stephens', one of the staff, who is manage of the High School hockey team, asking the boys to go on the stage while he spoke in glowing terms of praise of the work of the team so far for this season. He introduced each one individually to the audience, at the same time telling something about each player and sub. The names of the boys in the team are: Clifford Baker, Hastings boy; Basil Reynolds, Ward Baker, Bryant Scriver, also of Hastings; Earl Fox, the star goal keeper; Don, Craighead, Ted Blute, Everett Thomas and Thornton Ibey, two other members, were unable to be present. Mr. Stephens said that whatever praise there was in the success they had had, was due to the work of the boys, but the boys seemed tothink that Mr. Stephens deserved some of the praise.

Before leaving the platform the boys gave three rousing cheers and a tiger for Mr. Greig, the principal, Mr. Stephens and the rest of the staff.

Chorus, "Come, Fellow Me," High School pupils.

Dr. S. A. Peake Medal.

Presentation of Dr. S. A. Peake medal by Mr. D. W. Douglas. In his remarks Mr. Douglas spoke of Dr. Peake, being one of the Campbellford High School boys. He was born and brought up on the English Line about four miles East of Campbellford. He is now a doctor in St. Louis. Dr. Peake has given a similar medal every year for several years. This is given to the student in the Middle School standing highest in the term's work and departmental examinations. Miss Winnie was the winner of this medal.

Aesthetic Dance.

9. Aesthetic dance — "Shergo Gavotte," by Mildred Cowell, who danced beautifully and in a very graceful manner. She received a very hearty applause, and was recalled for an encore to which she kindly responded. Cherrie Turner was the accompanist for her in her two dances.

Miss Cowell is taking a correspondence course in this special line and is doing splendid work.

Presentation of "field day" cups by Mr. Geo. O'Sullivan. This field day was held on the first Friday of last October, and Mr. O'Sullivan, after making a few remarks, presented the following cups::

Senior boys' cup—Arthur Wallace.

Intermediate boys' cup—Thornton Ibey.

Junior boys' cup—James Hind.

Senior girls' cup—Mildred Cowell.

Junior girls' cup—Daisy Rowe.

Chorus — "There Were Three Merry Travellers," High School Pupils.

Those who presented the prizes and scholarships congratulated the winners of each.

Mr. Pearson, organist of St. Andrew's Church, trained the students in the choruses. Every number on the programme was well rendered.

Comedy Presented.

After a short intermission there followed a three-act comedy, "Ellen."

This was given by four young men and three young ladies, students of the Fifth Form. They all did their parts exceptionally well, so much so that it would be very hard to say which one excelled the other, though it was the general opinion of the audience that Lyall Davy had the most difficult role to act. The whole play was good, being full of fun and very interesting. The characters were as follows: Richard Ford, a devoted young husband, Lionel Nelson; Molly, his wife, Clyta Sarginson; Robert Shepherd, Molly's brother, Jack Haig; Max Ten Eyck, a chum of Robert's, Jack McAvoy; Dorothy Marsh, engaged to Max, Jean Eggleton; June Haverhill, Wellesly '26, a practical investigator of home economics, Dorothy Ackerman; John Hume, Rector of St. Agnes', Lyall Davy.

It was a great pleasure to the audience to listen to this play because it was put on from beginning to end without any stops or hesitancy, which showed careful training by those in chage and also talent in those who acted the different characters.

The printed programmes were neatly gotten up and had a picture of the new High School on the front page.

The following is the school staff: E. H. Greig, B.A., principal and teacher of science; Miss K. O. Shaughnessy B.A., teacher of moderns; Miss K. Ferris, B.A., teacher of English; Miss M. Smith, B.A., teacher of commercial work; Miss Dafoe, B.A., teacher of classics; E. Stephens, B.A., teacher of mathematics; Miss M. Gourlay, B.A., teacher of English. The members of the staff are to be congratulated on the great success of thei efforts to make the "commencement" what it was.

February is Hard on the Skin

What with cold winds and bright sun the face has a hard time of it. Using Baby's Own Soap and washing in tepid or warm water—rinsing well and drying perfectly will usually prevent chaps or scalding and ensure skin health and beauty.

It's far better to keep the skin beautiful than to have to cover up blemishes with powders.

QUEBEC, February 21 (Special to The Examiner). — Hundreds of Quebecers and winter sports visitors from all parts of Eastern Canada and the Eastern United States, converted the ballroom of the Chateau Frontenac into a riot of movement and colour last night, when they joined in making the masquerade ball, given under the auspices of the officials of the Eastern International Dog Sled Derby the most picturesque event of the season.

The prizes for the best costumes were won by Miss Kathleen Turner, and her brother Mr. Harold Turner, of Quebec, children of Sir Richard Turner, as a cross-word puzzle and a White Orpington chicken.

Brewers and Bar Maids Warned Of Early Demise

COWES, Isle of Wight, Feb. 21.—(Associated Press). — Brewers, distillers, bartenders, barmaids, draymen, innkeepers and others in the liquor trade live only half as long as the remainder of the population, according to Sir Andrew Clark, of London, speaking at a temperance meeting in Cowes.

The doctor contended that not more than one teaspoonful of alcohol a day should be taken by the average man or woman. He said that seven out of ten beds in London hospitals were occupied by victims of drink. "If there were no alcohol drinking," he asserted, "there would be plenty of beds available and money to support them."

Sir Andrew said that he could testify himself that out of 24 cases admitted to a London hospital on Christmas, 23 were drunk.

AGAIN THE GRAB.

The Toronto Trades and Labour Council is outspoken in its opposition to the proposed increased indemnities for the Provincial legislators, and one speaker declared that the members of the Provincial House are considerably overpaid as it is.

In this stand the Labour Council is in line with the general trend of public opinion.

In no quarter has the Examiner heard the proposed increase receive a favourable word; on the other hand, it has been roundly condemned as a salary grab, and as an affront to the people who have been urging economy in public affairs and some relief from the burden of taxation.

The only justification that can be urged on behalf of the proposal is that the members of the Quebec Legislature are paid $2,000 sessional indemnity, which is the figure to which it is intended to raise the Ontario allowance.

But the Quebec legislators are able to show a balanced budget and a much more satisfactory financial condition than the Queen's Parkers can produce.

Sentiment in the Province is almost unanimously against both the larger indemnities and the increased salaries for Cabinet Ministers, and in view of the general conditions, this opposition should cause no surprise.

The only wonder is that the legislators themselves should have the hardihood to even contemplate such an increase at a time when the demand of the whole Province is for a reduction of expenditure.

A SPLENDID ORGANIZATION.

A local organization that for thirty-six years has been teaching the two desirable attributes of thrift and love of home is the Peterboro Workingmen's Building and Savings Society, which has just presented its annual report for 1924.

Since 1899 the organization has been in existence, and it is difficult to estimate the benefit it has been to its members during that period without seeming to grow too enthusiastic over the merits of the plan.

Briefly, the society seeks to promote systematic saving, the investment of these savings on a safe basis and the furnishing of credit to its members for the construction of homes.

It has been eminently successful in all these aims.

Many a citizen has learned the value of a systematic plan of saving, and at the same time has been paid for his instruction by means of the return from a good rate of interest.

The society, in fact, is used by some members as a savings bank, and they receive the benefit of the profits that accrue from the investments of the organization.

Many other members have been able to buy or build their own homes by means of the funds they were enabled by reason of their membership to borrow from the society.

It is a well-managed, economically-administered organization, operated on a co-operative basis, the members of which, as it is explained, save money together, lend money to each other, and divide profits with each other.

Membership in such an organization seems excellent insurance against the breadline.

28 PER CENT. NATIVE WINE.

It is, as Attorney-General Nickle says, an anomaly that so much fuss should be made in Ontario about increasing to 4.4 per cent. the permissible alcoholic content of beer, when the sale annually of approximately $1,000,000 worth of native wines with a permissible alcoholic content of 28 per cent. continues with little if any protest, says the Ottawa Journal.

Apparently a man can get intoxicated on native wine just as cheaply as on beer, so the reason for the anomaly is not to be found in the price. Nor can it be said that native wines are harder to get. For a few dollars anybody can have a case of native wine delivered to his house from the manufacturers within a day or two.

Probably the only excuse for legalizing the sale of 28 per cent. native wine is the fact that a large number of farmers who produce grapes would be deprived of their mainstay. But when the breweries and distilleries and hotel bars were put out of business in Ontario, nobody worried very much about what was to become of the thousands of men employed in these places; they were advised to change their occupation. The farmers who grow grapes are in a better position, because if necessary they can grow something else on the same farm.

It does seem as if those who are so vigorously opposing 4.4 per cent. beer should—for the sake of consistency and for the sake of those who they believe are harmed by alcohol—start a systematic campaign against the legalized manufacture and sale in Ontario of 28 per cent. native wine.

BUYING AT HOME.

The billboards everywhere are carrying posters with the excellent advice, "Buy made-in-Canada goods."

The counsel is necessary in view of the fact that during the twelve months ending November, 1924, Canadians purchased foreign goods to the value of $812,905,157.

That means that every working day in the year we in this country paid out nearly 3,000,000 to assist industries in other lands and keep foreign workmen busy, while our own industrial employees have been without employment or working only part time.

If only half of this money had been spent upon Canadian-made goods instead of importations from outside the situation in Canada would have been changed as if by magic.

It would have kept our factories running full time and at full strength; it would have meant industrial development, a demand for more labour and a place here for thousands of immigrants who would have helped to carry the burden of taxation.

The inference seems to be obvious that it is not only the duty of the people to buy goods that are made in Canada, but it should also be wisdom on the part of the Government to very earnestly weigh the question of whether or not the buying of foreign goods should be made more difficult.

Is it good business for Canada to send out over eight hundred million dollars to keep foreign workers employed when unemployment is rife in our own land?

PENSIONED AT 103.

Jose Pinto, a railway crossing watchman near Buenos Aires, has just been retired on a pension. Jose first began work on the crossing when a comparatively young man, at the age of seventy-one. He has now been at it for thirty-two years, and somebody seems to have conceived the idea that he has earned a rest. Hence the pension and permission to retire to enjoy it at leisure.

There is something in this picture that possesses a vital appeal, says the Montreal Star. It seems to hold out hope for all struggling people who have to work for a living. It suggests so vividly the reward that some favoring star holds out to the ordinary mortal. What matter the weary hours of business strife, occupied in strenuous efforts to win enough to keep up payments on the house and meet the extraneous costs of living? There is at the end a good sporting chance of gaining leisure in which to revel in the thought of the good work you have done and the fine example you have set to your children and your neighbors and your little intimate world.

All you have to do, of course, is to see to it that you live until you are a hundred and three years old. This ought to be a comparatively easy matter, with the aid of expert advice gratis at any restaurant as to the vitaminic contents of the food supplied, and the innumerable simple and cheap remedies for all conceivable ills, including ankylostomiasis, obtainable at any cut-rate soap-and-candy store on the Continent. Arrived at 103, you send in your request for a pension, and you prepare to look back over the century with a calm and critical eye. There is only one conceivable drawback. You may, in a moment of rashness, be inveigled into a promise to write your memoirs. Than that, few worse fates are conceivable. Better oblivion when a youth of eighty or so than meretricious fame at 103.

AMENDING THE CONSTITUTION.

There was another skirmish yesterday in the battle in which the opening guns were fired several weeks ago, the issue at stake being a change in the Dominion Constitution and a clearer definition of our status within the Empire. Mr. MacLean, member for a Toronto division, raised the question when he declared that the decision of the Industrial Disputes Act "seemed to be an invasion of the rights of Canada." Curiously enough, the speaker agreed that the decision was right in law, but this did not prevent him from attacking the court that rendered the decision. It was not on any question of bias or prejudice that he took issue, since such a plea would have been laughed out of court as a sheer absurdity. Briefly stated, Mr. MacLean objects to the Privy Council of the Empire, not because it contains the greatest lawyers, not because it is absolutely beyond suspicion, but because he believes that Canadian law should be interpreted by Canadian courts.

The appeal is a subtle one to those still suffering from the growing pains of nationhood. Such a presentation of the case, however, argues that it is not the question of the right or the wrong of any issue, but whether or not Canada, with the natural and revolting urgings of youth, should cut another strand in the painter that holds us to the rock of Empire. It is scarcely conceivable that Mr. MacLean would have raised the issue at this time if the Privy Council had not recently rendered a decision in the interpretation of the Industrial Disputes Act which the member for South York admits is eminently sound in law but to which he objects because it interferes with his conception of what constitutes the sovereign rights of a nation within the family of that mighty federation—the British Empire.

Mr. MacLean believes that Canada should have power to amend the British North America Act without consultation with the Mother Country and to interpret it in "our own courts." Better a wrong decision, says Mr. MacLean in effect; better a harmful decision,, if rendered by the Supreme Court of Ottawa, than a judgment of the Privy Council that is right and delivered by jurists who have made a life study of constitutional questions.

In several of the United States the experiment of electing judges at the polls has been tried. In some it is still in vogue. It would be unbecoming to comment adversely on the machinery of government under which a neighbor decides to rule, but the whole concensus of opinion in the United States is against such procedure. The British way of separating the judicial function as far as possible from other functions of government seems likely to achieve the best results. While no breath of party bias can be levelled at the highest judiciary of Canada, it is obviously a safeguard against even involuntary prejudice to have the court of last appeal detached as completely as possible from home politics and native problems.

Mr. MacLean and those who think with him would have the British North America Act amended without reference to Britain. This Act is an Act of the British Parliament, and it obviously cannot be amended save by the normal procedure provided for altering legislation in Britain. The Act embodies a species of constitution and in essence is a contract entered into between the British Government and the Dominion of Canada. Contracts so made are not to be broken lightly because one party to the agreement finds some clause irksome or irritating to its pride. Machinery for making such changes is provided and for Canada to make amendments without consultation with the other party to the contract would be to tear up he B.N.A. Act and disavow the pledges given at Confederation.—Montreal Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The probabilities are that Toronto will be captured by a Peterboro army this afternoon.

The police estimates having been shaved by the Police Commission, the City Council will doubtless "go over them a second time."

A debate upon what can be done to assist Canada's unemployed would be more to the point than the getting-no-where discussions as to Canada's status as a nation.

European immigrants are pouring into Western Canada, and the Globe declares that conditions are ripe for another development like that beginning with the present century.

Mr. Raney the other day accused the Attorney-General of being guilty of "rabbinical casuistry." There is some speculation as to just what crossword puzzle supplied the Progressive leader with that term.

Would not be Without Zutoo Tablets At Any Cost

Mr. A. O. Norton, the millionaire Jack Manufacturer, of Boston, who recently died, was a great "booster" for Zutoo Tablets.

He suffered from headaches from childhood and when he found Zutoo Tablets stopped these headaches in a few minutes and left no bad effect, he began recommending them to his family and friends. In an unsolicited letter, Mr. Norton says in closing:

"My family use them when ever needed with equally good results. I have frequently given them to friends who were suffering from Headache and they never failed to give quick relief. I always carry Zutoo Tablets in my grip on the road and WOULD NOT BE WITHOUT THEM AT ANY COST."

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Feb. 20.—Cattle prices this week have held generally steady to firm at the opening quotations for Monday's market, when the choicest butcher steers and heifers, too few for the demand, were from 15c to 25c higher than the previous week's close. The runs for the week were comparatively light, totaling 4,815 cattle, about 1,300 less than the week before. Though the bulk of the offering consisted of poorly finished rough butcher stuff, all were absorbed in a generally good market. Prospects are for a good steady market at present prices, providing the offerings are not too heavy.

Export requirements were moderate, totaling about 850 for the week's purchase. Added to these were the cattle carried over from the previous week, and cattle shipped through. Rogers and Maybee shipped east for seaboard on Tuesday 47 cars of cattle. The H. P. Kennedy Co. were sending direct from the west a long train of cattle, mostly from their feeding grounds at Edmonton, Alberta. Rogers and Maybee will be in the market again next week for a good number of cattle for export.

Small meats are holding steady to firm, calves showing a little improvemint on the week.

Hogs continue firm, and closing 10c higher for the week at $10.75 to $10.85 f.o.b.

Prices in the various sections are as follows:

Export cattle, choice and heavy steers $7.50 to $8.25; bulls, $4.50 to $5; heifers, $6.50 to $7; steres, $6.50 to $6.75.

Choice butchers, $6.50 to $7.25; medium, $5.25 to $6; common, $4.50 to $5.25; baby beeves, $8.50 to $9.

Choice fat cows, $3.50 to $5.

Stockers and feeders, choice short-keep feeders, 1,00 to 2,00 lbs., $6.25 to $7; choice stockers, 830 to 950 lbs., $4.25 to $5; light western stock, $3.50 to $3.75; choice western, $4.50 $5.50.

Calves dull.

Sheep and lambs firmer.

Hogs steady at $10.75 f.o.b.; $11.75 to $10.85 off cars; selects, off cars, $2.22 per head premium.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, February 21 (Canadian Press). — Wheat underwent a material setback in prices yesterday led by the July delivery, representing the new 1925 crop. Favourable reports good concerning the outlook for growth of winter wheat were apparently something of a factor.

The wheat market closed heavy, 3-8 to 1 7-8 cents net lower, May 185 1-8 to 185 3-4 to 154; provisions showing 2 to 32 cents gain.

According to a leading authority, the weather has been favourable in winter wheat territory, and with no severe changes, there has been but little complaint of damage by alternate thawing and freezing. Only limited areas were thus affected, and there has been a good snowfall over much of the important territory.

In the southern portions of the winter wheat belt, the crop is showing life and greening up. Under such circumstances the wheat market gave way when the commission houses started to sell July on a liberal scale, notwithstanding an advance earlier in sympathy with an unexpected upturn of values at Liverpool.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, February 21 (Canadian Press). — Despite pronounced strength at the opening of the wheat market yesterday, a combination of "bullish" factors failed to boost the prices, the May future being 1 cent down at $1.95 1-4, while July closed at $1.89, a loss of 1 5-8.

The stage was all set for an active, strong market, but following a temporary flurry which was easily satisfied, the market fell away, and remained steady until weakness developed shortly before the finish.

Trade volume was light, although there was considerable spreading, May being bought against July sales.

STERLING RATES.

MONTREAL, February 21 (Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

Sterling demand—$4.76 7-8.
Sterling cables—$4.77 1-4.

MONTREAL GRAIN.

MONTREAL, February 21 (Canadian Press). — The feature of the export grain trade here yesterday was the slight improvement in the demand from exporters for ocean grain room from Canadian winter ports for March loading at about steady rates, but the volume of new business over the cable was small.

The local market for cash grain was weaker and prices closed at a decline of 1 1-2 cents per barrel.

There was some demand from exporters and sales of a few loads of No. 2 Canadian Western were made at 4 1-4 cents per barrel over the Winnipeg May option, c.i.f., bay ports, but apart from this the market was quiet.

Ontario No. 3 oats were quoted at 65 cents, and No. 4 grade at 63 cents per bushel ex-store.

Trading was inactive and prices steady in the spring wheat market. Winter wheat flour was without any new feature.

While the undertone to the millfeed market was easy, no actual change occurred in prices.

The market for rolled oats was steady.

The feature of the egg situation was the further weakness and prices scored a decline of 1 to 2 cents per dozen. This was attributed to the increased receipts and the steady downward tendency of prices at the American centres.

The butter market was firmer, and prices advanced 1-2 cent per pound.

Little business was transacted in cheese, with fodder made No. 1 white and coloured goods quoted at 20 1-4 to 20 1-2 centr per pound.

WINNIPEG LIVE STOCK.

WINNIPEG, February 21 (Canadian Press). — Receipts, 150 cattle and 1,190 hogs.

Despite an exceptionally light volume of offerings, trading on the cattle market yesterday morning was inclined to drag a little, and while most classes found an outlet on a fairly steady basis, the demand for butcher cows was less active, with bidding showing a weaker tendency from the close of yesterday.

The hog market maintained a fairly steady tone, the bulk of the thick smooths weighing up at $10.35, and select bacons at $11.38 1-2.

EGG PRICES.

OTTAWA, February 21 (Canadian Press). — The general situation shows very little change. Western Ontario shippers report that receipts are increasing fast, but the lower grades, firsts and seconds, show weakness.

Toronto specials jobbing 53, extras 50, firsts 47, seconds 43.

Montreal extras jobbing 52 to 54, firsts 50, seconds 48.

Retail prices extras 60, firsts 55, seconds 52.

Quebec extras jobbing 52, firsts 50, seconds 45 to 48.

IS YOUR SHADOW IN THE WAY?

A HOME half lighted is like a home half warm—poor economy at the high cost of comfort. Particularly when light costs so little.

Shadows, for example, are needless annoyances. White or frosted Edison Mazda Lamps, in portable floor or table lamps, overcome this condition, and greatly increase the cheerfulness of your rooms.

To obtain the best results, choose lamps with wide shades that throw the light upward as well as downward. In ceiling fixtures of pendent or shower type, put 50-watt white or frosted Edison Mazda Lamps, or 75-watt lamps if the fixture is a translucent bowl.

Near you is an Edison Mazda Lamp store, recognizable by the yellow and blue cartons. There you can obtain real information about good lighting.

To the Party of the First Part—

YOU own your own home. That's fine. But there's a mortgage at 7%. That's all right. You are reducing it steadily each year.

Yes, but are you protected on that—is your mortgage covered by life insurance? A mortgage is a poor asset to leave wife and family—a curse instead of a blessing to a widow and children without income.

Think it over. We recommend Mutual Life Insurance for all young men who are carrying mortgages on their homes. Mutual life insurance is insurance at net cost. We particularly recommend the Mutual, profit-participating, 20-pay life policy as most suitable for the young man with a young family who is gradually acquiring title to his home, with every prospect of a bright future before him. It's a good policy. But you can get any form of policy issued, in the Mutual Life, and profit-sharing reduces the cost.

Write to-day for Mutual literature.

Government Bills Passed Second Reading at Friday Session of Legislature.

T.N.O. BORROWING.

Premier Defends Measure Allowing Railway to Raise Funds on Own Credit.

TORONTO, February 21. — Rapid progress was made n the Legislature Friday afternoon with considerable government legislation as well as private bills.

The government got second readings for bills to eradicate the European corn borer; for cht suppression of foul brood among bees; to allow the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway to raise money for capital expenditure on its own bonds; to amalgamate the loans of two loan commissions of Ontario; to allow Victoria Park Commission, Niagara Falls, to issue its own bonds.

There was some criticism of these measures. W. E. N. Sinclair, Liberal Leader, said that in the corn borer bill, the government was throwing the responsibility to the municipalities, instead of taking the responsibility itself.

The bill provides that municipalities may appoint an inspector who will order certain things done, on farms where the pest is present.

Hon. John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture, said that the proposals had been deemed sufficient by all who knew the situation.

The Premier discussing the T. & N. O. bill said that the railway with assets of $30,000,000, must borrow on its own credit. He thought it a better business arrangement. The bill passed with little opposition.

North Bay a City.

Among the private bills introduced were measures to incorporate North Bay as a city; to incorporate Comber as a village; incorporate Ripley as a village; to separate Ojibway from the county of Essex; to increase the exemption for each child in the municipal income assessment from $200 to $400; to allow Toronto to spend $434,000 on sewers without a vote of the people.

Hydro Pays Cost.

The government also answered many questions put to it by private members. In reply to a question it was stated that the Settell investigation cost $4408, and the bill is to be paid by the Hydro Commission. The government to another question replied that no apartments except those of the housekeeper, the sergeant-at-arms and the Speaker are being maintained in Queen's Park.

It was also explained that the chairman of the Ontario Hydro Commission got $18,000 a year, and Hon. J. R. Cooke, the only other commissioner, gets $6000 a year.

The cost of the legislative secretary for Northern Ontario since his appointment had been $13,543. It was also explained that Mr. Frank Keeer, the northern secretary, had no power by vrtue of his office to spend public moneys.

Race Track Bets.

The Provincial Treasurer gave the following figures as the revenue to the province on the taxation on race course bets: 1922, $2,212,220; 1923, $1,821,963; 1924, $1,825,093.

The tax on racing associations during the years since 1910 was as follows: 1911, $15,730; 1912, $17,290; 1913, $17,200; 1914, $42,250; 1915, $43,350; 1916, $136,265;; 1917, $100,-723; 1918, $100; 1919, $100; 1920, $774,410; 1921, $770,440; 1922, $769,-910; 1923, $670,774; 1924, $848,493.

In reply to another question, the government denied that Hon. Dr. Carr had stated at a meeting of the Conservative members that he would resign from the government if the government did not change the O.T.A. to meet the wishes of the dry members.

FEW COLLEGE MEN.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—(United Press).—Data obtained from about one-fifth of the textile establishments in the United States indicate that only 6 per cent. of all those employed in the industries hold executive or other important posts; and out of these about one-tenth have had college training, says the National Industrial Conference Board, New York City. Much the largest number of these are employed in the manufacturing branches of the industries as department heads or overseers, and smaller numbers as master mechanics and engineers and as superintendents. Evidently the college graduate has as yet figured little in these industries.

PORT ARTHUR'S CLEAN RECORD

Docket Blank For Mr. Justice Rose's Assize Docket March 3rd.

POLICE COURT IDLE.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., Feb. 21.—(Canadian Press).—Unless within the next few days some person in the Port Arthur district commits an overt criminal act, Justice Wright, who is coming from Toronto to preside at the Supreme Court sessions, March 3, will be presented with a blank docket. At present no cases are set down in the criminal list and there may be no civil action, either jury or non-jury.

Police officials point with considerable pride to the clean record the district has enjoyed during the last few months.

Three times Justice Rose, of Toronto, came to Port Arthur last year, and at each court there was but one criminal case.

Police Court cases in Port Arthur have also been at a minimum.

Provincial Police officers say the entire district has been particularly free of crime during the fall and winter.

HELP FOR TIRED NERVOUS PEOPLE
Found in the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Are you pale and weak, tired most of the time, out of breath on slight exertion?

Are you nervous, if your sleep disturbed so that rest does not refresh you?

Is your appetite poor, your digestion weak and do you have pains after eating?

If you have any of these symptoms you need the help of such a reliable tonic as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Read what Mr. W. W. Francis, of Calgary, Alta., says of this tonic: "After returning from overseas," writes Mr. Francis, "my whole system was in a badly run down condition. I became nervous, irritable, pale and lost weight. Of course I was given treatment and recommended many tonics, some of which I took, but with no apparent result. At last I could not even sleep. My sister, who is in England, wrote and urged me to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial, and I can scarcely say how glad I am that I took her advice. My friends were surprised at my complete recovery but I assured them it was due entirely to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I now always keep a box on hand in case of emergency."

If you are ailing give these pills a fair trial and they will not disappoint you. Sold by all dealers in medicine or sent by mail at 50 cents a box by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CHATHAM, Ont., Feb. 21—Damages to the extent of $1,500 were awarded to the plaintiff in the supreme court action of Williiam Simpson versus the Province of Ontario by Jupstice Rose in the last case on the assize docket here. On October 4 last year, Simpson while driving his motor truck along the Lake Shore Road, a section of the provincial highway, was seriously injured when the vehicle crashed into some posts placed along the side of the highway as a protection.

STAGG HELD ON MURDER CHARGE

Blamed by Coroner's Jury For Death of E. C. Owens, Toronto.

BRUTAL TACTICS.

TORONTO, Feb. 21.—"We are of the opinion that Ernest Charles Owen came to his death at 395 Westmoreland Avenue at 9 p.m. on February 15th as a result of injuries received in a fight between himself and Fred Stagg and we are of the opinion that Stagg used brutal and unnecessary tactics which would cause injuries from which death resulted."

This was the verdict at the inquest into the death of Charles Ernest Owen, aged 44, of 395 Westmoreland Avenue, who died following an altercation on Sunday, Feb. 15, with a neighbor, Frank Stagg, of 397 Westmoreland Avenue, was opened by Coroner Dr. M. M. Crawford and a jury at the morgue Friday afternoon. Stagg, who was arrested following the affair, on a charge of murder, was present in charge of an officer. He was represented by Earl Lawson and the Crown by James McFadden.

Obeyed Father.

Albert Stagg, eleven-year-old son of Stagg, called, said he did not know the nature of an oath, "but I know what it is to tell a lie," he declared. "Recalling last Sunday afternoon the boy said he was upstairs in his home." I heard a noise like hammering in next door. Some one downstairs telephoned the police. I don't know who 'phoned.

"Did you know the police did come?" "Yes."

"What happened after that?"

"Father went downstairs."

"When you went downstairs what did you do?" "I went out in the shed. Mr. Owen was on top of my father in the yard.

"My father told me to kick him and I did so."

"I never seen Mr. Owen come around the back. He was out at our back door. Father was on the ground, lying sideways and Mr. Owen was on top of him. My father told me to kick him."

"What did your father say?" "Kick him."

"Were you able to do that?" "Yes."

"Where?" "In the back. I kicked him a couple of times, and pulled his hair. He then turned around and started to get up. My father got up, too."

"What happened then?" "Owen started to go out and my father started kicking him out."

"Where did your father kick him?" "In the legs."

"Where were they then?" "At the back gate."

"What did you do when you saw them going out?" "I followed them."

"My father told Owen to get out. I never heard Owen say anything."

"Did your father have hold of him going out?" "No."

"Did he kick him, or what?" "He kicked him on the legs."

"Did your father strike him with his fists?" "No."

"When did he stop kicking him?" "When he got out on the street."

Police Sergeant McMenory, of Ossington Avenue Station, called by the Crown, said that on Sunday last he received a telephone call about nine o'clock at night from the chief coroner regarding the man's death. "The sergeant I relieved received a message in the afternoon. The substance of the message was that there was a noise from hammering at 395. It was put on the slate for the plainclothesmen."

Constable Sydney Hill said he went down to 395 Westmoreland to Owen's home at 3.15 in the afternoon.

"Whom did you see at 395?" "Mrs. Owen—I asked for Mr. Owen. I asked if there was any noise going on. She said her husband was repairing shoes. I said if that is all the noise it would be all right. She asked me if the complaint came from next door, and that her boy had told her that a telephone had been out in next door and to watch out for trouble."

Was Mending Shoes.

Robert Goodman, a city building department employee, described the plans presented at 395 and 397 Westmoreland Avenue, semi-detached dwellings. A board fence, he said, divided their back yards. They had side entrances.

Charles Owen, 18, a son of the deceased, said that in the Stagg home there were six children and two adults, and in his own five children and two adults.

On the Sunday in question his father was fixing shoes and had just finished at 4 o'clock when a knock came on the door. He was accustomed to mend the children's shoes.

"Had you had any complaint from the house next door?" "No, nothing said."

The knock was given by P.C. Hill.

"What happened then?" asked the Crown.

Saw Father Shoved.

"My mother came in and told my father, and my father said he would go around and see him about it."

"See who about it?" "Mr. Stagg."

"How did you know it was Mr. Stagg?" "Because they told my mother that the 'phone message came from there."

His father had no stick and did not have hit hat or coat on, the son declared.

"What's the next thing that occurred?" "I went in front room and I saw him getting shoved backwards towards the street."

"How long after he went out?" "About two minutes."

"Who shoved him back?" "Mr. Stagg."

"In what way?" "There was more scuffling than anything"

The lad said his father and Stagg were face to face on the roadway. "Stagg was trying to push my father back, and father was trying to push him back."

"What happened then, did you see anyone else there except Stagg and Owens?" "No one else."

BABY'S COLDS

Children's delicate digestions are easily upset by too much "dosing." Still, the little ones' cold troubles cannot be neglected.

At the very first sign of croup, sore throat, or any other cold trouble, apply Vicks VapoRub over the throat and chest. There is nothing to swallow—you just rub it on. Colds go over night, crop is usually relieved in 15 minutes.

INDUSTRIES ON THE OTTAWA RIVER IF POWER DEVELOPED

Rocher Fondu Scheme Would Encourage Pulp and Paper Expansion.

OTTAWA, Feb. 21.—A. L. Eastcott, manager of the Penmbroke Lumber Company, which operates a large sawmill at Pembroke, last night stated that the proposed power development scheme at Rocher Fondu would not likelp have an general effect on the present lumbering operations as they are carried on at Pembroke.

He pointed out that the proposed building of the power dam would be considerably below the town of Pembroke, and he did not think that such a dam would have any effect on the level of the water in the Ottawa River at Pembroke.

What effect the development and evailability of large quantities of cheap power as would be provided by the Rocher Fondu project would have on the pulp and paper industry while phoblematical at present, would likely have the effect of creating pulp or paper plants on the Upper Ottawa.

The creation of such an industry in the vicinity of Pembroke, Mr. Eastcott said, was quitea logical one if plenty of power were available, and in fact he said such a project ha beedn considered and talked about some time ago. He saw no reason why such plants should not be established and enjoy profitable operation

The establishment of the pulp and paper industry on the Upper Ottawa would give employment to hundreds of workers, not only in the mills themselves, but also in the woods.

WEDDING STOPS TRAFFIC

Mob Waiting To See Dwarfs Married Blocks Weymouth Streets.

WEYMOUTH, Eng., Feb. 21. — (Associated Press).—There was such a mob of uninvited guests at the recent wedding here of Miss Eliza Victoria Walbridge and Alfred Goodwin, dwarfs, and such a buzz of whispers among the throng that the noise became extremely embarrassing to the clergyman performing the ceremony. He had to call for silence five times and threatened to order everyone from the church excepting those of the bridal party.

Miss Walbridge is but three feet two inches in height, while the bridegroom stood but three feet seven inches in his wedding slippers. The heads of the couple did not come up to the altar rails in Holy Trinity Church and nearly every one of the spectators stood on the seats with the hopes of getting a glimpse of the little man and his bride.

Hundreds fought their way toward the altar, while the crowd outside held up traffic for an hour or so and extra police had to be called to remedy the situation. The bride wore white satin and the bridegroom was dressed in a frock coat and carried a top hat. They were followed by a page and two bridesmaids, none of whom were dwarfs.

BOYS ENTERED NINE STORES IN GUELPH

Surrendered to Constable After He Shot at Them.

GUELPH, Feb. 21.— During the hours after midnight Thursday night three youths started on a stampede of shop-breaking and before the sun rose had succeeded in entering no less than nine places, including one church basement, where they regaled themselves with refreshments. In the other places they stole razors, cigars and a lot of trifles of little value. At their busiest time an alarm of fire was rung in, which proved to be a false one and now thought to have been a ruse to take the police away from the main section of the city. Before being captured the officer making the arrest was compelled to fire the contents of his revolver after the young men, when they surrendered. They were remanded yesterday for one week.

BURNBRAE SCENE OF A JOLLY BANQUET

Toast List Was Exceedingly Entertaining—Social Happenings.

BURNBRAE, Feb. 21.—St. Andrew's Guild held a social evening on Monday last in the form of a banquet, beans being the chief article of diet. The majority of the young people of the congregation, as well as some of the older ones, were present and spent a very enjoyable time together.

H. M. Donald, as leader for the evening, very ably filled the office of toastmaster. The following was the toast-list: "King and Empire," proposed by John Murray, and responded to by Alex. Milne and the singing of the National Anthem. "Officers of the Society," by Geo. Donald, reply by Mrs. Geo. Craighead and Lindsay Anderson. "Our Minister and His Wife," by Roy Walker, response by Rev. McKenzie and Mrs. McKenzie. "The Ladies," by Rev. McKenzie, reply by Mrs. John Rannie and Mrs. Thos. Wetherall.

G. V. Taylor, Thos. Wetherall and Andrew Milne also spoke a few words in keeping with the occasion at the close of the toast-list.

Much credit is due Mr. Donald and the social committee for the splendid entertainment provided. Musical numbers included a solo by Miss Marjory Rannie and piano music by Miss L. Hay.

The Guild has received an invitation from the Young People of Wellman's Corners for Tuesday evening, Feb. 24.

St. Andrew's Y.W.A.

Fast Sheet of Ice.

Jack Frost, Menie's capable rink manager, provided the local hockey enthusiasts with a fast sheet of ice, and two strong teams lined up last Saturday afternoon for a keenly-contested game. Don. Craighead, substitute for Campbellford High School team, was one of the most prominent men on the ice, being a more proficient golfer than the rest of the boys.

Cars Out Again.

Cars are once more making their appearance on local highways. Will Allan ploughed through the Eighth Line on Tuesday with his truck, while Dr. Hay reached Menie on Monday with his touring car.

Wood Sawing.

Wood sawing is in full swing in the district. Frank Little is operating around Menie, while Reg. Craighead is on the Seventh Line.

Nothing makes a mother more grateful than a benefit conferred upon her child. Mothers everywhere who have used Baby's Own Tablets for their children speak in enthusiastic terms of them. For instance, Mrs. Zepherin Lavoie, Three Rivers, Que., writes: "Baby's Own Tablets are a wonderful medicine for little ones. They never fail to regulate the baby's stomach and bowels, and make him plump and well. I always keep a box of the Tablets in the house and would advise all mothers to do likewise." Most of the ordinary ailments of childhood arise in the stomach and bowels, and can be quickly banished by Baby's Own Tablets. These Tablets relieve constipation and indigestion, break up colds and simple fevers, expel worms, allay teething pains and promote healthful sleep. They are guaranteed to be free from injurious drugs and are safe even for the youngest and most delicate child. Permission was given Mr. Beatty to draw cinders from the Bonnerworth factory or eslewhere, for which he is to be paid at the rate of $1.00 per load of three cubic yards each for drawing and spreading same.

Arrears of Taxes

James Middleton was present and informed the council that there are still some arrears of taxes for 1924, and asked for anextension of time in which to return the collector's roll. The time was extended till March 14th, with instructions to use most stringent measures to collect.

Wallace Nicholls applied for permission to operate a pool room in Bridgenorth. This matter was laid over until next meeting.

Orders for the payment of $4 to the several deputy returning officers and of $2 to the several poll clerks, and of $3 for rent for the several polling booths were also made.

Council adjourned to meet on Saturday, March 14th, at the hour of one o'clock.

No remedy can cure all ailments of the human body, but an immense number of people suffer from aches, pains and diseases symptoms when their real trouble is lack of iron in the blood. It is the iron in your blood that enables you to get the nourishment out of your food. Without iron your food merely passes through you without doing you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. There is one universally known tonic that has helped thousands because it contains iron like the iron in fresh vegetables and like the iron in your blood.

Brown waited on the Municipal Council at their meeting on Saturday, February 14, requesting that a special audit be made to review the accounts of several years past, especially for the years of his service as Reeve of the Municipality. His request was granted and auditors have been appointed for the work, he told the Examiner.

Quebec man tells how and why he is now enjoying all his old-time health and vigor.

St. Leon, Que., Feb. 20.— (Special.)—"It gives me pleasure to tell you, how satisfactory your Dodd's Kidney Pills have been to me," Mr. Lessard states in an interview. "I have had boils for the past eight months and have spent over $60 for treatments, which did not relieve me of them. After taking five boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills my boils have disappeared. I also had violent pains in my kidneys and they have also gone with the boils. I am now feeling fine and am quite well. I would like to recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to all persons who suffer with similar complaints to my own."

Dodd's Kidney Pills stimulate and strengthen weak kidneys. You will be surprised how quickly they begin to cleanse and purify, to soothe and heal the kidneys, at the same time backaches, rheumatism and other disorders caused by impure blood, disappear.

Mrs. Grace Kitchen, St. George, Ont., writes: "After having a severe attack of pneumonia I was left in a weak and run down condition. Milk Is The BEST Food
Use More Milk
MILK IS NOT A BEVERAGE, BUT A FOOD

Food is more than fuel—for food also repairs waste, helps growth, builds flesh and bone. Milk does all this. That is, milk is a good food, not only because it is a good fuel, but also because it has life-giving properties. Milk is both fuel and food.

Milk contains a great deal of lime. Children need lime and plenty of it, especially for their growing bones and teeth. Milk contains lime in a form that is easily changed in the body into bone. Big boys and girls, and even grown people, need lime, because the bones are always wearing away, little by little, and this wear and tear must be replaced. Lime helps build bones and makes them strong.

REDS OPERATING IN PORT ARTHUR

Actively But Secretly Engaged Among Illiterate Foreigners, Ex-Member Says.

MOSCOW LIE NAILED.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., Feb. 21.—Chased to cover by the recent exposures in a court trial, which involved the Red element of the Society Prosvita, Communist bodies of Port Arthur and Fort William, are still operating secretly and preaching their vicious doctrine among the more or less illiterate importees from foreign countries, it was stated Friday by a former member of one of the Red societies, who was barred from the society because of his evidence at a court trial, which involved a number of his colleagues.

Communistic doctrines are not confined solely to the Finnish Reds but are also prominent among the Ukrainians who are operating under the guise of the Workers' Benevolent Society at headquarters in Fort William. The W.B.S. has a large following, and is said to be in touch with the Communist party or the Third Internationale of Russia through agents in Winnipeg and other points. Members of the society are scattered through the industrial plants, in the elevators, railway shops and municipal electric street railway. Many hold positions as foremen, which brings them in direct touch with the men under them.

NOT AMONG MINERS.

CALGARY, Alta., Feb. 21.—Whatever success the Moscow newspaper Pravada may claim for Communistic propaganda in Canada, the suggestion that the strike of miners in Alberta last year was organized by the Communists was absolutely false, officials of the United Mine Workers of America stated here yesterday.

The Communists had nothing whatever to do with it. As a matter of fact, the United Miners' organization was totally opposed to Communism. The cause of the strike was owing to not being able to effect the wage scale originated at the headquarters of the organization in Indianapolis.

This is also the very definite statement of people interested in the coal mine industry. They state that during the strike negotiations, William Sherman ,the President of District 18 of the Miners' organization, was frequently called a "traitor" by some of the "Red" element among the miners.

BLACK SATIN USED

THE WEATHER

Occasionally we meet with an old time resident who volunteers the information that our winters now are not to be compared in severity with those of bygone days. Lately I have been endeavoring to discover the truth or falsity of this statement by a search in weather records of other days of this particular district. And it may surprise some to learn that with the single exception of Toronto, consecutive records have been kept here for a longer period than any other place in Canada, and extend back for over 60 years. While the winters naturally varied in severity then as they do now, it would seem that they generally began earlier then than now, and continued to a later date in the spring—probably a extension of ten days to two weeks at the beginning and end. Of course there were exceptions. The average snowfall appeared to be heavier. Cold dips generally lasted at least three days, but rarely went lower than we have it now. Last evening I came across this entry for Dec. 4, 1873, by J. Byron Dixon, headmaster of the old Grammar School, who was the observer at that time, and I herewith reproduce it, to test the memory of some of the old time citizens: He says: "A windstorm of great violence occurred on the 4th. Began early and continued all day. Several buildings were much injured, and one man was killed. Some of the timbers of a bridge which he was passing struck him with such force as to cause his death in a short time." This was almost 52 years ago. Can you remember the circumstances?—W.P.

COURT DELAYED BY MANIAC AND BABY

Lunatic Escaped From the Guards in Saskatoon Court House.

SASKATOON, Sask., Feb. 21.—A newly-born baby and an escaped lunatic stopped the course of justice here Thursday afternoon and delayed decision in a $20,000 damage suit against the University of Saskatchewan. Mr. Justice Embury was presiding over the Court of King's Bench, trying the case of David Galbraith, claiming compensation for a broken collar bone and injuries to his shoulder and arm in the university power house, when suddenly an insane howling was heard through the walls of the building. The wheels of justice stopped till it was found that a deranged man, awaiting escort to the mental hospital, had escaped from his guards and was running shrieking through the corridors.

With his capture, the court prepared to resume business, but it was found that the doctor appearing for Galbraith was missing. He had been called away to welcome, professionally, a newcomer to the world. The case had to be adjourned till evening.

LEGAL COMMITTEE ESTIMATES $7,000

Will Support Petition to Legislature Proposed By Lindsay.

The Legal committee of the City Council met last night to consider their estimates for 1925. The city's legal department expects to spend $7,000 this year. Provision was made for the power investigation if held.

A letter was read from the Lindsay Council asking the city to support them in sending a deputation to Toronto to ask for changes in the statutes covering the liability of municipalities in cases of accident. The committee decided that if the Lindsay Council will organize a deputation and arrange a date that they would take part.

In the matter of a claim for damages at Hunter street bridge by Mr. Longo, it was moved that the City Council be recommended to leave the check stand until March, and if it had not been accepted by then it should be cancelled.

REPAIRING ELEVATORS FOR GRAIN SHIPMENTS

Machinery at Head of Lakes Being Overhauled.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., Feb. 21.—(Canadian Press).—Lake head elevator equipment and machinery is now being overhauled in preparation for the opening of navigation. In some plants this includes extensive repairs, as previous to this year elevators were exceptionally busy, consequently little or no time was found to make necessary alterations.

The all-rail movement of grain eastward since the close of navigation has not been as heavy as in past seasons.

Large Red Fox Displayed Near-Human Intelligence

PEMBROKE, Feb. 20 (Canadian Press).—When a large red fox found that he could not liberate himself from the jaws of a steel trap which clung to his rear left foot, he dragged the trap from its moorings, and trailing the long chain wandered to the home of M. Lavelle who lives near the Canadian National Junction, and sought aid in an almost human way. Mr. Lavelle was awakened by the scratching at his front door. On opening it he was surprised to find the fox outside with his foot in the trap and its leg badly frozen. Upon being liberated and his foot every attention, Reynard seemed very grateful and had no objection to being placed in captivity as he now is at Mr. Lavelle's farm.

Methodists Invite Presbyterian Pastor as Temporary Associtae.

WARKWORTH, Feb. 21.—On Wednesday evening a joint meeting of the official board of the Methodist Church and representatives of the Unionists of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church was held in the Methodist Sunday School-room, with an attendance of twenty-one.

A hearty welcome was expressed to the Unionists and an invitation was given their minister to become an associate pastor till June 10th.

Satisfactory arrangements were made whereby the Unionists should worship as a unit with the Methodists until June 10th, retaining separate finances so that they might contribute to the budget of the Presbyterian Church to that date, and at the same time support their own minister who becomes associate pastor.

The pulpit supply is in the charge of the associate pastor. Up to date thirty-nine Unionists have by their signatures approved of the arrangements, and many more are expected to do so.

INTIMIDATION CHARGE LAID AGAINST MOTHER

Aftermath to Collapse of Murder Trial in Hamilton.

HAMILTON, Feb. 21.—(Canadian Press).—Charged with intimidating witnesses, Mrs. Annie Baytowicz was arrested yesterday. She is the widow of Joseph Baytowicz, whose dead body was found on the mountain side last fall, and for whose murder she was subsequently tried.

The witnesses in question are her two children, aged nine and eleven years. At the inquest the little boys told a startling story, incriminating their mother and four men. At the trial the children broke down, and Mr. Justice Mowat refused to accept their evidence. The charge of murder was withdrawn.

It was upon instructions of Mr. Justice Mowat that the woman was arrested Friday. Crown Attorney Ballard later said that she had been released on condition that she never discuss the matter with the children. She is alleged to have broken her agreement on two occasions.

MENNONITE CHILDREN ARE KEPT FROM SCHOOL

Delegation of Colonists to Interview the Manitoba Government.

WINNIPEG, Man., Feb. 21.—(Canadian Press).—A delegation of Old Colony Mennonites is expected to arrive here shortly from Morden, Man., to interview the Provincial Minister of Education regarding the action taken by the Government under the School Attendance Act recently when families representing 75 children were charged with breach of the Act and remanded until next Tuesday.

When negotiations were being conducted last year for the sale of the Mennonites' lands with the object of going to Mexico, the Government allowed non-attendance until the end of 1924, in view of the possibility of the colony leaving the country. The land deal fell through, however, and the charges followed when children failed to attend school.

"Possibly—if we were engaged. But we're not."

"Sally!"

She waved the protest aside.

"Oh, it's not just because you don't trust me," she said. "I've decided, for instance, that I don't want to be somebody's cook."

Bob Wells made a sign of bewilderment.

"But I don't."

"Well, if you want an explanation, I heard everything you said to Mr. Underwood, while you were eating supper. 'When you get a good cook the thing to do is rope her and brand her and don't let her get outside the coral.' Remember that? I do. 'I'm going to marry one.' Remember that? 'When it comes to cooking I don't have to take off my hat to anybody.' Perhaps you remember that one, too. You told him all about the wonderful wife you were marrying—it was a cook. Do you deny it?"

The sheriff swallowed and turned a dull red. "We just happened to be talking about meals," he said.

Meals—and cooks. That's what you think about and talk about the most, Bob Wells. I never realized it until I listened at the crack of the do or. Perhaps you'll marry a cook some day, Mr. Sheriff, but her name won't be Sally Morgan."

The Wreck listened with a queer intermingling of triumph and dismay.

"I reckon it's lucky on both sides," remarked the sheriff in a surly tone.

"Yes," affirmed Sally.

"I'm not hankering to marry anybody who goes running around——"

"Easy on that!" cautioned the Wreck.

"Why, back at Underwood's they told me they had a married couple working for them," blurted the sheriff.

"That was simply Henry's idea to cover a situation," remarked Sally, in a composed voice.

The Wreck stood glaring.

"Wait till your old man gets the news," said the sheriff.

"When Dad gets it he'll get it all," declared Sally. "What's more, he'll believe it, too. And if he wants to know if I'm engaged to anybody, I'll tell him 'Yes.' I'm engaged to Henry Williams."

The sheriff's jaw dropped. The Wreck almost swallowed his tongue.

"I am engaged to Henry Williams," repeated Sally, in a clear voice.

"Is—is that true?" demanded the sheriff, looking at the Wreck.

It seemed to Henry Williams that the universe was crashing about his ears. But he rallied gamely.

"She said it, didn't she?" he cried.

"Yes; she said it," admitted Bob Wells.

The sheriff could not think of anything more for half a minute. He was stunned. He was angry, too.

"I feel sorry for you, Sally," he said. "You won't marry him very soon, anyhow."

"You mean you're going to take him to jail?"

"I'm the sheriff," Bob Wells reminded her.

"Then, of course, that means you are going to take me to jail, too," she said.

He shook his head.

"You don't belong in this case," he said.

"Well, you'll not take him without me, Bob Wells."

It seemed to the Wreck that he was merely a bystander.

"As soon as I get to a telephone, I'll send for your father," said Bob Wells.

Sally flared.

"I'm no child; I know what I'm doing," she cried.

"Where's the rest of Williams' gang?" inquired the sheriff.

"Henry Williams hasn't any gang at all, unless it's me," declared Sally. "Why don't you go out and find Nosey and Lefty and Denver?"

"Who?" asked the sheriff.

"Nosey and Lefty and Denver, I said. Do you mean to tell me you never heard of them?"

Sally looked at the Wreck and laughed.

"What do you think of that, Henry? Here's a sheriff with a real gang in his county and he never heard of them."

She turned to Bob Wells.

"Maybe you can't find them, but Henry and I did. We spent all day yesterday and part of last night with them. But it's a fact, although I don't suppose you'll find it out until Henry and I are in jail and the hold-up keep right on happening."

"Maybe you can show me this gang," remarked the sheriff.

"Maybe we can," said Sally. "Henry, shall we show him the gang?"

The Wreck shrugged.

"What's the use?" he asked. "What would he do with 'em if he got 'em?"

"Still, we might point them out," said Sally. "He might want to scold them."

"They might talk back," objected the Wreck.

"Not if he was polite to them," said Sally.

The sheriff decided it had gone far enough.

"It may look funny to you two," he said, "but if there's any gang around here that I haven't met up with, I figure it might be healthy for Henry Williams, so called, to produce the evidence."

"Well, we don't guarantee they're going to wait for you," observed Sally, "but we'll try to show you the place, anyhow."

"Come on, then."

The sheriff turned to his companion.

"Keep your eye on this man," he said.

They started downhill toward the horses, Sally walking beside the Wreck. She gave his arm a reassuring squeeze.

A STRANGE WOLF STORY FROM SAULT

Trapper Uses Fish Hooks as Aid in Catching the Wily Animals.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Feb. 21.—(Canadian Press).—A strange wolf story comes from Alma Heights, east of Sault Ste. Marie.

A local trapper undertook to thin out the packs, but in spite of all his ingenuity the wolves would rob his traps of baits and retain their freedom. The resourceful bushman conceived the idea of "playing the animals for suckers," and rigged up some heavy fish hooks on the end of strong brass wire, upon which he impaled attractive bait. About this set he distributed a few traps. Next morning, on visiting his traps, he discovered that two wolves had been nicked by the hooks, and in their sudden terror had forgotten the traps, in which they were caught in their efforts to free themselves. He killed them both.

Tom Kirby, it is reported, killed two wolves on the north shore, opposite Richard's Landing, St. Joe Island.

ANTI-UNIONISTS OF ST. ANDREW'S DECIDE COURSE

Resolved to Support the Mother Church, at Fine Meeting Last Night.

KEEN INTEREST SHOWN.

Property Ownership and Mission Work Discussed—Criticize Ministers.

"Resolved, That in the opinion of this meeting, and in the interests of the cause of Presbyterianism, the Presbyterian members of St. Andrew's Church become associated with St. Paul's Church here as soon as possible."

This resolution was moved and seconded last night at a well attended meeting of the continuing Presbyterians of St. Andrew's Church, called in All Saints' Parish Hall.

The enthusiasm of the gathering was shown by the unanimous standing vote, that all were anxious to become affiliated with St. Paul's Church in Peterboro.

The questions asked and answered were numerous, and a fine spirit was shown during the general discussion.

Richard Lees was chairman, and opened the meeting with prayer.

No request had been made, said Mr Lees, to hold the meeting in St. Paul's church, as probably the best course—this in the way of explanation

The request came from St. Paul's church that the members non-concurring go there, and would be made welcome.

The chairman at the outset said they were met for the discussion of plans anent future church relationship, and the action most feasible for all concerned. No action had been earlier on account of the situation in St Paul's church.

Questions and discussion were called for, one gentleman voicing his opinion that as so many unionists were withdrawing it was the duty of Presbyterians to step in and support and carry on the work, which would probably suffer through their action in leaving.

Asked as to the probability of another vote being taken Mr. Lees thought not.

Mr. McClelland, in reminiscent vein, for a few moments, told of his connection with the 'Old Powder Mill," as it once was termed, St. Andrew's church, of his ancestors, who came from Scotland, to carry on the work in days gone by; and thought it was his duty now to still seek a church of the Presbyterian faith, and with his wife was now willing and happy to seek a home in St. Paul's church even though leaving the dear associations of St. Andrew's.

Mr. Fair another member, sent his regrets owing to illness.

A lady member asked, if the Legislature called for the two-thirds majority of members would they claim the church building? Yes, said the chairman.

Mr. Lees gave a few ideas on the action of the Legislature in regard to the section of the bill, which might be introduced anent the two-thirds majority. He cited the Wee Free Church case in Scotland, where a minority had claimed all the church property, and found the task of keeping it in good condition and use a big undertaking. It had resulted prejudicially to the best interests of the church; so to his mind, it were better to be without too much property. Rather do a good and necessary work as the Presbyterian church.

The chairman also gave as his view that if the Legislature halted the Bill, the Unionists would yet go into the union and seek and receive a certain amount of sympathy.

A member thought it would be wise to attend St. Paul's church, and allow their certificates to remain in St. Andrew's until 10th June.

The question was put, Would it be wise to leave St. Andrew's church in a body and proceed to St. Paul's? a bod yand proceed to St. Paul's?

Referring to the resignations of ministers and members of churches which are remaining Presbyterian, Mr. Lees told how the ministerial resignations are received by presbytery, but not accepted, thus blocking any action which might be taken regarding the supply of pastors, these ministers only being relieved of pastoral duties. But ministers have "taken the bit," and stampeded the members into resigning, instead of remaining with the churches 10th June, as he personally would advise. The church will require all the support possible, and all Presbyterians must be prepared to stand up to the task.

The resolution was then put to the meeting, and was carried by a unanimous standing vote.

A lady member, Mrs. Morrison, referred to the missionary givings, which are on a big scale in St. Andrew's, as to how the money would be allocated, and whether the missionaries would suffer when the givings ceased. This was answered by the chairman saying the missionary funds would be handled by the Missionary Board until June next, and that there would be no fear of the Presbyterian church having no mission work to look after.

This was all the business, and with a vote of thanks to the Wardens of All Saints' church for the use of the hall, and the benediction, the meeting adjourned.

PROTECTION OF FISH DESIRED

Local Protective Association Would Have Pickerel Season Changed.

The annual meeting of the Peterboro Fish and Game Protective Association was held at the Empress Hotel last evening, and the attendance was not what it should be for an annual meeting. The president, Chris. Graham, occupied the chair, and reported the activities of the association during the past year. It was noted that over fifty per cent. of the members of the association are American tourists and it is regretted that the people of this county are not taking more interest in the welfare if the conservation of fish and game.

Herb. Routley, secretary-treasurer, reported a membership of one hundred and eighty-six and a balance in the treasury of $180. His report was very satisfactory, and he was complimented by the members for the excellent manner in which he handled the secretary's work.

The association is sending in recommendations to the Department of Game and Fisheries as to the advisability of placing extra overseers on during the spawning season this spring, and also to see if the pickerel season cannot be changed to the same as the bass and 'lunge. By making this change a great deal of good can be accomplished in saving bass and 'lunge from being taken out illegally when fishing for pickerel. The executive is sending out applications to the Department for fish fry for all the lakes in the vicinity and many more settings of pheasant eggs to be hatched in this district, with the hope that they will eventually become plentiful in Peterboro County.

The association is sending out notices to the different parts of the district regarding the taking of fish during the closed season. It is to be hoped the people of this district will learn their great mistake in taking the fish out of season.

A discussion took place in reference to the wolves in this vicinity, and the secretary read several letters from different wolf hunters who claim they could rid the district of these animals if the bounty was large enough.

The President will represent the Peterboro Association at the meeting of the Ontario Fish and Game Association to be held in Toronto in a short time.

FARM NEWS AND PROBLEMS

THEORISTS RUIN AMERICAN FARM SAYS YOAKUM

Farming Industry Cannot Survive on One-Third of Consumer's Dollar.

ASKS LEGISLATION

"Fountain From Which Cities Suck Sustenance is Drying Up."

By CHARLES P. STEWART.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—"The farming industry cannot survive on one-third of the consumer's dollar."

The statement is B. F. Yoakum's, in demanding agricultural relief by the present Congress, or an extra session to put it through as speedily as possible after March 4.

"The United States," continues Yoakum, veteran railroad organizer and executive and chairman of the Farmer-to-Consumer League, moving power behind the Curtis-Aswell bill, "never has been faced by a more menacing economic condition han agriculture presents to-day.

"Unless the right solution is found business industry and labor of the cities in the end will suffer more than the farmers.

"The fountain from which the cities such their sustenance is being dried up.

Many Give Up.

"The best estimates obtainable show that about 1,200,000 farmers have been drives out of business. Some of them continue on the farms as tenants or economic slaves.'

"This does not come from alarmists. It comes from the United States government.

"Not long ago I visited the great agricultural belt of the northwestern states. I was told there that from the court house steps of one county seat alone there had been 520 farm foreclosure sales. I was told that in many cases the farmers lost not only their farms and homes, but, under chattel mortgages, the household effects as well. Even their children lost their toys.

"In 1922 agricultural products aggregating farm value, as given by the Agriculture Department, of 7½ billion dollars, exclusive of livestock, cotton and tobacco, were sold to the consumer for 22½ billions.

"In other words, this foodstuff was sold to consumers for three times as much as the farmers were paid.

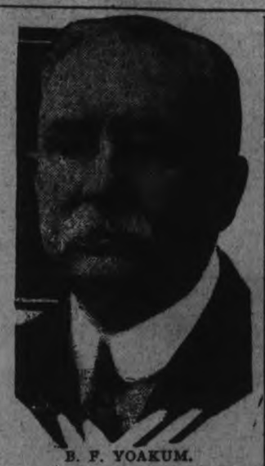
Intent of Bill.

"The Curtis-Aswell bill provides an opportunity for the economic and commercial organization of the farming industry under a federal charter. It is simple and easily understood. It calls for no appropriation. It does not seek to tax the general public. It asks the government for a well-secured loan of $10,000,000 at 4½ per cent., payable in or before 19 years.

"It places the control and management of the organization in the farmers' hands.

"That is where it belongs.

"Too long have ambitious amateurs and plausible theorists been permitted to override the farmer in the management and control of his own business. It is this which has so badgered and befuddled him."



B. F. YOAKUM.

VEGETABLE GARDEN INTRIGUES AMATEUR

Most Men Find Much Interest in Their Back-Yard Patches.

The amateur gardener who undertakes vegetable growing seriously is likely to be a man. There are many exceptions but the head of a household usually bosses the vegetable patch and leaves flower growing to his wife. Vegetable growing appeals to the masculine liking for mathematical exactness. Straight rows, uniform crops, carefully calculated fertilizer formulas and well-schemed companion and succession cropping schedules delight the male heart.

Interesting as the Radio.

The gardener who studies his opportunities can get as much exercise for his brain cells out of a seed catalogue as out of a radio book. A garden can be made almost as interesting as a problem, as a superheterodyne hook-up. The demnd for exact information as to varieties of vegetables comes from the amateur who takes an intellectual interest in gardening. He wishes to make sure that the seeds he sows will produce exactly the crop he wants; and he wants, as a rule, the varieties of each vegetable which excel not in size, color or shipping qualities, but in tenderness and flavor on his table.

Consider, for example, the radish This vegetable has been cultivated by man for many centuries. In medieval times barons spiced the feasts in their castle halls with dishes of the long and very hot varieties now grown for summer use, such as Chartier and white Strassburg. These take twice as long to mature as the early varieties now available to us, such as earliest white olive, twenty-day and scarlet globe The newer kinds are more tender, milder in flavor, maturing sooner, but at the same time quick to turn pithy, so they are no good in hot weather A generation ago a radish which represented a big improvement over older sorts was introduced under the name of French breakfast Many gardeners are still growing French breakfast under the impression that it is the best variety, though it has been far surpassed

List Radish Varieties

A gardener seeking a radish schedule which wuold give him varieties of which he could be proud and which would provide for his table through the season, might select the following: Twenty-day or earliest white olive for the first crop; scarlet globe for the second, sown several times at intervals of ten days; giant butter, the largest of the turnip-shaped radishes, of excellent flavor, and slow to turn pithy, for the main early summer crop; olive crystal and icicle for a summer crop. For fall use, scarlet globe and giant butter should be sown again for September harvest and in July one of the winter radishes, such as Munich, Chinese mammoth or black Spanish should be sown for late fall and winter use

PAINT MACHINERY.

Paint lengthens the life of your farm implements. Before starting to use them this spring, give them a good coat of paint to protect them from rust. The machinery should be cleaned of all dirt and rust before applying the paint.

BARLEY FOR CORN.

Barley makes a good substitute for corn in breeding and fattening hogs Barley chop mixed with skim milk or tankage and a little water makes a good slop for brood sows or fattening hogs.

A Model Farm Saves a Mile a Day!

LINCOLN, Neb., Feb. 21.—It has been estimated that the average farmer, in doing his chores, walks one unnecessary mile a day, all on account of improper arrangement of his farm buildings.

To start the hundreds of embryo farmers at the college on the right road, the students of the college have built a model farmstead in miniature which represents a nearly ideal arrangement for a 160-acre farm in the prairie states. Built to one-quarter scale in the workshops of the college, the model now stands on the campus where it offers ocular evidence of the correct way to lay out buildings, fences and the like.

The buildings comprising the model include a comfortable, attractive farmhouse, set on a concrete foundation and equipped with modern conveniences; an up-to-date dairy barn with a solid wall concrete silo; a hay shed for alfalfa; a horse barn; a hog house; a tool shed and shop; a poultry house and a machine shed. The plan was worked out for one particular farm, and has been tried out with great success on farms in several counties of Nebraska.

Working on the theory that every farm is a factory, in a sense, the Nebraska college expects, through the medium of its model farmstead, to show the coming generation of farmers how to avoid many of the unnecessary handicaps under which their fathers labored. As one-fifth of the value of all farm properties is invested in buildings, it becomes apparent what importance attaches to their construction and general arrangement with relation to one another.

Duties Considered.

In disposing the buildings of the model farmstead so as to reduce to a minimum the number of steps the average farmer has to take each day in performing his ordinary duties, consideration was given to the question of just what these duties consist of. A general plan was then worked out which, in the model farmstead, takes him from place to place as follows:

When starting out on his morning chores he goes from the house to the barn, where he tends the horses and colts, cows and calves, and, after separating the milk, feeds the calves. The skim milk that remains is then carried to the pigs at the farrowing pens, after which the farmer goes to the combined crib and granary to feed the fattening hogs and fat cattle.

In returning he passes to the hay shed and feed the stock cattle and then the poultry. Next he steps into the milk room at the barn, gets his cream, returns to the house, and his chores are done.

Saves Many Steps.

While doing all this he has walked only 750 feet, whereas on farms laid out in haphazard manner he might have walked three or four times as far. The path he has walked is shown by dotted lines on the plan of the farmstead.

Again, suppose it is evening and the farmer is coming through the lower gate by the hay shed. His course to the barn leads past nearly all of the buildings, and most of the chores can be done while the team he is driving is reaching the tank, drinking and going to the barn.

When the horses and cows are attended to, his evening chores are completed.

Location Noted.

Many other points were given consideration in planning the farmstead to make it practical and at the same time comfortable and pleasant. For instance, the barns and yards are located east of the house so that unpleasant odors are carried away by the wind which, in the territory for which it was designed, usually is south and southwest in summer, and north and northwest in winter.

The house, moreover, is located on high, well-drained land, insuring a good view and preventing barnyard drainage from reaching it.

All of the buildings are so located as to act as windbrakes to adjoining yards, and nearly all the fences serve two yards. The yards are adjacent to the pastures and the garden close to the house. The farm scales are so situated as to be handy for weighing grain and stock, and it is possible to drive to nearly all of the buildings without opening gates.

Cool Barn.

In locating the barn it was considered that buildings situated in the sun, but with breezes blowing through them in summer, are cooler and more comfortable than those in the shade but with no breezes. Hence the barn has a central alley running through it from north to south, and the building is cool even in very hot weather.

In general, it is desirable that farm buildings should be placed close to the highway if possible, although the house should not be too near a main automobile highway on account of the dust that arises from it.

Another point advocated is that the buildings need not be close to the water supply.

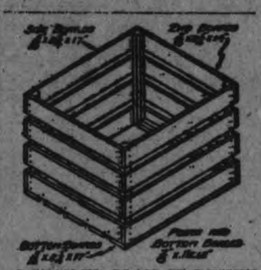
How To Make A Standard Bushel Crate



DETAILED PLAN OF BUSHEL CRATE.

ITHACA, N.Y., Feb. 21.—Bushe crates are among the handiest containers that a farmer uses. They are simple enough to be built by anyone.

Here are the needed materials:

For side and bottom, 13 pieces, 5-16 of an inch by 2 ¼ inches by 17 inches.

For ends, 8 pieces, 5-16 of an inch by 2¼ inches by 14 inches.

For posts and bottom braces, 6 pieces, 7-8 of an inch by 1 inch by 12 inches.

Nails for boards, ¼ pound 3-penny common.

Nails for bottom braces, 4 nails 6-penny box.

Direction for Nailing.

The nails that are to be driven in straight are the middle ones at the end of the boards, and the 6-penny box nails that are driven through side boards and posts and into the ends of the bottom braces.

All other nails are to be driven slanting so as to give them greater holding power.

Legal Capacity.

The bushel crate contains when level full, a quantity equal to a heaped U.S. standard bushel, which is specified by the New York State Department of Weights and Measures as 1¼ standard bushels and authorized as a legal measure for use in the sale of all commodities that may be sold by heaped bushels.

Since the standard bushel contains 2150.42 cubic inches, the crate must contain 2688 cubic inches, which is the volume capacity of a box 12 by 14 by 16 inches, inside measurements.

Regulations specify that crates as actually constructed will be considered within the law if they are small by the amount of 28.7 cubic inches, or 1 1-3 per cent.; or if they are large by twice this amount, 57.4 cubic inches, or 2 2-3 per cent. of the specified capacity. A further requirement is that the work of the cutting and nailing shall be done with such care that the dimensions of any one side shall not vary more than 1-8 inch from the correct dimension.

Practical Dimensions.

The crate shown in the illustration has inside dimensions of 12 by 14 by 16 3-8 inches, which gives an extra capacity of 63 cubic inches to allow for the 63 cubic inches volue o se posts and bottom braces. If of the posts and bottom braces. If the posts and braces are chamfered ¼ inch on the corners, the crate will be 2¼ cubic inches over size.

Crates of this size when placed end to end leave 2 inches finger space in the standard wagon box and when empty they are readily nested into bunches of three for transportation or storage.

DIFFERENT DINNERS.

(By Barbara Brooks, Kellogg Home Economics Dept., London, Ont.)

This is the time of year when food seems to have lost its savor. Unless we live where we have access to the city markets, we are dependent, to a great extent, upon food from our own storage places and preserve closets. After the holiday season and the return to regular routine, it is harder than ever to serve meals which are different enough to be interesting.

We are going to pass on to you some suggestions given to us by a farm woman—one of those good cooks and wise mothers who knows how to feed her family so as to provide them with both food and flavor.

A favorite dinner dish of hers is cabbage stuffed with sausage meat. Remove the leaves from a head of cabbage; wash them thoroughly, then line a baking dish with several layers of them; arranging the leaves so that they look like a whole head of cabbage. Fill the center with sausage meat, either made into individual cakes or into a roll. Sprinkle the cabbage with salt. Cover and bake in a moderate oven until the cabbage is tender. If laxative material is desired, some all-bran can be mixed with the sausage meat.

A sauce may be served with stuffed cabbage. If you have cream, whip one-half and season it with grated horse-radish. If cream is not available a tomato sauce is good.

Another substantial winter meal is Italian spaghetti. The following sauce comes from a farm woman of Italian decent. A quantity of it can be made in tomato season and canned for winter use—or it may be made when needed, using canned tomatoes. The tomato paste called for in the recipe can be bought at the grocers or tomatoes can be cooked down until a thick paste is formed.

Italian Spaghetti.

One-half lb. Italian spaghetti, 3 tablespoons oil (lard may be used), ½ teaspoon black pepper, 1 sliced onion, 3 tablespoons tomato paste, ½ cup water, 2 cups canned tomatoes, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 cup grated cheese.

Cook the spaghetti in boiling salted water. Drain, mix with tomato sauce and sprinkle with grated cheese.

Tomato Sauce.

Heat the oil with the black pepper. Add onion and cook until light brown. Mix tomato paste and water and add, cooking until the paste looks dry. Add canned tomatoes and cook 45 minutes. Add sugar and cook 15 minutes longer.

Canned fruits, jams and jellies add much to winter meals. A plain dessert of cottage pudding will be glorified with a sauce made by beating raspberry jam into creamed butter and sugar (yard sauce). Pieces of sparkling jelly will brighten up the common meringue on floating island or bread pudding. A tart jelly such as cranberry or currant, beaten into mayonnaise, is delicious in fruit salad.

Canned peaches, pears, apples or pineapple can be chopped and rolled into a baking powder dough. Place this in a pan, dot with butter and pour the fruit juice around it. Bake in a moderate oven for about twenty minutes, or cover and cook on top of the stove until the dough is thoroughly steamed.

White Eggs Dyed Brown To Fetch Better Prices

LONDON, Feb. 21.—Spotted eggs have appeared in the London markets recently in such numbers as to arouse not only the curiosity of naturalists, but of fod authorities as well.

Investigation revealed that the spotted eggs had been dipped in a solution of coffee to give them a brown tint and that in many instances, if left in the liquid for an insufficient time, the eggs became spotty after being withdrawn. It often happens that eggs left in the coffee solution long enough for the browning process to be completed, take on a coffee flavor.

While in some parts of the United States white eggs bring the best prices, it is the brown eggs which for years have been sold in London at a premium. It is only of late that poultry dealers have taken to coloring the shells with the coffee solution.

IRISH EXPORTS INCREASE.

LONDON, Feb. 21.—(Associated Press).—Imports into England from the Irish Free State increased during 1924, an average of 50 per cent. over the imports of 1923. Also, they are about 80 per cent. above the annual average for the two years preceding the adoption of the Free State Constitution.

IMPORTANT FOODS.

Grain Products Come Next to Milk in Energy Giving.

After milk another important food is derived from grain products, Mrs. Mann learned.

Bread, cereals of all kinds, macaroni and rice. All are high in energy and yield a large amount of working power.

The man who does heavy work, the athlete, the child that is very active, should have generous amounts of grain products at every meal. These foods will prevent the body from burning its own tissues. They are easily digested, and quickly available.

The wise cook will prepare these foods in various ways to keep them palatable. This may be done by preparing mush for breakfast, soups for luncheon, puddings for dinner; also breads, cookies and cakes for all meals.

Where the whole grain is used the products have most food value. Such are oat meal, whole wheat, graham flour, brown rice and unbolted corn meal.

In the refining of flour and the polishing of rice, the outside coating is removed and with it most of vitamin B.

The part remaining is still valuable for energy, but when used great care should be taken to see that the meal is supplemented with some vegetable, containing mineral.

VISE, FIRST VICTIM, COMPLETES RESTORATION

LIEGE, Belgium, Feb. 21.—The little town of Vise, near the border line betwene Belgium and Germany, the first scene of German operations in August, 1914, has just completed its restoration program.

Vise was very badly scarred by fire, but all its historic edifices have been rebuilt in the old style. Principal among these are a 16th century church and town hall, and a famous ancient convent school.

A well equipped jazz orchestra contains practically every noise making device but a concrete mixer.

WHEAT IS KING OF ENGLAND

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, England, Feb. 21.—You may talk about George V. sitting in state at Buckingham Palace, but the real king in England just now is King Wheat.

Wheat has always been of sufficient importance to Britain, but just now, as a result of high prices, food shortage, unemployment, and the backwash of war, it has reached a pre-eminent position in the industrial and economic life of the empire.

1. In the main, England must depend on the outside world for her essential wheat supply.

2. The price of wheat has gone up and is going up with alarming speed.

England herself is practically helpless in the matter. She is at the virtual mercy of domestic and foreign profiteers and the vagaries of import conditions. And she needs wheat—lots of it. She needs it all the time.

Sir Aukland Geddes has been appointed chairman of a Royal Commission to investigate food prices—the price of wheat important among them—and his commission has already uncovered some astonishing sidelights on the crucial food problem of Britain.

The gist of the report so far has it than an impending food shortage is possible in England and that prices are steadily going up.

One measure for possible relief was the subject of yesterday's article in this series—the problematical contruction of a series of huge grain elevators in which Britain could store her own grain and thus control world prices in a degree.

Another is the possibility of the government surveillance of all British dealing in grain, or whatever nature.

In the latest session of the commission, G. J. S. Broomhall, grain trade statistician of Liverpool, stated on examination that government control itself may be one of the causes of the present high prices.

Broomhall defended speculators in wheat staunchly.

"As often as not," he said, giving the commission one of its major sensations, "it is the wheat gamblers themselves who try to keep the price down."

He explained this curious phenomenon as follows:

Government control during the war period, he said, had reduced the personnel and shaken the morale of those remaining in the grain trade. Certain traders—optimists by nature—are entering the trade with money and leaving with none. He concluded by saying:

"We are enjoying slightly cheaper grain just now because we are getting a subsidy through speculation."

Broomhall maintained stoutly that bread was cheaper in England than in most other parts of the world—though it is rapidly approaching here the astonishingly high price of a shilling a loaf.

When Broomhall concluded his testimony, one of the members of the commission said "that the witness had not helped the commission much in regard to the phenomenon, and that he would like to hear further explanation."

But the "further explanation" was not forthcoming.

Sir Aukland Geddes, by persistent questioning, made a series of witnesses admit that, allowing for the changed purchasing powers of currencies, it would be reasonable to assume that the proper price of wheat was about the same as it was before the war.

Attempts to obtain the names of speculators "who kept the price down" were unsuccessful, although witnesses were willing to give them "in private." One of the few names that was mentioned was Joseph Leiter.

Meanwhile England's bogey comes closer and closer—bread at a shilling a loaf.

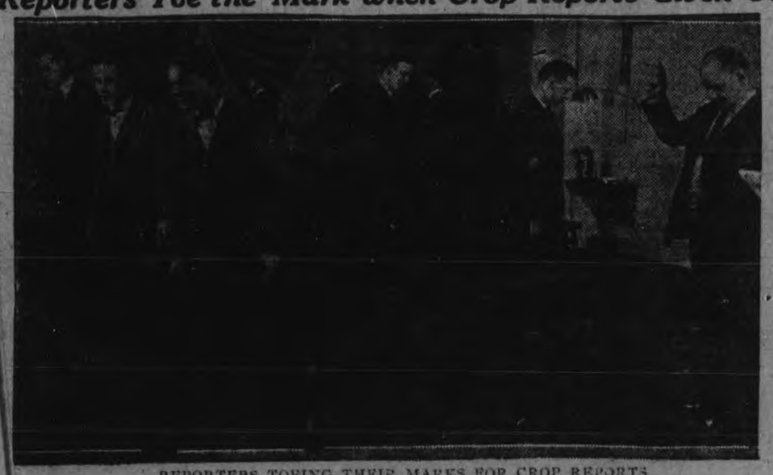
PRUNE GRAPE VINES.

Bearing grape vines must be pruned every year to get a profitable yield. This is done during February and March, while the vines are still dormant.

EARLY LAMBS BEST.

Lambs that come before March 15 are considered best payers. Given the right kind of food and care, these early lambs can be put on the market about weaning time weighing 70 to 80 pounds.

Reporters Toe the Mark when Crop Reports Given Out



REPORTERS TOEING THEIR MARKS FOR CROP REPORTS.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture guards its crop estimates with extreme vigilance. The reason is the knowledge of a new estimate, even one minute before it is officially announced, may mean thousands of dollars profit to an unscrupulous operator.

There government estimators give out their reports at the same time, and make news reporters toe the mark. The estimates are made up in a guarded room. A few minutes before the time of release, the reporters enter an adjoining room and take their places at designated lines.

The reports are brought in and placed on a table. At the proper time the signal is given and all snatch up the reports at the same time. They rush to the nearest telephone and call up their offices.

In this way, no one has undue advantage over any other.

MAJOR STARS BOAST ODD RECORD

A Decade or More in the Big Show, Each Has Worn the Uniform of One Club.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—Ten years of active play is considered about the average span of a player's career in the big leagues. Some, of course, exceed that stretch, but they are the exception rather than the rule.

In the majors today are 11 players who have not only seen at least a decade's service in the big time but have done all of their playing with one club. In other words, they are still with the same outfit on which they appeared when starting their major league careers.

Cobb King of All

One of these, of course, is Ty Cobb. The Georgian came to the Tigers in Aug., 1905. And for 20 straight seasons has worn the Detroit uniform. Obviously, his record is the best of the group.

Next in line is Walter Johnson. The pitching king has been with Washington since the summer of 1917. That's a run of 18 consecutive campaigns. Furthermore, Walter isn't apt to be seen in any other big league club's suit, either.

In 1909 Zack Wheat joined the Brooklyn team. And down through the years Wheat has remained with the Dodgers until he now not only holds the long service medal in the National League but the marathon residence honors as well.

Max Carey of Pittsburgh ranks fourth in the list. "Scoops" as he is more generally known, has been with the Pirates through 14 seasons. And he still appears good for several more.

Wilbur Cooper, Pittsburgh; Ray Schalk, White Sox, and George Dauss, of the Tigers, boast 13 seasons of service in the majors and a like number with their respective clubs.

Faber of White Sox

Then there is "Red" Faber, White Sox, with 11; closely followed by Heilmann, Detroit; Rice, Washington, and Sisler of the Browns with 10 apiece. Sisler has really only played nine season but has been with the club 10, eye trouble keeping him out of active competition in 1923.

Hence, Cobb, Johnson, Wheat, Carey, Cooper, Schalk, Dauss, Faber, Heilman, Rice and Sisler can lay claim to the long-distance residence rule. Each has been actively engaged on but one club since coming into the big leagues. And all for 10 years or more.

TOP TO BOTTOM: JOHNSON, WHEAT, RICE, FABER, SISLER.

TOP TO BOTTOM: COBB, HEILMANN COOPER, DAUSS, SCALK, CAREY.

STATES ON BALTIC NOT AGGRESSIVE

But in Case of Attack on One Would Unite For Defense.

REVAL, Esthonia, Feb. 21 (Associated Press.—Warm tribute to the tenacity, patrotism and "will to law and order" which inspired the Esthonian people to build a state in such a short time, Esthonia has had but four years of peace, was pair by M. Avenol, deputy general secretary of the League of Nations, who has just left Reval at the head of a special economic committee ,which visited Esthonia in behalf of the league.

M. Avenol also praised the methods that enabled Esthonia, without foreign credits or assistance, to put her financial house in established order and to pass through the serious crisis of 1923 unscathed Esthonia he said had adapted the old adage "Help thyself, then Providence will help Thee," into "Help thyself, then the great financiers of the world will also be willing to help."

An teresting glimpse of Esthonian aims and ideals is given in an interview with Karl Pusta, the foreign minister. "Having ourselves lived so long under the oppression of foreign rule, it has been easy for us to fall in with the principles laid down by the late President Wilson as to the minorities living in our country," the minister said "Of our own free will we have embodied in our constitution various safeguards for the minorities; they have even the right to speak their own languages in parliament, and German and Russian deputies already have availed themselves of this privilege "In spite of the 200 years we lived under this rule we never mixed with the Russians; their mentality was always foreign to ours We hope to be good neighbors with them, but our intimate family life we have reserved for the nations of our own race and culture, the Finnish, Latvian, Polish and we hope in time, the Lithuanian I firmly believe that a small nation like ours should unite with other smaller countries, not necessarily in a political sense, but in cultural and economic co-operation"

"Let me say" Mr Pusta declared In conclusion, "that none of the Baltic states has any aggressive policy in the back of her mind We are essentially a group working for peace. On the other hand, I feel sure that should any of the friendly Baltic states be attacked without provocation by some other power, the rest of us would join in her defence."

BOY MUSHER IN VAN DOG DERBY

Emile St. Goddard Favored to Win International Race at Quebec.

QUEBEC, February 21 (Special to The Examiner). — Emile St. Goddard, the boy musher, who won this year's Derby at Le Pas, Man., by maintaining his lead of yesterday in the second lap of the Eastern International Dog Sled Derby, run off here to-day, is thought to have practically clinched the great race, and is prime favourite for the victory, which, if he captures it, when taken in conjunction with his win at Le Pas, will gain him recognition as one of the leading mushers of the continent.

As there were many surprises in to-day's run, however, several teams leaping from obscurity to places among the leaders, he will probably be hotly pursued to-day.

Maintenance of the clip set in Thursday's lap began to have its effect yesterday.

St. Goddard's time he attributes to the mild weather, which is hard on his thick-coated huskies.

The scratching of five out of the 22 teams which started on Thursday showed yesterday morning that several drivers felt they could not keep up the pace.

All the towns were passed as fresh and fit as at the starting point yesterday morning, but four out of the first twelve to cross the finishing line were minus at least one dog, which had been taken out of harness lest it over-strained itself.

The other dogs, however, came in well.

The net gain of six places made by Sherrian, who advanced from eighth on Thursday to second yesterday and by Dupuis ninth Thursday to third yesterday, were exciting developments.

St. Goddard's victory and the high standing of Brydges and Rushick were not unexpected, as they were strong favourites at the start yesterday morning, owing to their previous showing and the apparent keenness of their teams.

Intense interest in the race continues, thousands of people lining the course at both start and finish, and the newspaper offices being besieged for news.

Camera men and reporters representing all parts of Canada and the United States were everywhere.

Among the many thrilling incidents was Chief of Police R. Trudell's temporary entanglement amid a mass of excited dogs at the start this morning. Only the Chief's sang froid saved him from being severely bitten.

PUBLIC SCHOOL HOCKEY IS WON BY QUEEN MARY

Championship Team Had Better Combination, Outskating King Edward.

SCORE 2 TO 1.

Solmes Saved Losers From Worse Defeat in a Great Game.

By defeating King Edward School 2 to 1 in 10 minutes overtime at Brock Street Arena this morning, Queen Mary School won the championship of the Public School league. The score is a worthy indication of the play; the teams were evenly matched. Queen Mary had the better combination and team play and their first goal was won when the puck was taken down on a combined rush with Donner Sowden and Crary on the attacking line. Jack Crary had the honor of netting both goals for his team, the winning one came with only 2 minutes left in the overtime period, when he placed a shot neatly in the corner of the nets. Charlie Sowden, White, Hall and Ted Dormer were the best for the winners.

Solmes between the posts for King Edward turned in a great exhibition he turned back a flood of shots and one of the two to beat him was from a melee in front of the nets. He was called upon to do Mickey Murray's stunt of falling on the rubber several times when the Queen Mary forwards swarmed too close. Bill Cripps was the fastest man on the ice, but the poor ice bothered his style. However, many of Queen Mary rushes were diverted by him and his rushing was always dangerous. Bill Austin was a persistent worker for the locers.

The first period opened with rushes and Cripps came close to scoring several times but the combination work of Queen Mary kept the puck mostly around Solmes. The second period was the fastest, each team scoring one counter. The third period saw King Edward weakening and Queen Mary pushed forward to the overtime. The teams were about even again, and it looked like another overtime, when Crary got his winning long shot in.

The rain did not keep the youngsters away, not did it dampen their spirits during the game, for the boards were lined with youthful supporters who yelled continuously.

Line-Ups

AT THE ROYAL

CANADIAN PREMIER AT ROYAL AND HIPPODROME, TORONTO, ON MONDAY NEXT.

PRISCILLA DEAN IN COLORFUL ROMANCE.

Noted Star is a Fascinating Dancing Girl in "A Cafe in Cairo."

Fiery Priscilla Dean comes to the Royal Theatre next Monday in her second Hunt Stromberg special production, "A Cafe in Cairo," a Producers' Distributing Corporation release. Advance reports state that this new picture is not only one of the most lavish rpoductions in which Miss Dean has ever anepared, but that it even exceeds "The Siren of Seville" from the point of action and dramatic interest.

"A Cafe in Cairo" is a picturization of the novel of the same name by Izola Forrester, author of "The White Moth," and the photoplay version is credited to Harvey Gates, who wrote "The Wildcat of Paris" and a number of other earlier Priscilla Dean triumphs. It is a colorful, exotic melodramatic romance of the land of Cleopatra, and it is said that the very atmosphere and mysticism of the Far East pervades its every scene.

As Naida, fascinating little Houri, who falls in love with a dashing young Aerican secret service operator, Miss Dean is given a role which exactly fits her unique screen personality. And into it she injects not only the tempestuous portrayal for which she is famous but also a heart appeal that she has heretofore not revealed.

Although "A Cafe in Cairo" is essentially a melodrama, it tells one of the most charming love stories that has graced the screen in many moons. Some of the thrills with which it abounds are the attack on the English caravan, the attempt to overthrow the British power in Cairo, the cafe and harem scenes and the fight at the House of Stars which terminates in a spine-tingling knife struggle underneath the water.

Appearing opposite Priscilla Dean is Robert Ellis, while other members of her suporting cast include Carl Stockdale, Harry Woods, Evelyn Selbie, Larry Steers, Ruth King, John Stepnling and Carmen Phillips. Chet Withey directed under the personal supervision of Hont Stromberg and Sol Polito is credited with the photography.

"HOOT" LEAVES TO-NIGHT.

"Hoot" Gibson, who has been making the large audiences at the Royal roar with laughter, leaves to-night. "The Sawdust Trail" is his best effort to date, and patrons who like the Western comedy type of production should avail themselves of this last opportunity to-night.

AT THE GRAND

BLACKSTONE SHOW IS EARLY BOOKING

Big Magic Aggregation Promises Many Illusions To Be Seen Here For First Time.

The Blackstone Show of Wonders is scheduled to open a 3-day engagement at the Grand, Thursday, Feb. 26, with a special matinee Saturday.

The Great Blackstone himself will head the organization which is the largest in point of paraphernalia and personnel in the world. Two baggage cars are required to transport the wealth of intricate and delicate equipment necessary to the proper presentation of Blackstone's many mystifying and opulent illusions. There are over a score of handsome young women and assistant conjurers aiding Blackstone in his necromatic endeavours.

For this first time in this city Blackstone will offer his latest creation "The Vanishing Horse." Seized by a band of hooded and robed figures the modern Cagliostro is hanged high in the air only to startle the beholders by appearing upon a charging Arabian stallion. In a trice horse and rider dash into a cabin nearby and in even less time the building blows up, leaving the rider in full view with bridle and saddle in hand while the horse has evaporated into the nebula. It is the most astounding illusion that has ever been staged, seems to be the general opinion of the press in the cities where Blackstone has exhibited his novel piece de resistance.

Blackstone has been playing the so-called legitimate theatres for the past two seasons, charging two dollars for the choice seats. As Messrs. Woolworth and Ford have demonstrated volume is the talisman of success, hence Blackstone is providing the same attraction in the theatres where lesser prices prevail but where the performances are more numerous. There will, therefore, be no advance in the regular scale of house prices or deviation from its fixed policy during the Blackstone stay.

AT THE REGENT

SHIRLEY MASON IS HER OWN DOUBLE IN A DANGEROUS WATER PLUNGE

"Now, Miss Mason, we'll get a double for you when we get ready to 'shoot' the scene where the two boats crash and you are thrown in the water, so don't worry about it," commented Director Maurice Elvey to Shirley Mason, but that was about as far as he got.

"If you don't mind, I prefer to do the entire scene myself for I have never resorted to a double. I am credited with being a very good swimmer and I am sure that a little splash in the water will not do me any harm."

"But Miss Mason, the water is beastly cold and as the collision is supposed to take place during a fog, it will be impossible to detect the substitution, so it will be perfectly all right."

Nothing more was said at the time, but when the shooting of the particular scene occurred Shirley Mason was right there from start to finish and Director Elvey is too experienced a megaphone wielder not to humor an important screen celebrity.

This is only one of the many instances in which Shirley Mason has risked her life in the making of pictures.

One of the best stories told on the Fox lot is the one in which Shirley doubled with herself.

In this particular picture there was a mine explosion and the heroine is supposed to save her life by making a flying leap from a scaffolding about to crumple to the ground.

The danger and flying leap necessitated not only someone with unlimited nerve, but one with professional athletic skill. It was believed that no "woman double" would be able to do the work so a professional gymnast made up to represent Miss Mason was engaged for this particular scene.

Everything happened as arranged, the explosion occurred, the flying leap was made and the scaffolding fell as per schedule, but the story did not come out until a few days later, a letter was received from the athlete making apologies for not being able to appear.

"Yes," said Miss Mason later, "when the time came to take the scene and my double didn't appear I decided to go right ahead. In fact, if he had showed up I believe I would have done the same. However, there is one thing that I am going to insist on and that is, I get the extra money intended for my double."

And she did.

It will be the attraction at the Regent Theatre beginning Monday.

BIG PICTURE COMEDY ON THE DARWINIAN THEORY IS COMING MONDAY TO REGENT

Did man descend from the monkey? Does this really explain many of the monkey-like traits man shows? Is the monkey smarter than man in many subjects wherein instinct is superior to knoweldge? Who can be the funnier, man or absurd things?

These and many other questions are raised by the unique photoplay feature, "Darwin Was Right," the latest William Fox screen hit which is billed as the attraction at the Regent Theatre next week. Raised in a spirit of fun and in the midst of irresistibly funny situations, they are said to be all the more impressive and this is heralded as one of the few out-and-out comedies to make people ponder a popular subject with seriousness afterwards.

AT THE CAPITOL

The Capitol Theatre has the popular Tom Mix for its week-end feature picture, appearing with his wonder horse, Tony, in "The Last of the Duanes." It is a real Mix picture, showing the hero in the various situations that delight the hearts of his devotees. Tony is as marvellous as ever, in the role of companion to the redoubtable Tom.

The millions who have read Zane Grey's thrilling novel, "The Last of the Duanes," will welcome its screen version, showing Tom Mix as Buck Duane, the son of a two-fisted fighting man, and himself compelled to fight for life against a band of enemies. Those who have not read the book should take this opportunity to get a true glimpse of Texas in the old days. "The Last of the Duanes," showing the passing of the last frontier, fits Mix like a glove, for Tom is the typical frontier type.

A series of thrilling incidents in this picture include a desperate battle by Tom against bandits, a kidnapping, the escape and the pursuit, in all of which Tom's horsemanship on the speedy, sure-footed Tony awaken fine enthusiasm.

There is an entertaining programme of short reels with the big feature, including Topics of the Day, Aesop's Fables, the Animated Newspaper reel and a rollicking 'Sea Dogs' comedy.

"A SAINTED DEVIL," STARRING RUDOLPH VALENTINO, COMING.

After "Monsieur Beaucaire," Rudolph Valentino's role in his latest Paramount picture, "A Sainted Devil," coming to the Capitol Theatre on Monday, is a decided change, and brings the popular star to the screen in that type of role which made him famous in "Blood and Sand" and the others.

"A Sainted Devil" is a fine romantic tale of South America, an adaptation of Rex Beach's story, "Rope's End." It is a Joseph Henabery production. Henabery, it will be remembered, produced "The Stranger."

Nita Naldi, Helen D'Algy, Louise Lagrange, Dagmar Godowsky, Geo. Siegman, Raphael Bongoni and Jean Del Val are but a few of the well-known players who appear in the strong supporting cast.

Here's a picture said to be even better than "Monsieur Beaucaire." And that is praise, indeed.

TRUTH VERSUS ERROR.
Does the preaching of the false doctrine of endless torment deter men and women from wrong doing? We unhesitatingly answer "No." History and present every-day experience corroborate the truthfulness of our reply. If it were possible that erroneous teaching would bring the good results desired, it would be doing evil that good may come. No righteous person would be found doing that. We will put it as the Irishman of Otonabee put it so as not to be too irritating. He was disputing with the minister. The minister said: "Would you call me a liar?" He said "No, I would not call you a liar, but if I said what you said, I would be a liar." We are compelled to believe that many who preach and teach this false doctrine do not believe it, notwithstanding all their protestations to the contrary, for actions speak louder than words. For instance, the heartless, flippant, careless utterance given out concerning this blasphemous dogma go to prove this true. These actions also have a tendency to make the rank and file lose confidence in them and their message. The real followers of Jesus can speak with authority; saying: "We speak of that which we do know and testify of that which we have experienced."—M. T. Butcher. 1d45 9058

FIRE DEPARTMENT DANCE SUCCESSFUL

Energetic Committee Made Arrangements Complete—Big Attendance.

The third annual dance of the Peterborough Fire Department was held in the G.W.V.A. Hall last evening, and proved to be a great success. There were about two hundred people in attendance and everyone had a thoroughly good time.

All arrangements were carried out in excellent style by the energetic committee in charge, with fine music and a very appetising lunch provided for the guests.

Mayor J. J. Turner was honorary chairman and Ald. R. N. Jones, who danced every dance, was honorary vice-chairman.

The committee in charge of arrangements was composed of H. Meehan, chairman; A. Mason, secretary-treasurer; and Messrs. O. Wilson, G. Smith, J. Ward, and J. MacFarlane.

The hall was decorated with large Chinese lanterns and wall streamers, and music was provided by Follis' four-piece orchestra.

Caterers for the lunch were Mr. and Mrs. S. Whatley.

A few tables of cards were enjoyed by non-dancers, and during the evening, J. Montgomery gave a couple of well-received step dances.

The committee in charge of the Firemen's dance express themselves as being very grateful for the hearty support received from the merchants and manufacturers and citizens generally.

GHASTLY HAND OF STARVATION SEEN IN ALL RUSSIA

Spurred on by Hunger Despairing Peasants Have Started New Migrations.

CROPS A FAILURE.

Astrakhan Reports That Its Food Supply is Very Nearly Exhausted.

BERLIN, Feb. 21 (United Press).—With the country's grain crop a virtual failure, the ghastly hand of starvation is once more stretching over Russia, according to reliable advices from Moscow.

Spurred on by hunger, despairing peasants have started new migrations for regions where food is more plentiful.

Only a Week's Food.

The German colony on the Lower Volga disquietingly reports that only 35 per cent. of the needed grain imports have been received. Samara and vicinity is likewise afflicted, while Astrakhan reports that its food supply will be exhausted in a week unless it is augmented. Fodder is incredibly scarce and peasants are taking straw from thatched roofs with which to feed cattle.

Peasants Migrating.

Peasants are migrating from the government of Peusa to Siberia and the Caucasus in large numbers, and about 200 children are reported wandering aimlessly in that section with little food and no protection. The coal region of Donetz, where there are also some agricultural activities, is a heavy sufferer, the despatches say.

Peasants charge that the government understimated the summer shortages. The transportation problem has been made most difficult through a winter-long shortage of snow. The government has relaxed private grain trade regulations.

Society

Yesterday afternoon, Mrs. George W. Green (nee Mildred Elliott, of Stirling), held her post-nuptial reception at her home, 528 Gilmour St. There was a large attendance of nearly two hundred ladies during the afternoon. Mrs. Green, who was assisted in receiving by her mother, Mrs. R. A. Elliot, of Stirling, and by Mrs. Charles McClelland, wore her bridal gown of white crepe de chine, with silver bandeau in her hair, and silver shoes. She carried a large arm bouquet of yellow daffodils and mauve sweet peas. Mrs. Elliott wore black lace and Mrs. McClelland grey crepe de chine, trimmed with beads. The general color scheme of mauve and yellow was carried out in the decorations of the room, the tea room being a bright blaze of color, with its table centred by a huge silver basket of yellow daffodils and mauve sweet peas, tied with mauve fulle, and yellow candles in silver holders. Tea was poured by Mrs. George Evans and Mrs. Stanley Cooper cut the ices. Tea room assistant were Mrs. Green's two bridesmaids, her sister, Miss Hazel Elliott, of Toronto, and Miss Gladys Green, in their bridesmaids' frocks of green crepe de chine, trimmed with silver lace and grey squirrel fur, and wearing silver shoes, also Mrs. Weldon Fanning, Mrs. Gerald McClelland, Mrs. Fraser Skinner, and Miss Lillian Green. The guests were ushered into the tea room by Mrs. Geo. H. King, and little Ruth Martin, of Stirling, in a yellow organdie frock and yellow bandeau, made a charming little door attendant.

The friends of Mrs. John Barclay, who lives at the Ontario Hospital, Cobourg, will regret to learn, according to word received from there yesterday by Mr. George Powell, that she fell and fractured her right hip. Mrs. Barclay is of advancedy age, and the accident is looked upon as of a serious nature.

Mrs. G. White and the Misses Margaret and Anne McCabe attended the funeral in Fenelon Falls recently of their cousin, Miss Minnie Bellingham, who for some years was connected with the Canadian National Railways in Toronto, and who died of pneumonia at St. Joseph's Hospital, Sunnyside, on 6th February. Miss Bellingham, who had a large circle of friends in Toronto, was also well known in Peterborough, where many will regret to learn of her untimely death.

MINSTREL SHOW

There was plenty of amusement for patrons last evening of the Dixie Boys' Minstrel show, given under the auspices of the Holy Name Society of the Immaculate Conception Church, in St. Alphonsus' Lyceum. Directed by Ed. Leonard, with Rev. J. Power as patron and including in its personnel the best of the singers of the East city parish, the show proved a decided success. The amateur performers excelled themselves in the quality of their work and were a real credit to their parish and to the careful work of their director. With song and dance and merry quip, they whiled away a jolly two hours for the audience of nearly four hunded people, who enjoyed every minute of the entertainment and applauded the various efforts with real enthusiasm. Much of the success of the evening was due to the work of Hugh Lush, whose carrying out of the role of interlocutor was immense, and added real snap to the proceedings, also to the solo work and dance and monologue of three of the best known of Peterboro's minstrel entertainers: George Wesley, Frank Clark and Dave Quinlan, George Wesley was the occasion of much mirth in his black face "end man" characterization and got rounds of applause for his serious monologue; Frank Clark's banjo playing was a high light in the evening programme, and Dave Quindan's stepping was the occasion for epeated applause, and was done in the best manner of this well-known dancer.

The soloists of the evening formed a central circle and the six end men, in black face, with tiny skewjee hats and suits of brilliant red and green adornments, were Messrs. Ed. Leonard, George Wesley, Dave Quinlan, Frank Clark, James Sullivan and Jack Sullivan.

To an enthusiastic house which greeted every number with an encore, and laughed heartily at the merry wheezes of the end men, the following solos were given in excellent voice, the vocal support of the chorus being exceptionally good and evidencing careful training: "Call Me Back, Pal o' Mine," by Urban Brady, "Sally," by John Holland, "The Pal That I Loved Stole the Gal That I Loved' by Maurice Leonard, "The World is Waiting for the Sunrise," by Joseph Minicolo, "Dreaming of You," by Emil Leonard, "An Old-fashioned Town," by Joseph Clancy, "Those Hoosier Blues," by George Wesley, and "Going South," by Ed. Leonard, with a chorus that included some dance steps by E. Leonard, G. Wesley, and D. Quinlan.

In this section of the programme the soft shoe dance by Geo. Wesley and Dave Quinlan was heartily applauded, and Frank Clark played some old-time banjo selections in a manner that brought him repeated encores.

In the olio, H. Lush gave a half-dozen of lightning crayon sketches in clever style that won him the interested attention of a pleased house, showing the metamorphosis of the youth into the old man, the "coon" that evolves himself upside down, and the shamrock that transforms itself into a true son of the old sod.

The Ukulele Four followed, composed of H. Vinette, C. Downer, A. McCormack and A. Smith, a quartette of youths singing "Say it with a Ukulele" and "It Aint Goin' to Rain no More" with ukulele accompanment. E. Leonard sang "Asleep in the Deep" in fine voice, and did a brief shuffle, and George Wesley gave one of his inimitable monologues in a fashion that brought him uproarious applause. Frank Clark, resplendent in red and green suit and hat, sang "The Watermelon Growin 'on the Vine," with banjo accompaniment, making a real hit, and also accompanied the buck and wing dance of Dave Quinlan, in that performer's well known excellent style. J. Minicolo gave a cornet solo, "The End of a Perfect Day" that was much enjoyed, M. Leonard sang "The Dreams I Dream of You," and James Sulilvan did some fancy stepping. A final chorus, "Doodle-doo-do," was followed by E. Leonard's singing of "I'm Bringing Home the Bacon," and some fancy steps by E. Leonard, D. Quinlan, F. Clark, George Wesley, James and Dick Sullivan and Bill Walsh, done in a manner that demonstrated to a pleased house the clever footwork of the performers. Seldom does a show of this sort possess so much unexploited talent, and last night's entertainment was a revelation of what can be done with careful training and good team work.

Another outstanding feature of the programme was the fine music supplied by the orchestra, led by A. Weatherhead at the piano, Mr. Weatherhead also contributing accompaniments for the various solos of the evening. The orchestra was composed of Messrs. J. Minicola and Wm. Moher, cornets; P. O'Toole, Chas. Nicholls and H. Vinette, violins, Mr. Vinette also playing the banjo; Joseph Kearns, saxaphone, and Alex. McCormack, drums.

The chorus of sunflower beauties was composed of James Brooks, Billy Walsh, Dick Sullivan, Wm. Crowe, Howard Ralph, James Mongraw, Leo Walsh, M. Clancy, Jack Madden, Tom Kelly, M. Meade, Cecil Perdue and Martin Guerin.

Impressive ushers, in blackface, with long black swallowtail coats and kinky polls, were F. McMahon and F. Holland.

IN MEMORIAM
FLYNT—In loving memory of my dear Mother, Ellen Flynt, who passed away February 22, 1923.

Two years have passed since that sad day
The one we loved was called away.
As time rolls on I miss her more,
Her loving smile, her cheerful face;
No one can fill her vacant place.
Her memory is as dear today
As in the hour she passed away.
Asleep in Jesus, far from
Thy kindred and their graves may be,
But thine is still a blessed sleep
From which none ever wakes to weep.

200 CHILDREN MADE ORPHANS BY INDIANA COAL MINE EXPLOSION

Twenty-One Bodies Recovered Up to Sunday Morning —Thirty Miners Missing.

ALL PROBABLY DEAD

Most of Bodies Recovered Are Identified—Difficulties Delay Rescuers.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Feb. 23.—Twenty-one bodies had been recovered Sunday morning from the interior of the City Coal Company's mine at Sullivan, which was wrecked by a terrific gas and dust explosion Friday.

A check-up has shown that there were fifty-one men in that portion of the mine affected by the explosion and thirty bodies are still unrecovered. Rescue teams declare there can be no life below the ground.

Most of the bodies recovered have been identified. Among those recovered was that of Harry Anderson, pit boss, whose head had been blown off. After starting to leave the mine he was going back to investigate the "roof squeeze," which is believed to have been responsible for the blast. Rescue workers say he must have been in the centre of the explosion area.

More "Squeezes" Encountered.

Rescue teams battled throughout the day to recover the bodies of the dead. In addition to battling with poisonous gases, they encountered numerous "squeezes," which have almost closed the entries leading back to the workings where the miners were caught in the explosion. The "squeezes" have been gradually forcing the roof and bottom of the entries together, threatening to close them altogether and perhaps seal the dead men up as in a tomb.

At one time the rescue workers, baffled by the closing up of the entries, began to fear that the miners might suffer the fate of Floyd Collins in his Kentucky cave and that their temporary tomb would become their last resting place. Later, however, the rescuers began to have more success in penetrating the workings and became hopeful that all the bodies would be recovered.

200 Children Are Made Orphans.

Approximately 200 children have been made orphans by the disaster, for most of the men who died in the mine were married. Practically all of them were Americans who had been reared in the community in which the disaster took place.

The citizens of Sullivan held a mass meeting to devise means of caring for the women and children left destitute. The Red Cross is rendering all the assistance it can.

Under the State Workmen's Compensation law the families will be partly provided for. The dependents left by each victim will receive $13.20 a week for a total of 300 weeks.

Groups of women and children waited about the roped-off area at the mouth of the shaft. Rescue workers and neighbors kept assuring them that the husbands and fathers would be reached soon and that some of them, at least, would be brought out alive. But the widows and orphans knew. They pretended to hope, but their only hope was that the bodies would be brought out.

Also the civic and social organizations of the city turned themselves into relief organizations, giving aid wherever it was needed and comforting the families of the victims as best as they could.

The mouth of the shaft continued to emit deadly fumes but fortunately the mine did not take fire after the explosion. As they penetrated into the workings the rescue teams re-established the demolished air courses, so that they could push on with safety.

"Danny" McGarry Rescue Hero.

Below still toiled "Danny" McGarry, a Scotch-Irishman, who had gone into the mine to lead the rescuers on his arrival with the first-aid team from Bicknell, Ind. Danny went without a wink of sleep Friday night, directing the efforts of the other men and bending every effort to get into the wrecked rooms and entries. Time and again he was urged to go out and get rest, but he refused.

His face black with grime, his shoes and clothing torn to tatters, "Danny" McGarry carried on, coffee and dirty sandwiches his only food, as he captained the little army that braved gases and fallen rock.

It is an unwritten law among miners that in case of a disaster, near-by work must cease while they render what assistance they can. Many of the mines in near-by fields were idle Saturday, as the men swarmed to Sullivan to proffer assistance.

The disaster emphasizes the need of stricter State laws governing the operation of Indiana mines, declared John Hessier, president of District No. 11, United Mine Workers of America, in a statement issued after he had visited the scene of the explosion. For a miner to go down into a mine that did not have a safety exit or manway was suicidal, he asserted; yet some of the mines in the State operated without this safeguard.

"Had there been no escape shaft at the Sullivan mine," he said, "the toll of dead would have been far greater. Is this the answer to the House of Representatives at Indianapolis in adopting a committee report that permits operators and owners of commercial mines to produce coal without providing the mine with a second outlet of escape?"

Mr. Hessler stated that the Terre Haute unions would co-operate with the union at Sullivan in providing what relief they could for the stricken families.

EAST LIVERPOOL, Ohio, Feb. 23.— Damage of $1,000,000 was caused by fire which early Friday destroyed three buildings, damaged thirteen others and threatened to wipe out the downtown section. Three spectators were injured by flying glass. State officials have been requested to investigate.

SURE GERMANY HAS DEFAULTED

And Allied War Commission's Note Might Be Termed an Indictment.

REMAIN IN COLOGNE.

LONDON, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—Notification of the conclusions of the Allied War Commission headed by Marshal Foch, concerning Germany's state of disarmament will probably take the form of a note to Germany, which might be termed an indictment, pointing out where Germany has defaulted in certain respects, it is declared in official circles.

Breach of Treaty

When Marshal Foch's commission finishes with the report of the military control commission on this subject, its conclusion will be passed on for action by the council of ambassadors and the allied governments. According to this forecast, the governments will send a note to Berlin, setting forth instances in which Germany is deemed not to have complied with the treaty of Versailles.

Until there is compliance by Germany, it is declared, there will be no discussion with her concerning the evacuation of the Cologne area.

BIG DEFICIT FOR EMPIRE EXHIBT

Expenditures Were $19,500,000 Compared With Total Receipts of $10,500,000.

LONDON, Feb. 23. — (Canadian Press).—The financial results of the 1924 British Empire Exhibtion are outlined in an official memorandum just issued, showing that at the close of the Exhibition last year, expenditures stood at £3,900,000, compared with receipts of £2,100,000.

Lloyd's Bank advanced to the Exhibition authorities £1,600,000, while there is also a liability of £150,000 for the balance of entertainments' duty on admission to the Exhibition.

NEW 7-STEP DANCE IN PARIS IS TALKED ABOUT TO OUST JAZZ

PARIS, Feb. 23.—To the Spanish melody of "Ay, Ay, Ay," made popular by Raquel Meller, Parisians are learning the latest dance, which, it is promised will be the future victor over American jazz.

It is called "La Raquette," and it is the invention of the famous Professor Orbert, who, with Mlle. Mistinguett, imported the Argentine tango to Europe before the war.

It is described as a seven-step rhythmic dance and is very graceful.

It is expected to meet the approval of the public which, it is stated, is tiring of jazz and looking for something new.

TWO MOURN FOR FIANCES.

SULLIVAN, Ind., Feb. 23.—The funeral dirge will replace the wedding march in the ears of two young women of this city who were to have been married to two young miners who lost their lives in the explosion in the City Coal Company mine.

Miss Dora Bradley was to have been married at Easter time to Claude Saunders, while Miss Margaret Bishop was engaged to Cecil Garty, a former Purdue student, who left his studies to earn money with which to start housekeeping.

N.Y.C. EXPRESS DERAILED.

Side-Swiped by Buckled Freight on Parallel Track.

CANASOTA, N.Y., Feb. 23.—The Beaver, the New York Central east-bound fast express was derailed here early Sunday morning when a west-bound freight buckled as the two were passing and one of the freight cars struck the side of a passenger coach. Only the locomotive of the passenger train remained on the rails, the cars being left zig-zagzagging across the track, but none overturned. Nobody was seriously injured.

FRANKFORD MAN FATALLY SHOT

Gun Discharged as He Leaned on it—Had Been Hunting Rabbits.

LEAVES FAMILY.

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 23. —The funeral took place under masonic auspices yesterday of Herbert Foster of Frankford, who died as the result of the accidental discharge of his shot-gun while he was hunting rabbits on Thursday. Mr. Foster was with a party of friends from Frankford, but none of them saw the accident occur. It is thought that he was resting the butt of the gun on the other with his hands over the muzzle, as one thumb was shot off and the other nearly severed. The charges passed up his nostrils and into his brain. He was still breathing when brought home, but died shortly after arrival of a doctor.

Coroner Dr. Crowe of Trenton held an inquest immediately, and a verdict of accidental death was returned.

The late, Mr Foster, was a well-known hardware merchant in Frankford, where he had lived all his life. There are left to mourn his loss, his widow and five children, Reginald at Belleville and the remaining four at home.

Even Kings Must Obey His Majesty Learning

LONDON, Feb. 23.—(United Press). — The Evening News reports an interesting incident in connection with King George's illness:

His Majesty awoke much revived to-day, the newspaper says, and after breakfasting asked for a cigar. The doctors forbade smoking, however, and the Royal patient said ruefully, "Well, even kings must learn to obey."

KLAN'S FOUNDER NEAR TO DEATH IN AUTO CRASH

"Colonel" William Joseph Simmons Gravely Injured and May Not Recover.

FORMER "EMPEROR"

Capt. M. A. Moore, His Companion, Instantly Killed—Another Unhurt.

GAINESVILLE, Ga., Feb. 23.—"Colonel" William Joseph Simmons of Atlanta, Supreme Monarch of the Knights of the Flaming Sword, and founder and former Emperor of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, is in the Gainesville Hospital in a dying condition, as the result of an automobile accident Friday evening on the highway north of Gainesville.

Colonel Simmons suffered fractured collar bones, four broken ribs on the left side and a punctured left lung.

Captain M. A. Moore of Houston, Texas, Supreme Recording Knight of the Flaming Sword, who was in the car with Colonel Simmons, suffered a broken neck. He died at 6 o'clock Saturday night, never regaining consciousness.

Ray Ranier of Atlanta, the third occupant of the car, escaped without being injured. The accident occurred on the highway between Clarmont and Cleveland. The road has been recently scraped, and when the automobile in which the men were driving struck a low place filled with soft earth, the car skidded over an embankment and overturned, pinning the occupants under it. Mr. Ranier extricated himself and called for aid. An ambulance was rushed from Gainesville and the two injured men were placed in the Gainesville Hospital.

Colonel Simmons, Captain Moore and Mr. Ranier were on their way to the Nacoochee Valley farm of Colonel Simmons, where the party were to spend the week end. It is said that Moore had come to hold a conference with Simmons on matters pertaining to the expansion of the Knights of the Flaming Sword.

Long Career as a Leader.

Colonel William Joseph Simmons founder and former Imperial Wizard of the modern Ku Klux Klan, recently had been touring the South in an effort to increase the membership of his new secret organization, "Knights of the Flaming Sword of the Hidden Host." How far Simmons had succeeded in proselyting for the Klan, which he founded and fathered for a long time, has not been disclosed.

Simmons broadcast the literature or propaganda of the rival organization of the Klan from his headquarters in Atlanta, Ga. The pamphlets of the "Knights" were circulated among some of the members of the Congress as well as other public and private individuals. That prospectus of the order declared its objects to be "preservatino of the purity of the white race" and maintenance of the "Protestant faith of the Christian religion." Simmons founded the new order on a "doctrine of love" as opposed to a "doctrine of hate," which, he said, had guided the course of the Klan.

Simmons led the movement, which resulted in the organization of the new Ku Klux Klan on Oct. 26, 1915, in Atlanta. Skilled at exhortation by his long experience as a circuit rider ,or itinerant Methodist preacher, Simmons easily took the lead in the Klan movement.

After having served as a minister Simmons became a professor of Southern history at Lanier University, a small, newly organized institution in Atlanta. At another period of his life he was a solicitor of members of the Woodmen of the World.

215,343 IN BRITISH ARMY

Emigration Causes a Slump in Enlistments, Says Report.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—The annual report of the British Army for the year ended September 30 last gives the total strength of the regular army, all ranks, as 215,343, with territorial reserve forces as 447,089.

Enlistments and re-enlistments during the year totalled 30,000, or 878 yess than for the previous year. Emigration to the Dominions is said to have proved a serious counter-attraction to army life, and many recruits have been lost in consequence.

Happiness has to be cranked, while trouble has a self-starter.

ELECTION TALK CHIEF TOPIC IN FEDERAL HOUSE

Capital Lobbies Discussing Possibilities of Government Appealing This Year.

MAY BE IN FALL

Results of Western Provincial Elections May Be Influencing Factor.

OTTAWA, Feb. 23. — Judged by relative volume of outside discussion the possibility of a general election this year excites an interest superior to anything that is going on in the House itself.

The session has been going on for two weeks now and never in a corresponding period has there been so slight a display of the essence of ginger. The debate on the address collapsed in the middle and had to be revived by indifferent consent. The estimates put through meanwhile have caused the Minister of Agriculture to be heckled a bit but even this performance has not been up to the mark. Ordinarily the Progressives are the most loquacious of all the groups. If the orthodox among them were ever inclined to silence the more advanced group have always been eager to jump into the breach and start something. For some reason this year they are all comparatively silent. The explanation given is that htey want to get down to and get on with business, a purpose which heretofore they have not displayed with any conspicuous force.

In the caucus rooms and lobbies where the members are wont to congregate, the foremost question of discussion is an election. There is no certainty of one being held this year but whether or not it comes off, prepartions are being made for the ultimate event. In several Ontario constituencies, for example, the Liberal candidates are being put in the field where the sitting members are Conservatives and Duncan Marshall, the organizer, speaking up in Lambton, the other day, predicted an early contest and counselled the faithful to get ready.

While conceivably he was only peaching the principle of preparedness it is to be noted that Mr. Marshall on the eve of giving this salutory warning was here conferring with every one high up. The theory of inside inspiration obtains.

Are Nursing Ambitions.

There are some hampering influences at work. Every government supporter who faces a hard fight is against an election and the average member on all sides is not eager to reliquish a year's indemnity and constitutionally it is not necessary. Some likewise are nursing ambitions for appointment to offices that are not yet vacant and they are adverse to a prematdre dissolution. They recognise, however, that their counsel will count for little if the government thinks its chances would be better this year than next. Perhaps the most uncertain thing in the whole situation is the fact that in June or thereabouts Provicial elections are to be held in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and possibly in Saskatchewan. In all these provinces Lib-

C.P.R. PAYS PART OF C.N.R. DEFICIT IN FEDERAL TAX

Largest Taxpayer in Canada Contributes Most to Coffers of Its Competitor.

NEW YORK ADDRESS

E. W. Beatty Traces History of C.P.R.—Was Originally a Government Railway.

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—The deficits incurred through Government operation of railroads in Canada can be made good only by taxation, according to Edward W. Beatty, President and chairman of the Canadian Pacific Railway, who described to members of the New York Traffic Club at a dinner at the Hotel Commodore Saturday night, heroic measures adopted to save the railway systems of the Dominion.

"As it happens," explains Mr. Beatty, "the Canadian Pacific, by reason of its magnitude and success, is the largest taxpayer in the country, As such it is in the anomalous position of being the largest contributor to the coffers of its competitors and loses in taxation much of what it gains by service.

"It used to be said that the sins of the fathers are visited upon the children but in the Canadian railway world it seems to me that the children have also to suffer from the sins of the cousins and aunts quite apart from the penance due to the temporary fall from the grace of your country under the inspiration of Mr. W. B. McAdoo."

Trace's Road's History.

Mr. Beatty went into the history of the Canadian Pacific, which, he said was a Government enterprise until 1881. Scandals resulting i.. an investigation marked its building, and the investigation resulted in the Government's decision to turn the railroad over to private enterprise. The syndicate which took it off the Government's hands included the late James J. Hill, who, according to Mr. eBatty, withdrew in about a year "to become one of the company's most formidable competitors in the United States.

"Just to show, however, that reciprocity which did not exist in commodities did exist in men," said Mr. Beatty, "Canada gave to the United States James J. Hill in exchange for two subsequently famous American-Canadians, Sir William Van Horne and Lord Shaughnessy. Van Horne came from Illinois and Shaughnessy from Milwaukee. Both were honored by their sovereign for conspicuous services.

Under those men and their associates the Canadian Pacific developed, according to Mr. Beatty, until it became "Canada's greatest transportation achievement." The speaker described as "in some respects Canada's greatest railway tragedy" the failure of the Canadian Northern System, which he said was due in part to the war. He pointed out, however, that the difficulties of the Canadian Northern and the Grand Trunk Systems also were due to the fact that their promoters tried to develop them into transcontinental lines.

"If, instead of turning its prairie lines into a portion of a transcontinental system," Mr. Beatty continued, "the owners had been content to make their termini the mountains on the west and the Great Lakes on the east, they would have been the wealthiest men in Canada, and Canada would probably not today be facing the railway burden it is now compelled to bear.

Controls Many Enterprises.

At the end of forty years the Canadian Pacific, according to its head, owns or controls 20,000 miles of railway and its interests also cover a multitude of other enterprises, described by Mr. Beatty as follows:

"It is the possessor of fleets on both oceans and it does business in every civilized quarter of the globe. More than any other company it touches the lives of Canadians and Canadian industry and its credit is generally regarded as the yardstick of the credit of Canada. By reason of the fact that it was a pioneer line it of necessity dipped deeper into outside activities than is necessary or permissible in a ordinary transportation unit and so it finds itself in possession of a telegraph system, coal mines, agricultural lands, townsites, golf courses, mills, hotels, mines and smelters.

"It even owns a moving picture company, and it sells aerated waters. The total tonnage of its fleet is slightly under 500,000 tons and the cruises of its vessels bring its flag at some time of the year into every large port in the world.

"Much more transportation history will be written in respect of Canada. The difficulties which the Canadian Pacific had to face in the early days from 1881 to 1897 were perhaps just as formidable as the obstacles we have to face in 1925, and with all due modesty I beg to say that the Canadians of today have just as much virility, courage and enterprise as the Canadians of thirty and forty years ago. So long as we are free to carry on our work unhampered on the sound business principles of private enterprise which enabled us to rise to strength and prosperity before, so long will we face undaunted the direct and indirect burdens placed upon our shoulders by the great war.

"We in Canada suffer as you do from the presence in the country of men of extremely divergent views upon this and other subjects. We suffer, as you do, from an excess of politics, but Canadians are, in the main, considering national problems with cool judgment and without hysteria, and this is the attitude of most of the business communities of Canada toward this particular problem, if I am able to accurately gauge it."

KING'S DOCTORS PRESCRIBE TRIP TO SUNNY CLIME

His Majesty Must Avoid Relapse of Bronchial Illness in England's Rigors.

SUNDAY BULLETIN

Yacht Cruise on Mediterranean Advised by Three Physicians in Report.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—(Canadian Press).—King George of England must, on recovery from his present illness betake himself out of the rigorous English climate as a precaution against the possibility of a second attack of influenza, which is very prevalent in England at the present time.

So the King's physicians, Lord Dawson, Sir Milton Rees, and Sir Frederick Stanley Hewett, have ruled. The three physicians paid their customary morning and evening visits to the Palace Sunday and after a rather long consultation issued a bulletin at 8 o'clock last night revealing for the first time how very severe the bronchial attack had been, and why the recovery was so slow.

The physicians have advised the King to spend the remainder of the Winter in a yachting cruise in the Mediterranean and it is not questioned that their advice will be followed.

The official bulletin reads:

"The King passed a fair day. There is still a rise of temperature in the evening, but the slow progress continues.

"At its onset, the influenza, which attacked His Majesty, was somewhat severe, the bronchitis extending to the base of the lungs—a form of malady which is apt to be tedious and resistant.

"In order to secure complete restoration of health and fitness we advise when the stage of convalescence has been reached, that His Majesty shall proceed to the South of Europe and cruise in his yacht for a few weeks.

(signed)
"Hewett.
"Rees.
"Dawson."

Presumably, in view of this decision the Royal Duties will devolve on Prince Henry as the Duke of York is in Africa, and there is no suggestion of any change in the plans of the Prince of Wales.

LONDON, Feb. 23. — (Canadian Press). — Although it is known through the medical bulletins issued from Buckingham Palace that King George's condition is not serious as a result of his attack of bronchitis, the fact that his physicians have ordered him to the Mediterranean for the remainder of the winter has caused quite a stir, of which the newspapers take full advantage for front page displays.

His Majesty's health is ordinarily so good and his foreign visits so infrequent that his going abroad is treated as an important event.

It is understood he will make the trip south aboard the Royal steam yacht Victoria and Albert, a ship of 47,000 tons. The yacht is already being placed in readiness at Portsmouth for the voyage. Queen Mary will probably not accompany the King on the yacht, as she is a bad sailor, and dislikes being at sea except in fine weather.

STEER CLEAR OF 13TH.

No Wedding Bells Rang Out on Dangerous Friday.

TORONTO, February 23 (Canadian Press). — Friday the 13th was too much for prospective brides to tackle. Instead of the average number of 13 marriages per day, on the 13th, no wedding bells sounded, and not one nervous groom signed the register.

ADD YEARS TO LIFE.

Dr. Charles J. Hastings Advocates Physical Examination Every Year.

Dr. Charles J. Hastings, medical officer of health, Toronto, in a brief article advocating "A complete physical examination by your family physician on your birthday," says that by doing this, a period anywhere from five to twenty-five years may be added to one's life.

"A complete physical examination demonstrates the frequency and seriousness of the chronic diseases of the heart, kidneys, arteries, liver and other organs, the existence of which is frequently not even suspected.

"These wasting diseases of middle life unfortunately come on insidiously, and the only way by which they can be detected and their disastrous results controlled, is by a complete physical examination, which you should have made by your family physician at least once a year."

GREAT IMPETUS TO RAISING OF CATTLE

Former Minister of Agriculture in Alberta Lauds Peterson Contract.

MONTREAL, Feb. 23—(Canadian Press). — The establishment of a Government subsidized transatlantic service, as proposed in the Peterson contract now before Parliament, will reduce ocean carrying charges by $5 to $8 per head on cattle, in the opinion of Duncan Marshall, former Minister of Agriculture in Alberta, who told the Reform Club here on Saturday night such an achievement would be the biggest impetus ever given the Canadian cattle raising industry.

The trouble with a man's love is that it blooms for one season. But a woman's is like the evergreen.

BIG SHIPMENT OF HARDWARE TO WEST

Fergus Firm Ships Special Trainload of Farm Pumps and Ladders.

FERGUS, Ont., Feb. 23.—(Special to The Examiner.)—The largest shipment of hardware ever made in Canada left the plant of Beatty Brothers, Fergus, on Saturday afternoon in a special Canadian Pacific train of 24 cars and was composed of more than 2,000 iron farm pumps, 1,000 step and extension ladders and 1,000 electric and hand washing machines and barn equipment for spring delivery to 700 dealers throughout Western Canada, the invoice price of the shipment being more than $150,000. The train was in charge of Mr. R. McKillop, Supt. of the Bruce division, accompanied by Mr. Marsh Brown, district freight agent of the C.P.R.

Better conditions and development in the west, the trend toward dairy and mixed farming particularly in Manitoba and Alberta, economy in construction and because they design all their own implements and products with a view to simplicity were reasons given by Mr. M. J. Beatty, secretary of the company for this huge shipment, the sales of the company having increased 30 per cent. over last year.

WILLIAM MOORE WEST.

HASTINGS, Feb. 23.—The funeral of Mr. William Moore West was held from his residence, the body being taken to Ottawa, where interment took place.

Deceased was born in Eversely, England, in 1849. His early school days were spent in Marlborough. At the age of twelve years he served as an apprentice in the British Navy on the training ship Britania and worked his way up to be First Lieutenant. He saw service with a detachment in the Ashantic war and was wounded.

Forty-seven years ago he came to Canada, and for some time settled in London, Canada. Here he entered the services of the Dominion Government as a civil engineer. For some time he was stationed at Trent River, and moved to Hastings a short time before work through here commenced on the Trent Canal, and superintended operations in his line of work during the construction of same.

A few years ago deceased retired from his work as an engineer and spent the remainder of his life at his home on the banks of the Trent River here in Hastings.

ELECTION TALK CHIEF TOPIC

eral governments are in power. In one of them the government has been so long in office that it is now threatened with hardening of the arteries. If these provinces should be held it would be conducive to a Federal election. If they are lost, the influence will be the other way. Whatever the outcome of these provincial contests, the reflex action on the Dominion situation will be very strong.

Conservatives are going on the presumption that this year there will be dissolution and with that supposed prospect their course in and out of the House is being shaped. Some of them want an election to the point of eagerness; others are not so enthusiastic. There are certain things which the latter would like to see adjusted before going into the fray but they are in a minority in Parliament.

Crossing the stream is not commonly regarded an an opportune time for changing horses and inasmuch as the caucus has renewed its approval of Mr. Meighen he will remain as leader. Caucuses which the party is holding have been experience meetings, emphasizing the need of organization.

Nearly Offended East.

In previous sessions the Government with the most precarious lead of its own has relied a great deal upon the Progressives. It is still inclined to do so. But there is evidence that this year the flirtation will be much less furious. There is not going to be any appreciable attention to the tariff and during the week a modified sort of an inquiry into that subject has been forecast. What was done last sesson came very near offending many of the government's friends in the east. It is intended if possible to avoid any enduring estrangements. Consequently this year will see no speculative ventures into the fiscal field. What has long been drummed into the ears of the government and what the western tour of the Prime Minister last fall tended to confirm is the fact that the most liberal concessions to the West on the tariff will neither appease its appetite nor awaken any marked degree of gratitude. An abandonment of the low tariff policy is not admitted, but at least there is to be a pause. If on the budget the wester party wants to propose an amendment the present indications are that they will be told to go ahead and do it. The Ontario wing, it is calculated, would not concur in that course. Conservatives, naturally, would not support a low tariff amendment. The equalization of railway rates, presumably in a way to secure lower schedules and also the ocean rates control scheme are designed as the particular menu this year for the west, although any such policy would be of general application. Many things suggest that the government is not going to sacrifice its friends in the East with the nebulous prospect of winning support in the West.

Nevertheless friendly gestures support the theory that the gulf dividing Liberals and Progressives is much narrower than between Progressives and Conservatives, and thus more calculated to promoe a community of interest.

No one yet has arisen to explain why the third varty is quiescent this year, but the certain thing is that they are not hankering for an election. Another is the fact that the rift in the lute of last year has not been repaired. The Calgary convention told the Alberta unit to get together but they haven't done so yet. The hard-hearted among them are repugnant to gratuitious suggestions, but so long as silence is preserved it cannot be said that instructons from home are being ignored.

Although an election has not been decided upon, the nomination conventions that are being held and the moves and manoeuvers in the Liberal organization are symptomatic of something doing. If the crops are good and the high price of wheat keeps up and business revives and Provincial fights are won it will all suggest the psychological moment for taking the plunge. If there is an election— and all contingencies mentioned qualify its probabilities — it will be in the fall, unless obstruction in the House or Senate be seized upon eagerly as warrant for a more peremptory appeal to the country.

MRS FERGUSON'S FIRST VETO KILLS LEGISLATORS' PASS BILL

AUSTIN, Tex., Feb. 23.—Governor Miriam Ferguson vetoed her first bill Saturday when she returned to the Legislature a measure passed last week which would have permitted legislators and their families to accept free passes from Texas railroads.

Acceptance of free transportation is equivalent to accepting money and would lead to abuses of the privilege, Governor Ferguson declared in her veto message.

KEENE BONSPIEL ATTRACTS MANY SKILFUL RINKS

Great Finish in the Semi-Finals for the Walsh Shield.

EXPERT PLAY.

'Spiel Opened by J. J. Dickson, 87 Year Old Curler.

KEENE, Feb. 23.—The third annual Bonspiel of the Keene Curling Club was brought to a successful finish on Friday night. Fourteen local rinks took part, and at the conclusion of the "spiel," the ladies provided a banquet for the curlers. The only member who did not take part in the Bonspiel was Mr. Howson, who is seriously ill with pneumonia. His vice-skip, Mr. Fred. Doris, took charge of his rink and made a very fine showing.

A pleasing feature at the opening of the 'spiel was the appearance of Mr. J. J. Dickson, Sr., 87 years of age. Mr. Dickson has always taken a great interest in curling, and always follows the records of local curlers when they are taking part in other Bonspiels. Mr. Dickson threw the first stone to open the 'spiel, and for a man of his age, it was wonderful to watch him throw the stone, and although the ice was a little tough, he got it up there. Mr. Dickson was also guest of honor at the banquet, and in a few words Mr. J. J. Moore paid a fine tribute to him.

The feature play was made by Fred. Eason in the game with Bill Chapman, in the semi-finals for the Dr. Walsh shield. Bill was three up coming home on the last end, and he was also lying shot right on the "button," very well guarded, and just about two inches of the stone uncovered. Eason was lying 2nd, 3rd and 4th, and if he could get the shot out and lay he would win the game. Eason had the last stone, and he made a brilliant shot to wick out the shot and also went out himself, but it was all tied up so an extra end had to be played. With Eason lying shot, unguarded, Chapman was short with his last stone, and Eason counted three and won the game.

In the final game for the Manley cup between R. Nelson and R. J. McCamus, McCamus routed Nelson to the tune of 18 to 5, while in the Dr. Walsh shield competition, Mather hit back at Eason to a 20 to 7 score.

After the banquet a large number attended the dance in the Town Hall, when the prizes were awarded.

McCamus got the Manley cup and each member of the rink received individual prizes of cream and sugar sets, while Nelson's rink being the runners-up received teapots each.

Chas. Mather's rink won the Dr. Walsh shield, and each member of his rink received a set of fruit dishes, while F. A. Eason's rink received cream and sugar sets.

Each skip, on behalf of his rink, replied in a few fitting words. Mr. Eason reminded all present that while enjoying the proceedings, not to forget Mr. Howson, who is ill, and who always participated in the Bonspiels.

Mr. Chas. Nelson's rink was also presented with a shield for winning the schedule. Mr. Nelson is the youngest skip in the club, and his rink performed consistently all winter.

BANK ROBBERS CAUGHT.

Citizens Pursue Bandits Forty Miles and Win Shotgun Battle.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—Following the robbery of the Millburg, Michigan, Bank of $29,000 in currency and $52,000 in negotiable securities Saturday, Sheriff's posses and citizens chased five members of the bandit gang more than forty miles and engaged in revolver and shot gun duels, with the bandits, wounding four of them and finally capturing them at New Carlisle, Ind. During the progress of the battle, two deputy sheriffs were wounded. Five suspects were brought to South Bend and lodged in jail. Among them was John Marshall, aged 32, Hamilton, Ont., who was seriously injured from gunshot in the body.

TWO CHILDREN BURNED.

Little Ones Entrapped When Fire Destroys Their Home at Alexandria.

ALEXANDRIA, Feb. 23. —(Canadian Press).—While their father was absent in Vermont and their mother was at the bedside of a stricken son in a Montreal hospital, Pearl, aged 12 and Paul Emile, aged 10, children of Mr. and Mrs. Cyrille Lacombe were burned to death when fire destroyed their home here yesterday morning. Miss Massia in charge of the house narrowly escaped with her life.

The fire broke out about 2 o'clock in the morning from an unknown origin and the house-keeper was awakened to find the building in flames. Her endeavours to reach the sleeping children were cut off by the flames and she fled from the house for help.

TORONTO MAN SHOT.

Canadian Badly Wounded in Buffalo on Saturday Night.

BUFFALO, N.Y., February 23 (Canadian Press).—Thomas O'Neill, formerly of Toronto, Ont., was shot and perhaps fatally wounded on Saturday night by two young men, who escaped.

The bullet pierced his left side and lodged above the hip.

The police are holding as a material witness Mrs. Eunice Scofield, a young woman.

Mrs. Scofield said she had known O'Neill two years, and was on her way to meet him, when she was interrupted by the young men, who attempted to accompany her.

Meantime O'Neill approached, was told of the occurrence, and knocked one of the men to the sidewalk, she said.

The other man drew a revolver, and shot ONeil'.

NATIVE WINE AND THE NEW BEER.

The controversy over native Ontario wine is important chiefly because it concentrates attention upon the fact that people who are bitter in their attitude toward the proposal to provide 4.40 per cent. beer have been very complaisant over the sale in Ontario of wine that shows a much higher alcoholic content.

The explanation that suggests itself is that the Drury Government, despite the arid propensities of its leader and his lieutenants, hesitated to interfere with a traffic largely carried on by political followers of the Farmer administration.

It is difficult to avoid any other theory than that the votes of the grape-growers loomed larger than the possible harm that might be caused by the unlimited sale of strong wine in the Province.

Mr. Raney, the Attorney-General of the Drury Government and the present leader of the Ontario Progressives, was in an ideal position to have squelched the wine traffic by amending the O. T. A. to make the sale of native wine illegal.

It is not on record, so far as the Examiner knows, that he ever made any attempt to do so—yet he continues to pose as the paladin of prohibitionists.

MONEY WELL SPENT.

It cannot be complained that Peterboro is unduly extravagant in the matter of providing for park and recreation needs, although, doubtless, there are citizens who find fault that anything is expended for such purposes.

Altogether the Parks Committee proposes to spend but $4,670, which sum includes $2,720 for parks alone and a total of $1,950 for providing recreational facilities.

Of the latter amount the free rinks and toboggan slide are responsible for $1,050, while the balance maintains the civic bathing beaches at Inverlea Park and Lake street.

A vity of 21,000 population that spends less than $2,000, or under 10c a year per capita, for the recreation of its citizens does not leave itself open to charges of being too free-handed in this respect.

The money spent on rinks, toboggan slide and swimming beaches is not lost; it is invested in something that ensures better and healthier young people.

It is much cheaper to provide such amusement facilities than it would be to maintain a juvenile court, for it is an old story that the children who are interested in skating and hockey and swimming are too busy to be affected by that mischief that Satan keeps for idle hands to do.

The people get value for every cent of the money that is expended on parks and recreation.

A MINE OF INFORMATION.

A Federal Government organization that is doing a most useful work and that might accomplish a great deal if the average Canadian knew that its services are at his disposal, is the National Resources Intelligence Service.

The service is a treasure trove of useful information about Canada, its physical assets, its resources and how their administration is divided among the Dominion and the nine Provinces and among the various departments of the various Governments—in fact, about Canada generally.

The Examiner doubts whether its readers are aware that the service issues a series of maps covering the land situation in the Prairie Provinces from the point of view of both interesting homesteaders and purchasers, resource maps of Canada and of the separate Provinces, a standard set of geographic maps covering eastern and central Canada and a part of British Columbia, and an atlas of Canada presenting a survey of the physical, political and economic features of the Dominion.

These publications with other maps, reports and pamphlets, compiled from the most authentic sources, are always available to the people of Canada—and it is a pity that so few comparatively take advantage of this organization.

IMPORTANT RECOMMENDATIONS.

The Peterboro Fish and Game Protective Association is renewing its efforts to have more overseers appointed during the spawning season in order that the game fish may be protected at a time when they are not only the most vulnerable to attack but when the maximum amount of damage to the supply is done.

Poaching during the spawning season each year does more to deplete the reserve than all the fishing that is legally done later on, making allowance for the fish "hogs" who try to catch a boat-load of fish and call their performance sport.

No matter how vigilant the inspectors and overseers may be, it is impossible for the regular force to deal effectively with the spawning season pirate.

Their districts are widespread, and it is too much to expect that they can cover the whole territory during this period with any degree of thoroughness.

The only remedy is to put on a large force of temporary officials while the spawning is being done, and the Fish and Game Association should impress that fact forcibly upon the Provincial authorities.

There is merit, too, in the association's recommendation that the open season for pickerel should be the same as for bass and maskinonge.

With pickerel fishing in the same waters that contain these game fish permitted weeks before bass or maskinonge may be legally caught, it is a difficult matter for fishery department officials to see that the catch is confined to pickerel.

Their work would be greatly simplified if the legal season were made the same for all three species.

TOURIST TRAFFIC.

Fifty million dollars is said to be a conservative estimate of the amount of money that will be spent by tourists from the United States in the Province of Ontario this year, and of this total, it is believed that about three-fifths of it will be passed over the counters of Ontario's retail merchants, says the Hamilton Spectator. There has been some criticism of Ontario's good roads spree, and there is no doubt that there was justification for some of the harsh things said, but keen students of economics declare that the huge amount expended was insignificant in comparison with the benefits that have and will accrue. Ontario's highway system lures motorists from across the border and has done more to acquaint the people of the Republic with Canada than anything that has ever been written or spoken from the public platform. It has been the best kind of advertising, the full benefits of which will not be achieved until economic conditions in the Dominion attain normalcy again. In the money that the tourists have expended the visitors from the neighboring Republic have indirectly paid for the upkeep of Ontario's splendid highways, and this year they will directly pay for the privilege of using the roads, through the tax of two cents a gallon which the Provincial Government will levy upon gasoline consumers. The imposition of this tax is unlikely to deter a single tourist from entering the country, because it is but the adoption of a policy that has for some time been in vogue in many of the States across the line. Hamilton is ideally situated on the most popular tourist route in the Province, but the administration will have to combat the attractiveness of the cut-off route along the Beach to the Toronto highway. It can be done with intelligent publicity. It is a duty that the administration owes to the retail merchants of Hamilton.

THE FUTURE OF LLOYD GEORGE.

When the tide of public opinion in Britain turned against Lloyd George and swept him from his place among the gods, there was a general disposition to regard his dethronement as the final act in the drama of a great and glorious career.

The curtain had fallen on a mighty figure, never fully to rise again. He who had led the nation through the greatest crisis in its history had finished his work and had no appeal except to posterity. He had lost the confidence of his own party, alienated the sympathies and forfeited the support of those with whom he had been associated in the crowning achievement of his career, and antagonized the new forces that were clamantly asserting their claim to power. In the language of the street, the "Little Welshman," once the idol of the people, was politically down and out.

So, at least, it seemed to many, even to some of his most ardent admirers. But there are increasing evidences that that view is shared neither by Lloyd George himself, nor by those who know him best. And, emphatically, it is not the opinion of his former associate, Winston Churchill.

Erratic as he may appear at times, there is no keener or shrewder observer of political conditions in Britain than the present Chancellor of the Exchequer; none who, from experience, is better qualified to discuss with sympathy and authority the vicissitudes of political life. So that when he, in the intriguing way which English leaders of public opinion have of writing about each other, undertakes to forecast the political future of his old chief, the matter becomes of vital interest.

In an article, which loses none of its point, because, as explained it was written before his elevation to the position of Chancellor of the Exchequer, Churchill characteristically declines to subscribe to the formula of history which arbitrarily divides the lines of eminent men into chapters descriptive of their rise, their triumph, their ruin and their fall. Nor does he believe that Lloyd George has the slightest inclination to submit to such treatment.

"Scarcely sixty years of age, with his astonishing vitality, his formidable strength, his insatiable zest for public life and interest in politics; with his gifts and incomparable experience, with his deep hold upon the sympathies and respect of millions of his fellow-countrymen, he is the last man to adapt his career to the historian's convention, or to accept as final the fall of the curtain upon even the most splendid sun."

In the battle in which the greatly weakened Liberal party has engaged with the Conservatives, on the one hand, and the Socialists, on the other, Churchill foresees issues that will inevitably enlist the fighting energy and resources of Lloyd George. "According to every indication, he will be received into the highest place in the hierarchy of the successors to the Liberal leadership," which is a somewhat rhetorical way of hinting that Lord Oxford's days as leader are numbered.

But that consummation, in the opinion of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, will be only a preliminary to developments of greater moment.

"If the Socialist party find that they have reached the limits of their expectations among the British electorate; if the absurd doctrines by which they are hampered deny them the opportunity of securing an independent majority in a future Parliament; and if their division, now held in suspense, were to lead to new cleavages among them, then it is not impossible that Mr. Lloyd George and a re-united though truncated Liberal party will find a basis of co-operation with the followers of Mr. Ramsay MacDonald."

Perhaps it did not require the prevision of a brilliant contemporary to suggest that possibility; much more interesting and significant is what Churchill regards as the more probable alternative. If, in the event of the Socialist party continuing its full career, and

"the anti-imperialistic Radicals follow the Trevelyans, the Ponsonbys and the Buxtons into the Socialist ranks, a very large proportion of the Liberal party will be forced to make common cause with the Conservative party in defence of the liberties and prosperity of Britain. In such circumstances, the nation and the Empire can certainly count upon Mr. Lloyd George."

It is evidently the opinion of the Chancellor of the Exchequer that that contingency is not unlikely to arise, and since no one knows the mind of Lloyd George or the state of party feeling better than he, his forecast has a significance that is impressive. But a question not less fascinating than the one he has discussed is—where, in the circumstances outlined, would Churchill find himself? Perhaps his article, with its glowing tribute to the qualities of his former chief, supplies the answer.—Ottawa Journal.

MONTREAL GRAIN.

MONTREAL, Feb. 22. — While exporters received a good number of cables here Saturday asking for offers of wheat, oats and barley for March-April shipment, there was little business transacted owing to there being very few bids. There was some demand for oats from local exporters and sales of odd cars of No. 2 Canadian Western were made at 4 1-2 cents per bushel over the Winnipeg May option, and No. 2 feed grade at 7 cents per bushel under, c.i.f. bay ports. Local trade in car lots was slow. Ontario No. 3 white oats were quoted at 65 cents, and No. 4 grade at 63 cents per bushel, ex store.

The feature of the egg market last week was the more pronounced weakness that prevailed and prices for fresh extras closed 6 to 7 cents per dozen lower and firsts 4 to 5 cents per dozen down. This was attributed to the continued downward tendency of the leading United States markets and the increased production in Canada. The buttetr trade was inactive but firm.

Prices were well maintained for cheese with fodder made No. 1 white and colored goods quoted at 20 1-4 to 20 1-2 per pound, and No 2 grade at 19 1-4 to 19 1-2 per pound.

Beans were steady at $2.70 per bushel.

A THOUGHT.

BECAUSE HE IS RIGHT

Life has its ups and downs and as we go teetering toward eternity, these stirring, bustling events we all encounter, and must all endure, or take the consequences.

Perplexing circumstances are bound to come and strange situations sure to arise, but this is experience, and "experience" should equip us to know more; and the more a man knows the greater results we have reason to expect from him.

It is from the suffering we endure that we can extract the true tonic that should give us more enthusiasm to want to live. Life is a bore to the man who has never had a care to share or a cross to bear.

But it always seems strange to me that most men take the longest route to find the shortest way—that most men will not listen to the "experience" of others, but insist on taking days, months and years of time to learn what might be well understood in an hour or less.

Lowell said: "One thorn of experience is worth a whole wilderness of warnings." But why let a serpent sting you twice?

We all know enough, but we often fail to recall the things we have learned, and here is a reminder: When you do not know what to do, do nothing. This bit of advice comes down through the ages and has saved many a man much suffering, dissapointment or defeat.

Almost every day conditions confront a man and he does not know just the right thing to do. Then the thing to do is—nothing. No man can be sure he is right before going ahead, but he should feel sure he is going ahead because he is right.

Well snaps the Charlotte street cynic, at least when Ford has all the money we can use Ford parts as a medium of exchange.

It is easy to get twenty miles out of a gallon, but it takes a careful man to get twenty miles out of a pair of socks.

A leading Department Store states:— "One of the most extraordinary increases that ever took place in any section of our business was in the section devoted to telephone orders

"By continuous advertising, by re-arranging and increasing the number of telephones and by holding educational meetings with the selling staff, in an almost incredibly short space of time our telephone orders were at least quadrupled."

We are proud to be helping this and other stores to obtain such prompt and profitable increases.

TELLS NEW STORY OF BOOTH'S BURIAL

Colonel Davidson of Chicago Declares Assassin Was Placed in Grave at Portsmouth, Va.

CHICAGO, February 23. — Col. James Hamilton Davidson, former commander of the 122nd Infantry, on Saturday revealed what he said was the burial place of John Wilkes Booth, assassin of President Abraham Lincoln.

Colonel Davidson who lives here with a daughter, believes he is the only living man who knows. Recently Edwin Harper Sampson, who had said he was one of the seven men who disposed of Booth's body, died in Moline, Ill., without revealing what had been done with the body.

Colonel Davidson said he was in command at Portsmouth, Va., on the night of Booth's burial, and was told of it by Colonel Baker, head of the Secret Service of the Army.

Booth's body was buried in the basement of a warehouse at Portsmouth in a deep grave and covered with acid, Davidson said Colonel Baker told him. The grave then was filled with limestone and dirt.

"Just after the shooting of Booth at Bowling Green, Va.," said Col. Davidson, "a report came to me about a group of men acting mysteriously in the middle of the night around one of the warehouses.

"I didn't have to wait long for my information. The head of the Secret Service in the Army, Colonel Baker, came to me next morning and said tery this city, show that John Wilkes he wanted to see me in privacy.

"This is what he said:

"'Last night I brought into Portsmouth the body of Booth. Six of my men carried it on a stretcher to the first warehouse to the north. We took it into the basement, where we dug a grave.

"'The body was placed in there and covered with acid. Then the grave was filled with limestone and dirt. Every man of us is pledged to secrecy. Will you promise never to say a word?'

"That was sixty years ago. There can't be any harm in telling it now. The country ought to know."

BALTIMORE, February 23. — The records of Greenmount Cemetery this city, show that John Wilkes Booth, assassin of President Lincoln, was buried in the Booth family plot there on 6th June, 1869.

According to the records of the Maryland Historical Society, Booth's body was brought here from Washington on 18th February of the same year and was kept in a vault at Greenmount until final interment.

"The family fully identified the body as that of John Wilkes Booth, all statements to the contrary notwithstanding," a statement taken from the records of the historical society declares.

WASHINGTON, February 23. — Many versions of the burial of John Wilkes Booth have been in circulation for years, but the generally accepted belief here is that the body of the assassin was buried on the ground floor of the old Washington Penitentiary and later removed at the request of his relatives to the Greenmount Cemetery, Baltimore.

To support this account students of history have produced what appear to be original documents exchanged in the corerspondence between members of the Booth family and the War Department relating to the removal to Baltimore.

KNOX CHURCH HAD ANNUAL MEETING

Optimism and Gratitude Evidenced—Reports Showed Progress.

In many features the annual congregational meeting of Knox Church held a few evenings ago was the finest annual meeting in the history of the church, Rev. M. C. Mackinnon said. The finest spirit of optimism and gratitude prevailed all through as report after report showed progress made by different church organisations. The church school reported an excellent year, marked by the renovating and redecorating of the Lecture Hall and the Primary School Room, the providing of tables for all classes in the Primary and Junior Schools, and other improvements. The total moneys raised by the school, including the Young People's Society, amounted to $2,333.19, by far the best financial statement the school has ever had. The Junior Misison Band, the Young Women's Auxiliary, and the W.M.S. reports all showed gains over last year, the average increases being over 60 per cent. The Ladies' Aid had a splendid year, and report a balance of about $1,000 to go towards reducing the principal of the mortgage on the manse, which will then amount to only $1,200. The debt on the church itself now amounts to only $6,500. This speaks well for the service and sacrifice of the people of Knox. The new church was opened only 13 years ago. The missionary givings of the church for 1924 show a substantial increase over 1923 in contributions to the budget of the church and in all benevolences. The total moneys raised in 1924 amounted to $12,428.93. The officers and membership are to be congratulated on the success of their work despite the financial stringency in industry and the unsettled state of general church life during the past year. The managers for the year 1925 are Messrs. H. J. McCannan, chairman, Frank Gray, Jas. Jackson, J. W. Buyers, George Davis, Arthur Pitchford, R. Johnson, W. Atchison, K. Denoon, R. Mulligan, Harold Baptie, Harvey Henry, A. Gillies, John Allen, and J. Richmond.

LOCAL OPTION BILL LOST IN HOLLAND

States General Defeats Anti-Liquor Group's Legislation.

THE HAGUE, Feb. 23.—A bill proposing to combat the drink evil in Holland by introducing local option was defeated in the upper house of the States General recently by 28 to 20 votes, after passing the lower house by 44 to 30 votes.

This is the second unsuccessful attempt of a strong anti-liquor group in parliament to restrict the drink traffic; the first, made in 1921, suffering a like fate by being adopted in the lower house by 39 to 29 votes, and then being thrown out in the following year by the upper house by 18 to 17 votes.

The latest vote was interesting in that it was not a party vote, as is so usual in Dutch legislation. Local option has been hotly debated recently both in and out of parliament. No fewer than 3,000 public bodies including Christian workmen's unions, church councils, Y.M.C.A.'s and others, have petitioned the government in favor of it, and a public memorial in its support secured 600,000 signatures.

Various speakers in the chamber gave details of personal observation of the effects of prohibition, both in the United States and Finland. They said that in their opinion prohibition had by no means proved the success that had been claimed for it, neither had crime decreased to the extent that had been represented as the result of it. Prohibition, they argued, only favored hypocrisy in addition to wholesale and flagrant evasions of the law.

The failure of the present bill seems to be due mainly to financial considerations.

It has been contended that even without restrictive measures the consumption of drink has enormously decreased in Holland of late years. In 1892 the consumption was 7.75 quarts per capita of population, but now it is only 2.10 quarts. Holland, nevertheless, still spends nearly $60,000,000 a year on drink, according to the latest statistics.

FINDS ANCIENT SKULLS.

Russian Scientist Digs up Skeletons 50,000 Years Old in Crimea.

MOSCOW, February 23. — Associated Press. — Two human skeletons belonging to the Paleolithic Age, of the Neandarthal (Java) type and believed to be more than 50,000 years old, have been discovered in a cave near Simferopol, in the Crimea, Professor Bontish-Osmolovsky, a Russian scientist, announced to-day.

While the two skeletons are not anything like the age of the skull of the man-like ape, recently discovered by Professor Dart, near Bechuanaland, anthropological authorities here say hat the Simeropol finds, taken altogether, throw considerable light on the remote primeval period when man has just escaped from the ape stage and begun to people the recesses of Africa and Asia.

In addition to the human relics found in the cave, there were also discovered a number of skeletons of mammoths, dinosaurs, cave hyenas, cave bears and a large variety of stone implements.

BRITISH FILMS GAIN FOOTHOLD

Producers Arrange for Distribution All Over World Through U. S. Interests.

LONDON, Feb. 23—British people are in hopes that the motion picture film is at last to be enlisted in the cause of advancing British culture throughout the world. The failure to find markets for British-made films has hurt the peculiar national pride which believes that goods made in Great Britain of necessity must be the equal, if not the superior, of any produced elsewhere in the world. But until recently the American film producing interests have largely dominated the world's markets.

It is now announced that G. B. Samuelson, one of the leading English film producers, has perfected an arrangement whereby his films will be sold for production in all the key countries controlled by the American interests. And this includes America. This does not mean, Mr. Samuelson asserts, that the British films have to be viewed and approved before being accepted and paid for but that the mere handing over of the negative will be the signal for the payment of good American money.

Call it a Victory.

English commentators on this achievement seem to regard it as something of an international victory. American films have had the run of the British market, and still are about the only pictures to be seen in the average British theatre. During the last year the British public paid more than $5,000,000 in rentals for the privileges of education in the ways of American life as it is revealed, or distorted, by the general run of American pictures.

British theatre goers enjoy the pictures immensely, though admitting that they do not understand many of the things that they see. But all the time they suspect they are being subjected to a subtle form of propaganda.

"American films deal for the most part with American subjects, American exploits, American manners and customs, and American ideals generally," says a current British periodical "Thus the great republic is spreading her influence and her conceptions everywhere.

The Remedy.

"It is true that the ideas conveyed in the American pictures are not always worthy of the country, but the fact remains that men, women and children all over the world have American impressions put before their eyes by the wonderful scientific instrument, the kinema.

"The British Empire takes an enormous number of these films and through them the citizens of the British overseas dominions learn far more about America than they are ever shown about Britain. It does not seem we have done all we should to develop this important trade which will yet grow amazingly as civilization extends. The remedy would seem to be for our front-rank literary men and artists not to despise what is really a magnificent opportunity, but to lend their aid to create British films of a kind to command universal admiration."

ASK FEDERAL AID FOR GOOD ROADS

Renewal of Dominion Grant of $20,000,000 to Provinces Desired.

MONTREAL, Feb. 23.—The Canadian Good Roads Association is marshalling its forces to press its application to the Dominion Government for a renewal of the Federal grant of $20,000,000 to assist the various provincial governments in carrying out their programmes of construction of main roads designed to be linked up interprovincially and finally nationally. The decision to make the application was approved by unanimous resolution of delegates from every province in the Dominion, including several premiers and numerous ministers, deputy ministers and highway executives, at the annual convention of the association held in June last at St. Andrew's-by-the-Sea, N.B., and was reaffirmed at the interprovincial conference of ministers and highway officials held at Toronto in November. A strong delegation is being assembled, headed by Hon. P. J. Veniot, premier of New Brunswick and president of the association, and including representatives of each provincial government and many influential citizens, to go to Ottawa, at a date during the current session to be fixed by Hon. Mr. Veniot, to urge upon the Cabinet the advantages accruing from the proposal and the consideration which should ensure a favorable answer to their appeal.

Premier Veniot has addressed to each member of the Senate and the House of Commons a personal letter in which he presents the arguments in favor of the grant, stressing the fact that the Dominion Government is one of the chief beneficiaries of the network of improved highways made possible by the previous grant in 1919 of $20,000,000 and designed to be extended should the grant be renewed. After saying that good roads come under the definition of projects undertaken "in the general interest of Canada" and quoting the axiom that those who benefit should pay, Premier Veniot goes on to point out that to date the Dominion has collected as customs and excise duties on automobiles, accessories and parts a total revenue of approximately $105,000,000, the greater part of which is due to improved roads. The federal post-office department, moreover, makes use of 55 per cent. of all provincial roads for mail transportation, delivery or collection, which would be impossible or much more costly were it not for highway improvements. Good roads are one of the strongest inducements for attracting settlers to any district and are imperative if the policies of colonization and immigration vitally necessary for Canada's welfare are to be carried out. Highway transportation, while relieving the C.N.R. and other Canadian railways of unprofitable short hauls, are serving increasingly as feeders of long-haul freight to the railways. Mr. Veniot's final argument is the general benefit to Canada from the tourist traffic, which has grown so amazingly in recent years, and which brings not only benefits in the expenditure of millions of money within the Dominion but also serves as an invaluable advertising medium for Canada's beauties, its resources and its investment opportunities.

The date of the delegation's visit to Ottawa will be announced as soon as it is definitely set.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

TRUTH VERSUS ERROR.

Editor Examiner:

In the book of Proverbs we read that, "He that is first in his own cause, seemeth to be just but his neighbour cometh and proveth him.

Recently a writer under the above heading stated very boldly that: Another error that is flatly opposed to truth is "the Trinity." It has been said, "That fools rush in where angels fear to tread." So it becomes us as we approach so fearful a personage as the Godhead, to draw near with unshod feet and with fear and trembling. It is written, If they speak not according to Thy Word, it is because there is no light in them. We will therefore ask our readers to turn to the first chapter of Genesis; and read the first verse, "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." This verse is a great light above the brightness of the sun to lighten every man that cometh into the world, if they will only walk in the light. Who created the heaven and the earth? God? Yes; but those who will take the labour to dig for truth will find that it says more than appears on the face of the statement in our King James translation of the Scriptures.

In the original Hebrew and Greek text the word is Elohim or the plural of Eloah, that is, God, singular. The numbers are singular (one), dual (two), plural (three). So in this text we have the plural, Elohim which is three. The Word in the Hebrew then literally reads: In the beginning the Triune God or (Trinity) created the heaven and the earth. Elohim, (God), plural of Eloah, occurs about 2,500 times; first in Genesis 1&1. Here it is joined to a verb in the singular (created) and shows Trinity-acting in unity. I make no claim to be a Hebrew scholar; but I am quoting one who, without doubt, was one of the greatest Hebrew scholars and Bible students of recent years, Sir Thomas Newberry, the editor of the well-known Newberry Bible.

In the first three chapters of Genesis Elohim (Trinity) occurs about fifty times; but there is one in the 26th verse which I would like you to make note of. And God (Elohim, plural) said, "Let us make man in our image, after our likeness." In what respect does man bear the image and likeness of the Trinity? But I will hope to take this subject up at a later date if the Editor can spare me the space. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I remain,

Yours very truly,
T. C. Yoge,

Peterboro, Ont., Feb. 20, 1925.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir: There was a letter in your paper on Tuesday advocating that all drinkers of liquor should be jailed and have the lash. Not only the province but every household should be governed on this principle. It was the good old way and if it had only been kept up women would never have had a vote. I am entirely in accord with a committee of men running this province and every man should begin with his own house. People have got out of hand. The young girls are acting ridiculous. Women have to be barred from the churches for their scandalous dress. We have had too much talk about "rights." The O.T.A. did away with that idea. It is all plain sailing for the authority of the man of the house without giving any reason for it. It is best for the province and for the family that man's authority should be felt. Let us have more social service and let the woman be the first servant as in Abraham's time.

All those in high authority, from the Supreme Being down, are men, and the old saying is coming true: "When the world is ruled by the woman it will lose its head." And that head is man, and, besides, the world has gone crazy. This model province is getting to be about the strangest in the world.

—WELL-WISHER.

WONDERS OF THE SKY.

A small portion or extract from—"An Astronimical Feast at the Observatory," related by Mr. E. Schutzbach (Switzerland):-

"I bring you an invitation to the observatory." With these words I was greeted by Dr. Minatti, a physicist, with whom I was acquainted. "There," he continued, "we will meet Professor Xyland, who is en route to Asia, and who is making only a brief sojourn here. But, hurry, as we shall be called for immediately; and probably we shall stay up there over night."

To me this meant a great treat. The famous physicist, Professor Xyland, was not only a man of great learning, but, moreover, a devout Christian. Hardly was I armed with note-book and pencil, when the automobile which was to take us to the observatory, came into sight. It was a wonderful evening. In less than an hour we were at our destination, where we met Professor Xyland and Hennach, as well as a young student of physics, Eugene Bergolf. After the introduction and exchange of greetings, Dr. Minatti whispered to me: "Professor Xyland is just our man. Just ask him questions. I will make memoranda of all in your note-book."

"Professor," I interposed, "in this beauty of creation, does our little earth not look like a black, sinister little dot, when we think of all the existing misery, all the strife and contention; in short, the dark night of sin and death, which has punished mankind now for six thousand years?" With flashing eyes he flared up: "Our terra a dark little dot! Next to the throne of God it is to me the brightest spot of the entire universe. For did not the mighty Logos, the world's Builder, who created all these things under the direction of the Most High, these sovereigns of light and majesties of fire (with sparkling eyes he pointed up to the sky with his hand), did He not live here upon this earth, and was it not ennobled by Him? For what purpose, you all know. In like manner, as undoubtedly millions of years before the eternal God had given Him the commission to bring into being these wonderful hosts of stars and to establish the laws for all of them, suited to each individually, so nineteen hundred years ago a new work, which He had to accomplish upon our earth, was put before Him!"

The Logos left His glory and came down to pay the ransom for Father Adam, condemned to death, in order to purchase back for him, and thereby also for all his posterity—mankind—the life forfeited by disobedience. Therefore, no matter if ever so dark shadows hover about the earth, I already see it in the golden brilliance of future aions completed, indescribable glory and beauty, worthy, in the days when He was flesh, to have given lodging to the Logos, now the Prince of Life; worthy also of a perfect race of human beings, when every one as a wonder of Divine love reflect the image of the Creator, and causes joy and pleasure to the ruler and King of the universe. What, then, does the six-thousand-year night of the permission of evil mean in the future aions, when every new brilliance and beauty outshines the previous?

An eclipse of the sun caused by the shadows of sin, which permits the sunshine of Divine love, wisdom, supreme power, and righteousness to shine forth only the more bright!

"How all powers and characteristics now dormant in man will then grandly develop, and bring forth precious fruits! And earth itself will blossom in beauty never seen before! Must not hearts be kindled in blessed rapture over the satisfying joy? Every being will breathe love for the gracious Creator, as well as for his fellow creature! And as none of the sweet flowers in the wealth of their glory is like another, so every creature shall bring pleasure to the great God by his own beauty and kind; and praises and adoration will rise up on wings of love to the throne of the Eternal God. And He will open the gates of heaven and pour out floods of blessings and streams of love upon all

Then a powerful 'Te Deum Laudamus'—Great God, Thee we praise! will roar and thunder all around the terrestrial ball. And on this all the heavenly hosts will join exultantly as they did at the creation of this earth!"

The words filled our hearts with solemn joy. Moved and touched, we took our leave and parted. The astronimical feast, which had lasted until four o'clock in the morning, will long remain in our memories like a benediction from heaven.

—M. T. BUTCHER.

The Lord will not cast off forever; but though he cause grief, yet will he have compassion according to the multitude of his mercies. — Lam. 3:31, 32.

SOCIETY HELPS WORKINGMEN TO INVEST MONEY

Annual Meeting of Shareholders in Workingmen's Building and Savings Society.

GOOD REPORTS

Not a Dollar Lost in Thirty-Six Years of Its Operation.

At the annual meeting of the Shareholders of The Peterboro Workingmens' Building and Savings Society held recently, the Directors presented their annual report covering the Company's operations for the year 1924. The annual statement showed a slightly higher interest return than for the previous year. Following the adoption of the report the following Directors were elected:

James Lynch, James Garrow, John Corkery, E. A. Peck, Richard Sheehy, Frank Fairen, M. H. Gainey, James Murty, J. R. Corkery.

Following the Shareholders' meeting the Directors met and elected the following officers:

James Lynch, president.
James Garrow, vice-president.
James Murty, treasurer.
John Corkery, secretary.

The Peterborough Workingmen's Building and Savings Society is an incorporated body deriving its powers under the Building Societies Act. The Society commenced business in the City of Peterborough on or about the 1st May 1889 and since that time has been continuously conducting its operations in the City of Peterborough. The purpose of the Society is the promotion of systematic savings among its members, the investment of these savings in first class securities and furnishing credit to its members for the purchase or construction of homes. In the thirty-six years covering the period of its operations, not one dollar invested by the Directors has been lost, due to the zealous care exercised in the investment of the Societys' funds, in only first class securities. The Society does not pretend to offer to large investors the best return, but for the person whose income permits him to lay aside periodically a small surplus, it offers a great opportunity not only for exercise of economy and thrift but the return of a good rate of interest. Unlike most corporations The Peterborough Workingmens' Building and Savings Society is conducted on a purely co-operative basis. The funds that are deposited monthly with the Society are re-invested in first mortgages on real estate, and other first class securities, and the net profits are ratably distributed among the Shareholders. The overhead expenses in conducting the Society's expenses is kept down to a minimum. There are no salaries paid to Directors. As a result of this minimum overhead expense the best possible revenues is paid to the Shareholders.

Two Memberships.

The membership of the Society may be broadly divided into two classes designated as savings members and borrowing members. The former use the Association as a place where they may deposit from time to time such monthly sums as they are able to spare from their wages, salary or other income. For example, a member subscribes for the shares and pays into the Society's funds $10.00 per month, being at the rate of $1.00 per share, and these payments are made monthly until the ten shares with the profits that have accrued thereon mature to the value of $2,000.00, that is $200.00 per share. Should the Shareholder desire to withdraw the instalments paid on his shares before maturity, the Association returns him the payments made with interest at the rate of 4% per annum.

The borrowing members uses the Association for the purpose of borrowing funds for the purpose of buying or building a home. In such a case the proceding is for the Shareholder to take out shares corresponding to the size of the loan made to him, and make monthly payments over a period of years until the value of the shares equals the value of the loans when the loan is paid off by the maturing shares.

The Society is therefore a mutual, co-operative institution, the members therof saving money together, lending money to each other and dividing profits with each other. Since The Peterborough Workingmen's Building and Savings Society commenced business, numerous Shareholders have through the means afforded by the Association, purchased their own homes. Moreover many of the Shareholders who have long since paid for their homes are still Shareholders making a monthly investment of their savings and participating in the generous revenue being earned by the Society's funds.

T. L. Church Urges Bill Affecting Newspapers and Magazines in Canada.

OTTAWA, Feb. 21. — (Canadian Press).—A bill to amend the Post Office Act received first reading at the opening of the House of Commons yesterday. The object of the bill, as explained by T. L. Church (Conservative, North Toronto), is to require sworn statements containing the names and addresses of editors, owners and stockholders of magazines, newspapers, trades journals and other periodicals, to be made semi-annually. Mr. Church said that his amendments followed the law now in force in the United States, Britain and Australia. After the sworn statements had been filed, the amendments provide that it should be published in the publication filing it. The registration was introduced in the public interest and in the best interest of the free press. Paid editorial and other reading matter for which money was paid should be plainly marked "advertisement," he said. Statements were to be made in duplicate and delivered to the Postmaster-General, who it is provided in the bill, would make provision for the carrying out of the Act. The bill contained a proviso that it should not be applicable to religious, fraternal, temperance, scientific or other such publications.

MOTHER IS ARRAIGNED IN VACCINATION CASE

Court Bars Child That Has Not Been Inoculated From Public School.

NEW YORK, February 23. — The second case on record here of a parent refusing to have a child vaccinated while attending a public school in New York, came up before Magistrae Earl A. Smith in the Municipal Term Court, the parent contending that vaccination was a danger to health and a custom maintained for "economic reasons by the medical profession."

The parent, Mrs. Sarah Osborne, an English trained nurse, living at 525 West 128th street, was arraigned on the charge of violating the Compulsory Education law. The complaint was made by William F. Robinson, a truant officer, who charged that although he had warned Mrs. Osborne that the law requires public school pupils to be vaccinated, she continued to send her daughter to the Alexander Hamilton Junior High School in West 145th street.

Mrs. Osborne pleaded "guilty and not guilty." She held that she had committed no crime, as her object was to protect her child's health from dangers frequently resulting from vaccine poisoning." She admitted she knew the law and said that heretofore she had lived in cities that did not enforce 'the barbaric custom of vaccinaton." Mrs. Osborne told the court that she had been vaccinated in England when a young girl, and that complications had set in, which nearly resulted in the amputation of her arm.

Magistrate Smith held that the child could not attend school here without being vaccinated, but said the case would be dropped if her mother made other provisions for the child's education.

An adjournment was made to 26th of March, when Mrs. Osborne will be required o again appear in court, and learn whether the Board of Education considers that the child is being properly educated.

MISS FARRAR INDIFFERENT

Says She Has Forgotten Tellegen When Told of Marriage.

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 23.—"Just can't be bothered; forgotten him," was the retort of Geraldine Farrar when told by her manager that newspaper reporters had just informed him that Lou Tellengen, her former "perfect lover" and erstwhile husband, was married again and the father of a son. This was all that could be obtained from Miss Farrar while her private car stood in the Pennsylvania Station here at an early hour Thursday.

While Miss Farrar slept, or at least remained in her bed, her manager explained that her company was doing fine on one-night stands and that she had no intention of abandoning her concert tour. He declared she had completely forgotten Mr. Tellegen and was wrapped up in her art.

DUKE FINED FOR SPEEDING.

Leinster Is Mulcted £5 When He Fails to Appear in Court.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—The Duke of Leinster was fined £5 Thursday at Sutton, in Surrey, for motoring along the Brighton Road on Oct. 6 at nearly thirty-three miles an hour.

As the Duke did not appear in court the Magistrate at first proposed to adjourn the case for his appearance, but the Police Inspector asked that the case should be dealt with in his absence as there had been great difficulty in serving the process upon him. In fact, it was only by a stroke of luck they found him.

Lord Edward Fitzgerald, who succeeded to the Dukedom of Leinster in 1922, early made himself conspicuous as a motor driver. He made a 610-mile motor dash from London to Aberdeen in July of that year, taking eighteen hours on the journey, for a $3,000 wager.

ELECTION PLEDGE, IF CARRIED OUT, PROMISES TO KEEP M.P. BUSY

CHELMSFORD, Eng., Feb. 3.—If Sir Henry Curtis-Bennett fulfills his election pledge—to kiss every woman in the Mid-Essex division if elected to parliament—he will have a busy time. There are 16,269 women electors in the constituency who claim prior right in the osculatory demonstration, while many others are said to be looking forward to the event with a good deal of pleasure and interest.

When charged by the chairman of a concert at Brentwood with "having failed to carry out one of his election promises," Sir Henry said it was a rash promise "but I am most anxious to carry it out. In fact I am quite willing to start at once."

$30,000 ACTION AGAINST C.N.R.

Damages Sought for Deaths of Four Persons at Crossing.

COBOURG COURT

COBOURG, February 23. — The Jury sittings of the Supreme Court of Ontario are announced to open at Cobourg on Monday, 10th March, with the Hon. Justice Wright presiding. There are three cases on the docket, it is stated, all arising out of accidents on the Canadian National Railways.

Four persons from Toronto were killed near Newcastle a few months ago, and damages, it is stated, will be sought in actions arising out of these amounting to $30,000.

In another case a young man from Napance is alleged to be bringing action against the C.N.R. for damages as the result of an accident that occurred at the William Street crossing in the town of Cobourg, last summer, when his automobile was struck by a train. One of the occupants of the car was so seriously injured that he was confined to the hospital for some months.

At Colborne there was another accident during the year, and one youth was killed and another seriously injured when the truck in which they were riding was struck by a train on a crossing south of the village. Litigation is probable to follow in this case also. It is altogether likely that these cases, if they are proceeded with, will occupy the attention of the Court for the entire week.

Cases Were Adjourned.

Judge Cameron has been confined to his home for three weeks now, suffering from a severe attack of la grippe or influenza, but is reported to be considerably improved. Judge Ward came down from Port Hope on Tuesday to preside at the Division Court proceedings, but the list of actions was put over for another month.

During last year the company paid $17,555 in fire losses, the losses for that year being heavier than for the preceding three years.

Mule-Disease Plays Havoc With Livestock In Sweden

STOCKHOLM, Feb. 23.—(Associated Press).—Nearly the whole of Sweden has been swept by an epidemic of mule-disease and in an effort to stamp it out thousands of animals have been killed. The first cases of the disease were noticed in Scani in the south, and immediately every precaution was taken to prevent its spread.

Farms affected were isolated, military forces were mobilized and formed a ring around the farms. All birds in the vicinity were shot and the grim method of slaughtering all the livestock—cattle, swine, poultry, etc.—was exercised. This proved of no avail and the disease then spread to the north of the country, where the best bred herds suffered greatly. During November and December the Government has paid out over two million crowns as compensation.

We wonder if the reason policemen have to paint the "stop" signs on pavements is that regular painters wouldn't take the risk of being run over or shot.

FLORIDA GROWS AT GREAT PACE

Industry Racing to Catch Up With Fast Increasing Population.

A MAD SCRAMBLE

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 23.—Industry and Government are making desperate efforts to catch up with Florida's skyrocketing population.

They have been almost paralyzed for a year, since wealthy and wealth-seeking citizens from every State began the mad scramble for Florida real estate.

Railroad lines were too small, and the road beds too light. Mail service was delayed one to five months. Roads were not hard-surfaced. Building was slow. Houses and apartments were at a premium.

Even telephone service was considered a luxury, and still is.

Coasts Connected.

The turning point in railroad development has been reached with completion of a 200-mile project by the Seaboard Air Line, known as the Florida, Western & Northern.

It is the first direct connection of the east and west coasts. Its northern terminus is Coleman; its southern terminus West Palm Beach. By direct route it connects St. Petersburg, Tampa, Bellair, Clearwater, Sarasota, Bradentown, Manatee, Palmetto, Lakeland and West Palm Beach, which lies across Lake Worth from Palm Beach.

It runs through the heart of Florida's productive section, the centre of the State. In Avon Park there is the greatest citrus region in the world, with 15,000 acres within five miles.

Lakeland and Polk County, with the greatest wealth per capita in the State, has been made accessible both to east and west coasts.

Mails Slow.

Value of phosphate land and plants alone is placed at $100,000,000.

A real estate promotion scheme actually is responsible even for the railroad. The company organized the Land Company of Florida. In all the road raised $7,000,000 through bond sales.

The mail situation has been even worse than transportation, if possible. After protests from all sections of Florida, a call for volunteer mail clerks was made in December.

Every train brought into each city scores of persons whose mail was demanded immediatelv. West Palm Beach with nearly 40,000 inhabitants was especially overcrowded, and had an exceptionally small postoffice.

Wealthy and wealth-hunters alike stood in line all day at the general delivery window for mail. The lease on the postoffice building expired. No provision was made for a new one.

Relief in Sight.

Finally an assistant United States postmaster was sent to make a survey. He has promised new quarters, extra clerks, cancelling machines and auto delivery trucks in every crowded section.

Real estate men down the east and west coasts of the State alike predict that Florida will have the same experience as southern California: 20 years or more uninterrupted growth.

CARNATION CARAMELS

1 cup brown sugar, 1 cup white sugar, ½ cup corn syrup, ¾ cup Carnation Milk. Mix well and boil, stirring often until the mixture makes a firm though not brittle ball when dropped in cold water. Pour into a pan that has been rinsed with cold water and allow to cool without stirring or disturbing. When nearly cold mark into squares and cut when cold. If liked, nut meats or cocoanut may be laid in the pan before pouring in the candy. If chocolate flavor is liked, add one square of melted chocolate before the candy is finished cooking.

ENGLISH CHINA WAS DISCUSSED

Interesting Paper at Women's Art Association in the Conservatory.

RARE EXHIBIT.

Despite the very inclement weather of Saturday afternoon, there was a good attendance at the meeting held in the studio at the Conservatory of Music, under the auspices of the Women's Art Asociation, when an exhibition of rare pieces of loaned china took place, and a paper on "English China," prepared by Miss Hope Kitchener of Lindsay, was read by Mrs. J. E. Dickenson.

Mr. R. A. Brown also gave two well-received vocal solos, John Ireland's "Sea Fever" and "Sylvia," with accompaniments by Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park.

At the conclusion of the paper, tea was served from a table prettily centred with pale pink tulips and lighted candles. Tea hostesses were Mrs. R. A. Brown and Mrs. G. E. Porter, assisted by Mrs. J. E. Dickenson, Mrs. J. B. Mann, Mrs. Park, and Misses Wood, Harstone, E. Borbridge, and G. Glover.

The exhibition of old china included some very interesting specimens of English art pottery, Spode, Wedgwood, Royal Worcester, and china from Copenhagen, in Denmark.

The paper read by Mrs. Dickenson dealt exclusively with English china, and was a review of the various types of ware manufactured in England. Derby was the home of the first British china, when in the year 1750, the works at Worcester were established. The product of the factories at Derby was distinguished by the Crown-Derby mark.

The exact date of the establishment of the factory at Chelsea is not known, but in 1745 the works there had attained Continental fame. George II. aided it greatly by his patronage, procuring workmen, models and materials from Saxony and Brunswick, and thus enabling Chelsea to enter into competition with the best designs and productions of Dresden and Sevres. The earliest examples of Chelsea china were imitations of the ordinary blue Delft patterns, but later, Oriental patterns were very successfully copied, and both Sevres and Dresden were adopted as models, with very fine results.

The Bow china factory was established about 1730 and ceased about 1776. The body and glaze of Bow china were often defective, and the pattern was so arranged as to cover flaws. Insects were often introduced to hide imperfections in the manufacture.

The Worcester Porcelain Company was founded in 1751, and the earliest productions were based entirely on Chinese models. The real old blue colouring of this china has a charm about it which cannot be reproduced nowadays. The Worcester works have a continuous history of nearly a hundred and fifty years, a record not reached by any other English factory.

Special characteristics of Plymouth and Bristol and Lowestoft china were enumerated, and the writer went on to speak of the well-known Coalport product. With Derby and Worcester, Coalport can boast that it was established in the middle of the eighteenth century. The site of the first works was at Caughley, where a small pottery was begun about 1754. From 1756 to 1776 the manufactory attained a great eminence, through the excellence of the porcelain and the beautiful dark blue of the china. At present, the productions of Coalport, both old and modern, are unequalled in their domain.

The well-known "Willow pattern," first manufactured at Coalport, is from a Chinese model. It is still manufactured by the Coalport company, and is one of their stock patterns. It appears on a list of some forty patterns which can be, and are, manufactured without the use of lead. Some of the dinner ware sent to America by this manufactory cost over $50.00 a plate, one of these being a plate with a coloured design painted after Sir Joshua Reynolds' celebrated portrait of Mrs. Robinson.

The paper finished with a brief reference to characteristics of Spode, Nantgarw, and Swansea china.

RUMANIA DETERMINED TO DRIVE BOLSHEVISTS FROM THE COUNTRY

BUCHAREST, Feb. 21.—While the arrests of Bolshevist agents and workers are proceeding in Rumania, there are indications that a similar campaign, in an intensified form, is to be opened soon in Jugoslavia, the neighboring and allied country.

The arrest of Stefen Raditch, the Croatian leader, is regarded here as the beginning of an active campaign against his followers in the support of Bolshevism. One hundred and four men were arrested recently in Krajova and lodged in jail.

The ministry of interior is preparing a complete list of foreigners who will be expelled from Rumania. The number is said to include all Bolshevist agents from Moscow who have fallen under the observation of the Rumanian police.

Bishop Blames Famine On Ireland's Own Sins

BELFAST, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press)—Alluding to the distress under which a section of the Irish people is suffering, Bishop Fogartp of Killaloe, in the course of a pastoral, says this distress might be in consequence of Ireland's own sins

"During the Great War, heaven spread a mantle of protection over Ireland, while the rest of Europe was undergoing a dreadful castigation," the Bishop writes.

"While others were starving, God lavished abundance upon the Irish people, and we have shown our gratitude by burning, wrecking and destroying the gifts of God in a campaign of crime which is an awful scandal to the world, and a disgrace to the Irish name Now if His chastising hand is laid on us, we have nobody to blame but ourselves."

TO HONOR MEMORY

OTTAWA, Feb. 23.—(Canadian Press).—It is intended that Irishmen in Canada, by descent or birth, together with their fellow Canadian citizens, will on April 13th, honor the memory of that great Irish-Canadian patriot Thomas D'Arcy McGee, one of the fathers of Confederation, and one of Canada's truly great men, by fitting observance of the 100th anniversary of his birth.

Arrangements for an International observance of this centennial celebration, which were initiated by Hon. Charles Murphy some months ago, were brought to a head recently at an informal dinner which Mr. Murphy gave at the Chateau Laurier to a group of representative Irish citizens of the Capital, irrespective of creed or politics.

In outlining his proposal for the observance of the McGee centennial by a big banquet to be held at the Chateau Laurier, Hon. Charles Murphy with a depth of expression declared "I thank God that I am in a position tonight to do what I have desired to do all my life, which I could not do politically, to bring all the Irisih together regardless of creed or politics on one common basis for one common cause." This utterance, made following a brief outline of the life and career of Thomas D'Arcy McGee, was greeted with warm enthusiasm by those present, all of whom pledged themselves to give whole-hearted support, in order that the celebration may prove to be a fitting recognition of the great man, whose memory it is designed to honor.

Committees to take charge of the different duties in connection with the proposed function were appointed under the general chairmanship of Hon. Charles Murphy, who will be materially assisted by Messrs. W. de Courcey Topley and T. P. Murphy as joint secretaries, and initial arrangements were proceeded with.

MILITANT ACTIVITY SHOWN BY DUTCH ANTI-MILITARISTS

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 23—Isolated outbreaks of anti-militarism in Holland are occasionally taking a militant form.

At Spaarndam and Overveen recently, army store sheds were set afire, and a number of people of anti-militaristic tendencies were arrested as suspects. This led to a big protest meeting of anti-militarists at Santpoort, at which the authorities were severely scored for alleged brutal treatment of the persons arrested.

Recently the Marine Weekblad, a naval service weekly, printed a special report from Villefranche, France, where the Dutch battleship Tromp was making a visit, that extensive damage was done to delicate parts of the machinery in the ship's engine room, parts of guns were missing and a red flag was one morning found floating from the gaff.

So far there has been no official confirmation of this report, which remains more or less a mystery, and no further details about it have come to hand.

METHODIST BOGEY PROVES SCARECROW

Sinister Activities at Niagara and Peterboro Should be Investigated.

TORONTO, Feb. 23 (Special to The Examiner).—Throughout this more or less favored land the bogey of the eMthodists is being raised. Is there a great Methodist plot? With Church Union only four months distant, Canada wonders what is under way in Methodist circles.

Summarizing current events, a Methodist writer produces the following sarcastic comment on anti-Methodist news:

The mask is being torn from the gigantic Methodist plot. Unseemly revelry and jubilation are being disclosed. The lid is off.

At the golden jubilee of Dublin Stree Methodist Church, Guelph, the pulpit was "masked" with reins. At Chalottetown, P.E.I., recently the Methodist propaganda was broadcast by radio over whole Scottish counties.

Already this year, the press reports disclose, over one hundred Methodist congregations have had their anniversaries, at which there have been sounds of revelry by night. At Athens, Ont., they induced the village orchestra to drown their banquetting with its sweet strains. At Beamsville they filled four sleighs and went for a ride by night. At Chatham, N.B., St. Luke's congregations of Methodists heard what the local newspaper characterized as "an excellent discord" from a college professor.

The Plot Coagulates.

More diabolical still, Dr. Chown went West. In Winnipeg he officiated at a wedding. At other places he made speeches. At Victoria he picked roses.

Evidences of apostasy are found in the fact that at a Toronto church the teen-age girls conducted service and at Hespeler the men's brotherhood, interefering in politics, asked the town council to provide an open-air rink for the children.

Besides, Dr. Chown, it is learned, went West.

And at Nelson, B.C., masking popish tendencies, the Methodists had a song service, at which Luther's hymns were featured.

It is further revealed by the newspaper clippings that two Methodist pastors have been preaching on Church Union. One case was at Wesley Church Hamilton, and the other at Trinity Church, Port Arthur. Collusion is suspected.

Gloating doubtless over the prospects of Union, Rev. Wm. Ryan of Charlottetown is said to have celebrated his 92nd birthday with rejoicing at 70 years spent in the ministry.

It is further disclosed that many Methodist celebrations are to be held shortly in various centres with pagentry and music, ostensibly for the purpose of commemorating the first hundred years of organized Methodist missions in Canada. Places as far apart as Niagara Falls and Peterboro are said to be implicated. These sinister activities should be exposed.

RADIO TO MELT METALS

Sheffield Steel Firms Use Wireless Valves in Furnaces.

SHEFFIELD, Eng., Feb. 23.—Wireless is to be introduced into the steel industry of Sheffield for the purpose of melting metals, announcement to this effect being made by Dr. C. H. Desch, dean of the faculty of metallurgy at the University of Sheffield. Wireless valves can be used to melt masses of steel into white-hot liquid, Dr. Desch said, and within a few months there would be furnaces here worked by these valves.

"Furnaces have actually been built in which the motive power for melting the metal is supplied by large thermionic valves," Dr. Desch announced, "and these are of special use in the manufacture of certain nickel alloys."

Further, it was explained that a 200-volt direct current is passed into the valves, which converts it into alternating current of extremely high frequency—much higher, in fact, than can be obtained from a mechanical generator of alternating current. This current is passed through the metal, which may be said to melt itself.

"The melting metal," Dr. Desch added, "is often far hotter than the crucible in which it is being heated. A piece of Swedish iron was melted in this way before the crucible in which it was contained was thoroughly warm."

Women Voters of Country To Meet at Richmond, Va.

CHICAGO, Feb. 23—(Associated Press).—Jury service for women, because of "its important place on the legislative programme of many state Leagues of Women Voters," again will occupy a prominent place in the discussions at the national convention of the league at Richmond, Va., April 16-22, according to an announcement made public here.

Women are permitted to serve on juries in 21 states, said the announcement, which added that "it is significant that about one-third of the women in the United States are organized in gainful occupations and that justice not alone to women but to the community demands that they should be eligible to sit as jurors."

"Jury service, whether a privilege or a duty, is an incident of citizenship. Women certainly do not want to be denied it if a privilege, nor evade it if a duty. Every advance in civilization means responsibility as well as privilege. Citizenship implies responsibility. Women are ready to assume the burdens as well as the benefits of citizenship."

The programme will cover a field ranging from intimate problems of the league's work to discussion of world peace, governmental issues of the day, women in politics, child labor legislation, educational problems, social hygiene measures, efficiency in government, living costs, uniform laws and women-in-industry.

LAKEFIELD FIREMEN GAVE CARD PARTY

Large Attendance and Jolly Evening Spent—Personal Paragraphs.

LAKEFIELD, Feb. 23.—The card party under the auspices of the Volunteer Fire Brigade on Thursday night in the Memorial Hall was the first card party held in the auditorium of the hall and judging by its success one can safely predict another very soon after Easter. In spite of several counter attractions and the prevalence of lagrippe, there was a large crowd. Committees of ladies had charge of the card tables and arranged the games. Mrs. J. C. Smith and Mrs. H. J. Stuart were the committee for the bridge tables and Mrs. T. Waldon and Mrs. Stenner for the euchre. The majority played euchre and fourteen tables made the game intersting and jolly and the merry laughter was a certain indication of good fun. There were two tables of five hundred and four of bridge, and all players appeared very much interested. Supper was served at 12 o'clock under the direction of Mrs. W. J. Webster, the convenor of the refreshment committee, after which Fire Chief Webster presented the prizes for the various games. Dr. and Mrs. J. C. Smith won the prizes for bridge, Mrs. E. H. Northey and Mr. N. A. Moore for five hundred, and Mrs. Dummitt and Mr. W. G. Morrison for euchre. Mr. J. C. Ridpath won the consolation prize in the latter game.

The evening was brought to a close by a jolly little dance, for which Mr. G. G. Connell kindly furnished the music.

The success of this card party reflects great credit on the executive ability of the Fire Brigade, as they went to a great deal of trouble for the occasion, and it adds another to the long list of pleasant evenings for which they are responsible.

Personal Mention.

Mr. Bruce Ridpath, of Toronto, is visiting his brother, Mr. J. W. Ridpath.

Miss Mary Mackenzie has returned from a visit to friends in Toronto.

WEMBLEY CAN SEAT 140,000 AT ENGLISH FOOTBALL CLASSIC

To prepare for the great crowd which the final for the Association Football Cup in England is expected to dra wto Wembley Stadium, improvements have just been completed whereby the seating capacity has been increased by 15,000, from 125,000 to 140,000 the additional seats being held at 5 shillings for the benefit of the public. The date for the final tie has been set for April 25, and to prevent overcrowding admission will again be by ticket only. The expectation of a record-breaking crowd is based on the fact that the attendance at the first round cup matches was larger than it was last year and on the added fact that this interest was maintained in the second round contests recently played, the official returns showing that 475,205 persons paid £33,783 to see the sixteen matches.

A BAD COLD DEVELOPED INTO BRONCHITIS

Mrs. Levi Ogden, Amherst Shore, N.S., writes:—"My baby girl had a very bad cold which turned to bronchitis, and she could not sleep at night for the coughing. I gave her everything I could think of to relieve her, but nothing seemed to do her any good, and she was not getting any better. I was advised, by a friend, to try

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP

I did so, and after giving her a few doses I saw good effects so I kept on with it. I gave her two bottles, and her cough soon left her, and now she is as well as can be. I cannot praise 'Dr. Wood's' enough; it is certainly a wonderful medicine."

SALOON "SANDWICH" FAILS

Despite "Supper," British Court Penalizes Drinks Out of Hours.

LONDON, Feb. 23—The "property sandwich," which was once famous at Coney Island has received a knockout blow in this country.

The Magistrates at Brighton have just fined a saloon keeper $50 and her barkeeper $5 because they served intoxicating drinks to customers after hours on the excuse that they had bought a "supper" consisting of two small sandwiches.

The plain clothes men who got the evidence said they spent more than eight shillings on drinks and only a shilling for one round of sandwiches for two.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

REMEMBERS BIG STORM

The Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I remember the violent windstorm Mr. Peters speaks of over 50 years ago when the bridge over the gully on George near Dublin was lifted up bodily and blown on the street. As Mr. James Clegg, cabinet market was passing over it and was crushed. I had parted with him only a short time before he reached it.

ED. COURTNEY.

The Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I beg to advise that canvassers selling a book entitled "Christ's Object Lessons" represent the Seventh Day Adventist Denomination, according to Mr. C. F. McVagh, president of the Eastern Canada Union Conference of that body, who, in the Eastern Canadian Messenger, Oshawa February 10, 1925, says:

"February 14th to 28th is the date fixed by the General Conference for a forward step in paying the debt on our denominational institutions. The plan is to have each leader sell not less than two relief books and each lay member an average of only one relief book, turning all the proceeds above actual cost into the debt paying fund. In the Eastern Canadian Union Conference that would mean more than $2,000 to apply on debts."

Very sincerely yours,
W. M. ROCHESTER,
General Secretary.

ST. ANDREW'S PRESBYTERIAN

Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—An article on "Church Union" appeared in your paper on the 23rd day of January last, under the heading "Church Union in Peterborough Presbytery," and over the name of one who signed himself "Presbyter."

In so far as the above letter referred to the Presbyterian churches at the villages of Colborne and Lakeport, it was entirely untrue.

The matter has just recently been brought before the Board of Trustees of these churches, and we hasten to write in reply, trusting you will kindly co-operate in our desire to have a regrettable mistake corrected by giving this letter the same prominence that was given the letter above referred to.

That part of "Presbyter's letter we wish to deal with here is as follows:

"Of the five churches which have gone 'Anti,' three, Colborne, Lakeport, and ——, are augmented or aid-receiving churches. They are unable to pay their ministers' salaries, and every year unblushingly extend their hands and accept grants of money from the Home Mission Office of our Church in Toronto to help them pay a meagre salary to their ministers."

The above quotation is not only very unjust, but altogether untrue, and we greatly regret the necessity of having to answer it at this late date.

In justice to the members of our churches, we must say that our respective financial affairs are in a surprisingly good condition for small congregations. We have never at any time had to ask, nor ever thought of asking any outside help or aid whatsoever.

Our churches, we are pleased to say, are self-supporting and able to contribute their little bit towards the good work in both home and foreign fields.

Taking this opportunity to thank you, we are,

Yours very truly,
The Board of Trustees, Colborne and Lakeport Presbyterian Churches.

APPROVES NEW LIGHTING

The Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir—As one of the fortunate citizens, that is, a resident of Water Street, I would like to recommend to the citizens of other parts of the town that they visit Water Street or George Street North and view the new lighting system that has been installed.

The Utilities Commission and their manager, Mr. H. O. Fiske, have certainly worked out a good system. They appear to have the proper heights for perfect distribution, the shade or distributor of the light casts a long beam and distributes it to some distance. The other night I made a test and there was light shining from George Street into the rear of my house, some 164 feet, and as the lights are placed some 100 feet apart it means that there is perfect distribution of the light past the centre of distances.

I have heard a number of citibens of this district make very complimentary remarks on the new system, therefore, I would suggest that other districts take an interest in this lighting, with the idea that our town abandon the old system which was only put in as a temporary system during the war.

Yours truly,
R. E. LAYFIELD.

FERGUSON AND THE O.T.A.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—We are in the throes of the final struggle between those who demand freedom of conscience and those who impose their will on others. As there is no Hansard for the Ontario House, the following, from an editorial of The Toronto Star, will show the Ferguson government's position. There can be no doubt that we are nearing the time of an outbreak in the province. The spanking process has gone too far.

Mr. Nickle's Speech.

"The keynote of Mr. Nickle's speech in the legislature on Tuesday appears to have been his declaration that he was 'entirely sympathetic with the workingman who wanted his beer.' From that promise any man might proceed naturally to make a speech such as came from Mr. Ferguson's attorney-general.

"It was for the benefit of the workingman who wanted his beer, and for the sake of his home and family, that the people of Ontario voted out the bar. Mr. Nickle, in championing beer for the workingman, has set himself squarely in opposition to the principle of prohibition and become an apologist for the bar with all its attendant evils. Indeed, the policy of permitting 4.49 per cent. beer to be sold at all hours and in all places—grocery stores, refreshment booths, restaurants and standard hotels—may bring on Ontario evils that will be worse in some respects than those which attended the open bar-room.

"Mr. Nickle found all the fault that anyone could find with the O.T.A. He considered it too drastic because it drove people to drink bootleg whisky. It was too generous because it allowed native wines of high alcoholic content to be sold and permitted people to get large quantities of liquor from druggists and government dispensaries on doctors' prescriptions. It did not prevent 'people taking out permits from the federal authorities for making home-brewed beer, nor prevent shortcircuiting by means of the right to import liquor falsely declared to be for export. He regretted that most of the support for the O.T.A. came from women and people in rural districts. And he said that people who want liquor were becoming whisky or alcohol drunkards."

An immense audience listened in Massey Hall to a highly-paid lecturer tell them that alcohol has no food value. They applauded uproariously at the announcement. Probably not ten per cent. of those present had brains enough to know that water has no food value either, nor has insulin, nor, for that matter, any vitamin, without which we cannot continue even to exist.

It seems, when one good turn is made, it then deserves another. Of course, I have the radio in mind. A man will swing one dial 'round, and then he'll swing the other to see how many stations he can find.

The missus sits a-knittin' while her husband has his fun. She's hoping he will catch some music pretty. 'Tis true he gives her bits of everything beneath the sun, from this and that and then some other city.

But shucks, who likes to listen to the starting of a band; then have it switch to someone who is talking? And yet, that's just what happens —with a twisting of the hand, the mister keeps the radio a-balking.

"Oh, mom, I've got New Jersey —I can hear it just as plain." And mother smiles encouragement to dad. And then, "Why, here's a station that is coming in from Maine. That makes the twenty-second place I've had."

'Tis thus the evening passes and friend hubby boasts success. But mother, in reply, just sits and frowns. Says she, "I think the evening's been a grand and tiresome mess 'cause all I've heard is

IRISH SMILING, EVEN IN FAMINE

Shortage of Potatoes Acute, But Starvation Specter is Kept Off.

Children Romp As Usual.

(By Henry J. Richmond.)

DUBLIN, Ireland, Feb. 23.—The blight of famine again is on Ireland. The cry for aid has come suddenly, but the evil itself is not merely of today or of yesterday; it has threatened for more than a year. Twice the potato crops have failed, and now the stores of fuel are depleted and can not be replaced. Winter and famine walk together, and between them they bring such a burden of misery as the Irish have not known since 1879.

Excessive rainfall is the cause of the trouble. The spring of 1923 got away to a bad start because it was so dry and cold. The potatoes that were planted did not sprout until late and the straggling plants had no vitality. Then came continuous deluge, and the few potatoes that matured rotted in the fields.

The last year repeated the misfortune, and now over large areas there are farmers' families whose staple food supplies are exhausted. They are living from day to day on unnourishing and unwholesome morsels or on such chance bits as charity happens to bestow

The same cause that deprived the people of food prevented their gathering fuel. There is no timber in the famine district, but a very satisfactory fuel is found in the peat cut from the bogs. This, in normal seasons, is piled on the ground until it has been died by the sun and wind. For two years the farmers have cut the peat and piled it, but the rains would not let it dry, and it lies everywhere in sodden piles on the bogs with all the good washed out of it.

Money Famine, Too.

Now this were enough, but it is not the full account of these poor people's misfortunes For money has been lacking, too, that formerly they were able to earn. In years past when harvests were good in England and Scotland the young men from the west of Ireland used to cross over to help the British and Scottish farmers But there was no need for extra labor at harvest time this year or last, and many, both in England and in Scotland, were unemployed .

And so the people of western Ireland are conserving carefully what little fuel they have and in thousands of cottages there are no fires at all throughout the day And many are living on insufficient food and are in dire need of clothing. This is the report of authorities connected with the Free State government, and like conditions are recognized by the Northern government, as existing in certain western districts of the "Six Counties".

The area is officially defined as lying west of a line drawn from Malin Head in the north to Bantry in the south. On the wall of an office in the Free State Local Government Ministry hangs a huge map with the famine district blackened. These black sections constitute large areas of Kerry, Galway, Donegal and Leitrim and in these it is declared that the fuel supply generally is far below normal and the distress for want of both fuel and food is acute.

Other Districts.

There are districts also in Cavan, Roscommon, Sligo, Mayo and Cork where famine already has set in and the fuel supply is by no means satisfactory.

Both the Free State government and that of the Northern Counties have taken steps to extend relief. The Free State has appropriated the equivalent of nearly $2,500,000 which is being expended in distribution of fuel and food and for public improvements which will give employment. As might be expected, the children are the chief sufferers, and the government has taken practical measures to reach them by distributing a free meal a day to school pupils. It is estimated that about 15,000 children five days of the week get a ration of bread and cocoa. So far this relief has been brought to children in certain districts of Galway, Kerry and Donegal.

In addition, there are three voluntary relief agencies that are soliciting funds and doing valuable service. There are the Lady Dudley Nurses' Association, the Irish Save the Children Fund and the United Irishwomen. The facts as stated are verified by reports of these organizations by official statistics and by results of many private investigations.

The exact conditions, however, are not easy to make clear to American readers. I have traversed a large distance of Galway indicated by government authorities as one of those hardest hit by dearth and famine. The result of such an investigation is a disconcerting puzzle.

Poverty Habitual.

In the first place, this is a land of famine. Poverty, want, and even hunger are its habitual state. Judged by all the standards that prevail in America, these people live all and always in a state of abject destitution. They had been poverty stricken so long that they are inured to it, and in a certain crude, inexplicable way, they seem even to thrive on it.

Few of the houses of the Western Ireland peasants are superior to the shelters provided by Michigan farmers for their pigs. Families of 8, 10, 12 or more live in one-room cottages. The floors are of trodden earth, the beds frequently are but heaps of straw covered with a few rags; there is no stove or grate, but a meagre fire of turf smolders on the ground at one end of the room beneath the opening of a huge chimney.

A bit of land, ranging from the size of an ordinary garden plot to perhaps five or six acres, in the case of the "well-to-do," is the main dependence for the family's living. On this the potatoes are grown, and sometimes a few garden vegetables, though potatoes are the main article of diet. Those who are particularly fortunate may keep a little, shaggy Kerry cow. This is a species of opulence. The various gradations down to mediocrity are marked by the possession of a pig or a sheep or a few chickens. Such animals are highly treasured and frequenly are treated as members of the family and permitted to enjoy the shelter and warmth of the family quarters.

Beasts of Burden

A few families enjoy the luxury of possessing a beast of burden. A donkey can be bought for the equivalent of about two or three dollars, and the best costs no more than $5. Few are equipped with harnesses and carts. Usually the little beasts tag along after their masters bearing burdens strapped to their backs.

There is much diversity in the dress of the people. Homespun is common. There are spinning wheels in many of the cottages and a weaver in every village. Many of the women wear quaint local costumes, the style of which never changes, But a great many are in rags, or in garments that have been patched until they give no clue as to their original color or texture. This is particularly true of the children. Boys and girls alike wear skirts and all sorts of misfits until they are 10 or 12 years old, and many go with bare feet the year around. a

The practice of going barefooted, however, is not confined to children. Neither does it seem wholly to indicate the extreme of poverty Everywhere on the roads are met middle-aged women barefooted, though otherwise respectably clad. One girl of perhaps 16 or 17 confessed on being questioned that she had never owned a pair of shoes. It must be remembered, however, that the climate of Ireland is not that of Michigan, though in latitude the island is much farther north. So far this year the ground in Ireland has not been frozen and the weather the greater part of the time has been quite like that of Michigan April There is much rain and an occasion snow flurry, but the snow seldom lies on the ground more than a few hours.

They Seem Happy.

These, then, are externals which are the badge of poverty, but it by no means follows that they result in wretchedness. These people, judged by American standards, are pitiably poor, but to all appearances they are quite as happy as the average of working people in the country districts of America.

Nor do they appear to be starving In a days drive through a district indicated by the authorities as one of the worst, not a person was seen who appeared to be greatly emaciated. On the average, the children looked as rosy and as well nourished as the children of the rural districts of Michigan. Many of them were hopelessly ragged and fully half of them were barefooted, but not one of them was heard to cough or had the appearance of suffering from the cold. Their little bare feet squashing through the ever-present mud, they showed by their rosy color that a healthy circulation was fighting against the chill. And yet these very children rejoiced in the big mug of cocoa and chunk of bread that a geneficient government was providing to keep them from starvation.

Nearly all the people, when questioned, complained of the hard times. They told of losing their potatoes and of the peat they had cut that would not dry. The peat, indeed, was to be seen, lying in heaps or scattered about the bogs. It should have been gathered months ago, and now much of it is so badly washed out that it is practically worthless even it were dried

Many of the cottages had no fires, while in others the pitiful handful of peat beneath the pot on the hearth showed how carefully the little store had to be conserved.

The efforts of the government to supplement the fuel supply, though well intentioned, have not been very efficient. Even the government could not get peat. Curiously, although this form of fuel is generally used over large districts of Ireland, it is not a commodity of commerce. There are no general markets and no quotations for peat. Occasionally a farmer brings a small load of it to town and peddles it, but no one knows where to buy it in any considerable quantity.

The only fuel available in commercial supply is coal, and the government has distributed about 6,000 tons of this, selling it to the distressed people at the nominal price of sixpence per bag. But few of the cabins are equipped to burn coal. The peat, piled on the mud floor of the cabin, burns merrily, but no amount of patient coaxing will persuade coal to glow under such conditions. And so much of the coal the government has provided lies untouched outside the cabins. Accordingly, the government is trying to furnish wood, where coal is found wholly unusable and about 1,000 tons of wood have been sent for distribution.

In spite of all that can be done, there is bound to be much distress before the winter is over. This is confidently asserted by those who ought to be most familiar with all the circumstances. But for the comforts of those who are personally and intimately interested in the famine-stricken districts of Ireland, it may be said that there is no evidence that the people are dying of starvation.

Shows Decrease in Italy's Debt.

ROME, Feb. 23.—For the first time the Italian official gazette has published a special supplement on the Treasury situation in English and Italian. It shows the public debt has decreased from 93,163,000,000 lire to 91,770,000,000 from June 30, 1924, to January 31, 1925. In January of this year the debt showed a decrease of 222,000,000 lire. In the same seven months income exceeded the estimate by 1,084,000,000 lire.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The Wreck Commands

In single file the sheriff's cavalcade rode across the meadow, back toward the broken woods from which Sally and the Wreck had emerged at dawn. Sally was in the lead, because she was supposed to remember the trail. Bob Wells took the rear place, mounted again on his own horse.

Sally had carried a bold, contemptuous front in her colloquy with the sheriff, but she was not light-hearted. On the surface of things, the Wreck's case presented unpleasant possibilities. If Jerome Underwood wanted to push matters, as she was afraid he would, the Wreck might find difficulty in getting himself clear.

The prospect of going to jail did not disturb the Wreck. He did not take it very seriously. The main point was getting Sally back to peace and happiness. Whenever they got through with him he would go back to Pittsburg, where he might forget about things—or might not. But before that everything must be made straight and smooth for Sally Morgan. Engaged to her? He laughed at himself. Not that there was any mirth in it, but it was a form of self-mockery for which he was in the mood.

The cavalcade was in the woods, where Sally found it easier to follow the trail than she expected.

Presently they came to a splitting of the trail and Sally could not be certain of her course.

Then she came to a second spot where there was a confusion of footprints and hoofprints, and this she knew to be the place where she and the Wreck had discovered their mounts.

In the end, retracing of a wandering trail brought them to a place that Sally and the Wreck instantly recognized. It was the camp of the three-man gang. There was little left but soaked embers, but there was no opportunity for mistake.

The sheriff dismounted and examined the place attentively. He listened closely while Sally explained everything, including the affair of Denver and the thunderstorm. She seemed to stress the part the Wreck had played.

The Wreck left the telling all to her. When the sheriff began walking to and fro, studying the deserted camp, the Wreck found himself side by side with Sally. It was their first proximity since they had mounted the horses at the foot of the hill, miles back. He moved uneasily in his saddle.

He glanced at her, because it seemed difficult not to do so. Sally smiled encouragingly. But the smile robbed him of his wits.

"It's a nice day," he said.

She glanced up at the sky, through the tree-tops. It was blue and laughing now.

"Beautiful," she answered.

"Not so warm as yesterday."

"No; not so warm."

He made a nervous gesture that meant nothing in particular.

"But it's likely to be warmer to-morrow," he blurted.

"Yes," said Sally.

"And it probably won't rain."

"Probably not."

The conversation had exhausted every thing he dared to say. But she would not let him alone.

"I think," she said, "that the rest of the summer won't be quite so hot. It gets cooler at night, you know."

"Uh-huh."

"But, of course, we can't tell. We might have a hot wave."

He looked at her suspiciously.

"Still, we might not have it," she added. "It's all luck."

"Yes; luck," he nodded.

Now she laughed outright.

"Henry, please don't be absurd. Scold me for something; jump all over me."

"You're all right," said the Wreck, lamely.

"That's not much, but it's better than the weather," said Sally.

He shook his head irritably. He was miserable at heart and he knew he was ridiculous.

The merriment faded from Sally's face; the look in her eyes softened. Poor Wreck!

"Just forget it," she said. "I didn't mean anything."

"Oh, that's all right."

"Thanks, old timer."

From the deserted camp the quartet, captors and prisoners, rode over to where the flivver had been left. It was ridiculously easy to find it by daylight. When the Wreck saw the car he went into a black rage.

The flivver was lying on its side in a clump of bushes with two wheels in the air. It was plain enough that Nosey's gang had undertaken to turn it around and head it back toward the main road, but the turning room was limited, and the surface was a hillside, and the thing had gone over for want of a skilled hand.

The Wreck climbed down from his horse and walked around his beloved car, furious but saying nothing. Yet so far as he could see, there was nothing radically wrong with the flivver.

"Is it very much damaged, Henry?" asked Sally.

"No," he answered, shortly.

"Will it run?"

"Of course."

They were still examining the flivver when two men came down the abandoned road and hailed the sheriff. They were the other half of Bob Well's posse.

"Good thing you got them horses," said one of them to Bob Wells. "We need 'em. Bill and me have been scoutin' around while you was gone and we've hit a hot trail. But there wasn't any use tryin' to foller it on foot. If we're quick we'll nail 'em before sundown."

"I've nailed one of them already," said the sheriff, with a glance at the Wreck.

"Who? Him?" The newcomers stared briefly. "Well, maybe. Only he don't belong with this bunch we've got located. We better get started, Bob."

But the sheriff was not ready to start. The news from the dismounted half of his posse put him in a quandary. It was plain enough that what Sally and the Wreck said about the gang was true. He related what he knew about the Wreck and asked for an opinion.

One of the sheriff's assistants was a middle-aged man of solid appearance. He studied the Wreck with shrewd eyes.

"Well, I don't know anything about him," he said, "but I know we've got some other folks located that we want bad. And you've missin' the chance of your life, Bob, if you don't get started."

Bob Wells was rapidly reaching the same conclusion. But what was he going to do about the Wreck? He could not take him along on a man hunt, for there was no spare horse. He did not believe that he really wanted him after all, but he hated to let him go, particularly when he looked at Sally Morgan. Even the man who had been with him during the hunt on the hillside acted as though he did not regard Henry Williams as a person of particular importance, so far as the law was concerned.

"Sally," said the sheriff, suddenly. "I'm going to make you a deputy."

"What for?"

"I'm going to put this man in your custody."

Sally shook her head.

"Oh, no; no you don't," she said. "Henry Williams is his own boss, so far as I am concerned."

The sheriff reddened.

"I'll need those horses for my men," he said, with a nod at Sally and the Wreck. "We'll try to come back and give you a lift later."

Sally dismounted. She was elated. She had never believed from the beginning that Bob Wells would risk taking the Wreck to jail. But the Wreck remained in his saddle, staring, at the sheriff.

"You'll get this horse when I get my car running, and not before," he said. "Think you can leave a lady stranded out here in the woods, do you?"

"Get down," said the sheriff, advancing.

"Wait," remarked the Wreck.

He indulged in a deliberate pause.

"Sheriff," he said, "I'm a nervous man and I'm apt to be impulsive and do things without considering. But I've got this particular thing all figured out to a hair, and I was cool and calm when I figured it. Just as sure as you go off and leave Sally Morgan and me stranded in the woods, I'm going to make the state of Montana too small to hold you."

"I'll start campaigning this county, and when I get through with it I'll take the next one, and I'll go through every county in the state, if it takes me the rest of my life. All I'll do is to tell the truth. I'll tell them how you chased your own girl for days and days and didn't know it. I'll tell them that when she needed a horse she took yours and left half your posse on foot. I'll tell them how you let a real stick-up gang go about its business under your nose while you went off chasing your own friends and acquaintances. I'll tell them about the cook you were going to marry, but didn't. I'll tell them every little thing, from start to finish."

He paused again, for it was an exceptionally long speech for the Wreck. The sheriff glowered at him.

"And if you figure you can keep on being a sheriff in the state of Montana after I get through," concluded the Wreck, "then I'll give you a chance to find out by running for sheriff myself."

Bob Wells hesitated. After all, he was a pretty good sheriff, as Sally always said, and when there was a gang loose in his county he knew his duty.

"And, of course," said Sally, speaking up in a clear voice, "I'll back up every word that Henry Williams says."

The sheriff swallowed his pride.

"What do you want me to do?" he asked, looking at the Wreck.

"I want you and your men to get busy and put that flivver on her feet and help get her out of here, so that Miss Morgan and myself can go about our business."

"Yes," affirmed Sally.

Bob Wells turned to his men, and caught one of them grinning.

"We'll have to hustle," he said. "It won't take long."

CHAPTER XXV.

—And The Flivver Rolls.

The Wreck bossed the job. He took an arrogant tone, particularly toward the sheriff, and Sally was glad. She was glad because the bossing job gave the Wreck something to do, and in its performance he forgot his embarrassment about other things, at least temporarily.

He was terse and confident in his commands. Not a finger would he lift himself; he had four men working for him. It took their united strength to put the flivver on four wheels. Bob Wells wanted to get it over with and be on the trail again.

"Not that way!" called the Wreck sharply. "Want to buckle a wheel for me? You can't push her sideways"

Sally listened to this with a sense of satisfaction.

The flivver was back in the abandoned road, but Henry Williams was not through with his helpers. They expected that he would fill up the gasoline tank, turn the crank and say goodby. But he said it would have to be rolled for quite a distance, perhaps all the way to the main road. The sheriff scowled.

"You ran her in here, didn't you?" he inquired. "Why can't you run her out?"

"Ran her in here in the dark," said the Wreck. "Didn't know what chances I was running. Won't run 'em again. Roll her."

"We haven't time."

"No? Well, I have."

So they rolled her. The Wreck condescended to sit in the flivver while they rolled the thing up a heavy grade, with Bob Wells sweating and cursing under his breath and the members of his posse silently bending themselves to the humiliating task.

On the down grades the Wreck dismounted and let the posse do the steering. Then it was that he found himself walking behind, with Sally Morgan at his side. Proximity gave him a queer thrill. He stole glances at her, when he thought she was unaware of it. Engaged! He blushed whenever he remembered it. Of course, it was a mere makeshift. But there was no illusion about the breaking of her engagement to Bob Wells, if it had ever really existed. And with that broken, Sally was free, affianced to nobody, except theoretically to himself. Perhaps it would be necessary to have a formal talk about it. He dreaded the thought. He was not a coward in most things, but in this he was an utter craven.

It made matters a great deal worse because he had achieved a discovery—he did not know how he was going to get along without Sally Morgan to take care of him. It was one of those insidious influences that fasten a grip before you are aware of it. He leaned on her. She might not know it, but he did. Of course, he might shake it off after he returned to Pittsburg; but he could not be sure. He walked behind the flivver in a pleasant but forbidden dream, with Sally walking at his side.

"Hey, you boneheads!" He would rouse himself like that. "Keep her in the road. What are you trying to do; put her up a tree?"

Then he would look at Sally, his mood would soften and the old embarrassment would descend on him like a shroud.

"We'll get out of here all right, Sally. Don't you worry."

"I'm not worrying."

"I mean about——" He caught himself.

"About what, Henry?"

"About afterwards."

"Oh!"

Sally had long silences herself.

She wished it were all over; that Bob Wells and his posse would hurry up and take themselves off and vanish absolutely out of the picture. She found no joy whatever in the peonage to which the sheriff and his posse were subjected; she believed that most of it was unnecessary, even from the standpoint of punishment. But at the same time she did not want to be left alone with Henry Williams. That was the woman of it.

"Don't you worry," repeated the Wreck, suddenly bold. "You don't have to—Hey! Don't you know which way to turn the wheels on a curve? Want to upset her again? Want to wreck her?"

Sally looked at the Wreck.

"I don't have to what?" she asked.

"Oh." He was caught unawares. "Why, you don't have to—That is, unless—That's not it, either. What I mean is, you're not really engaged."

It was a reckless speech and he felt instantly that he ought not to have made it. Sally was looking straight ahead.

"Of course not," she said, in a low voice.

The Wreck cursed himself. He knew that he was clumsy, and yet he was desperately groping for an understanding.

"What I mean," he said, "is that it's working backwards, if you can understand. First we were supposed to be married. Then that's off. Then we're supposed to be just engaged. And then that's—For the love of Mike! Don't put your shoulder against that mudguard. You'll bend it! Get hold of the body. And shove. Shove Don't they grow any brains in Montana?"

The sheriff and the posse glared—and shoved.

"And then?" remarked Sally.

The Wreck remembered that he had started something.

"Why, then the engagement's off, I suppose," he said, as he glared at the posse. "Which leaves everything exactly where it was at the start."

There! He had reached the subject at last. He had dealt with it boldly, perhaps roughly but he had not dodged it. Sally's eyes had a queer, uncertain look. There was something blurring, even when she looked at an object as plain and familiar as the flivver. Silly, of course but she could not get the blur out of her eyes unless she rubbed them, and she scorned that, with the Wreck at her elbow.

"Let go of that steering wheel!" commanded the Wreck. "Can't you see that she'll stay in the ruts? All you've got to do is to get busy and shove. You act like you were pushing a five-ton truck. No. No! The other way. Are you trying to bust a spring? If you haven't got any brains can't you have a little beef?"

He came back from the bossing job with a glance in the direction of Sally. What? She was crying? He could feel his soul squirm. She was crying, but it was so unobtrusive, so nearly tearless, that the Wreck knew he was not expected to observe it.

"I'm sorry everything has gone busted," he said.

"Oh, nothing much is busted," said Sally, quickly. "That's all right."

"Oh."

He stole another glance. She was not crying, after all at least, not now. Strange people, women. You never could tell how long they were going to stick to one thing. Still, if there was anything he could do for Sally Morgan, all she had to do was to say the word.

"Of course, we don't need to tell the sheriff it's all off," he said, suddenly.

"No?"

"What's the use of giving him the satisfaction? We could just keep on——"

LARGE ATTENDANCE AT ALL SERVICES

St. Paul's Church Well Attended Despite Weather Conditions Sunday.

The services yesterday in St. Pauls Church were marked with large attendances, though the weather conditions in the evening were rather nasty for walking.

Rev. J. G. Lewis, B. A., was the preacher, and in the morning dealt with the 23rd Psalm the discourse in the evening being on Daniel in the den of lions. The treatment of both subjects was very pleasing to the hearers, making plain the ideals which were to be followed along the paths of right and truth.

The choir loft was filled at both services, and under M. B. Chenhall, the music was a bright part of the day's worship. A few have left the ranks of the choir, it was said, but these places have been filled by members from the other choirs.

The sabbath school work has not suffered, since the vacancies caused by the withdrawal of teachers and scholars have been and will be filled from Sabbath to Sabbath.

It is expected that the great work hitherto carried on in St. Paul's church will be continued with even greater vigour and success, in the days to come.

Many Presbyterians from the two other churches have already allied themselves with St. Paul's and others will through time find places in the membership.

AN APPLE A DAY

Tomato is Good Substitute If Tired of Apples—Figs Good.

That old maxim, "An apple a day keeps the doctor away," is not just a meaningless jingle, thinks Mrs. Mann of Anytown.

There is quite a bit of truth in it.

But if one becomes tired of apples, nature is kind and offers many other varieties of fruit from her bounteous stores.

The tomato is a good substitute, and it may be eaten raw or cooked. Unlike many other fruits the tomato loses none of its vitamin C. The acid in the tomato takes care of that.

Dried fruits, such as prunes, dates, figs and raisins, are valuable for mineral elements, particularly iron. These may be used freely where economy is necessary, but they should not be used to the entire exclusion of fresh fruit.

Nearly everyone likes fruit. So there is little need to urge its use. And it is good that this is so.

Because fruit helps to regulate the bowels and to stimulate a feeling of general well-being.

Onions Still Speak for Themselves

Have Figured in the Records from Earliest Times. Canada Ships Onions to Australia and Cuba. Potato and Cheese Trade Reaching Big Figures.

Imagine yourself a waiter in a restaurant taking from a sane looking individual an order like this:—

"With the beef steak you might bring me a dish of various species of Allium, a genus of the lily family; specifically A Cepa, a bulbous rooted biennial herb, with hollow radical leaves and a leafless, hollow, usually swelling stem, which becomes an umbel of small six-segmented belle-shaped white or pinkish flowers, replaced in some places by bulblets. Remarkable for its strong odor."

Dependent upon your state of mind you would either put in a call for the police, keeping a nervous eye on the nearby cutlery and the client, pending their arrival, or you would firmly insist upon an elucidation. The probabilities would be in favor of the customer explaining that he had merely given you the scientific terminology for "onion." Thereafter your respect for that immensely popular if odoriferous article of diet might be greatly increased.

The onion has been cultivated for so many centuries that there is no definite knowledge of its original form. Books and records so ancient that archivists speak of them with reverent awe, make reference to the onion. It is probably a native of Western Asia and adjacent parts of Africa, according to the explorers who have tried to track it to its lair.

Egypt knew onions long before Cleopatra and Mark Antony staged their drama. Whether either of these noted characters playfully accused the other of eating them, as is occasionally the way of lovers, is not a matter of history over which sweethearts of to-day may wax jocular. There are, however, investigators who say that the onion was accorded divine honors in Egypt. Others aver that this was not the case; the onion just failing of such distinction. The gods of the day may have been willing to agree to an honorary title for this "genus of the lily family." But when it came to receiving it in the bosom of the family, so to speak, they evidently put out the flippant sign, "An onion a day keeps everybody away."

"Mr. Chairman, of course there is great strength in some varieties of onions."

Health Builders Too

Onions have long been credited with medicinal properties. Many an adult's recollections of his first introduction to them is associated with sore throat, a favorite cure for which was a neck poultice of onions. Some folks used them raw and some insisted, as others do today, that they must be boiled in order to bring out the strength. Curative and restorative properties are also claimed for them if taken internally, a belief that is an added enjoyment for unnumbered hosts of lovers of the onion as an edible.

There are few men and women who do not know a friend, or who have not heard of a friend of a friend of theirs who has been cured of some ailment by a steady use of onions. It takes courage to pursue such a course if one is socially inclined, or an active personality in business. But the confirmed onion eater for health's sake is as enthusiastic a propagandist and booster as a radio fan. One of these who boasts that he has been snatched from an early grave by taking to onions as a last resort, presented the Editor with an "Ode to Onions." Omitting the prologue and epilogue, and a few stanzas that appear to be mere stems, the heart of it is found in these odoriferous lines:—

For all the ills that trouble you,
From headaches unto bunions
There is a sure and safe relief—
'Tis onions friends, just onions.

Take onions at the close of day,
When stars their vigil keep,
They'll help you chase dull care away
With slumber, sweet and deep.

Eat onions when the morning comes,
Thus start a perfect day
At noon you'd better eat some more
To help you on your way.

There was a time when I was weak
But onions made me strong,
So can you wonder that I sing
Their praises all day long?

That the onion does possess medicinal properties, as well as qualities that appeal to the sense of taste, is generally admitted. If these were all that onionians claim for them, there need be no sick men, women, or children in any country where the onion grows.

Of course there is great strength in some varieties of the onion. Who that has been raised in a typical Canadian family has not had convincing experiences? Menfolk escape many of these: it was a clever housewife who insisted that if her husband's unwavering love for boiled onions was to be appeased, he should never try to escape helping her to peel them. His unbidden and unwelcome tears shed in fulfilling his part of the arrangement, have convinced him that the wife's part of the marriage contract is not the easiest.

Export of Canadian Onions

Science constantly amazes the world with its discoveries and progresses. Until it takes the odor from onions that edible must continue to run the gauntlet of the humorists real and otherwise. Onions, however, are assuming a new importance in this country. It can hardly be said that, as yet, they are another and a strong link in the bonds of Empire. They may attain that status. Canadians shipped one hundred and thirty tons of them to Australia recently. They arrived in fine condition at the end of the Commonwealth's own season, and when the storage stocks were nothing much to brag about in respect to quality. Consequently they found a ready market at from thirty-six to forty pounds a ton—that is roughly from one hundred and eighty to two hundred dollars.

This is said to have been the first large shipment of onions from the Dominion to the Commonwealth. It is taken for granted that it will not be the last. Supply and demand will be the decisive factors, naturally. But a market that was once a good one for the United States is now, apparently, open to this country. It needs to be studied and catered to. Any idea that it is just clamoring for Canadian onions and will not be satisfied until it gets them, should have no place in the lexicon of those who want to get in on it.

The same thing applies to Cuba, where there is a good demand at the present for onions from the Dominion. They are being shipped in considerable quantities from southwestern Ontario via the busy port of St. John, whence Canadian potatoes, and particularly the famous seed potatoes of New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, are going in great quantities to Cuba as well as to Britain.

His unbidden and unwelcome tears have convinced him.

Potatoes and onions—that is a good combination. They are opening new avenues of trade for Canada and might be made to develop into still larger aggregates. Most of the provinces grow potatoes; Ontario, Quebec, and British Columbia are the chief growers of onions. Just why those three should have larger areas devoted to the onion than any of the other provinces is not clear.

With so much land as Canada has there does not seem to be much excuse for the importation of onions from Britain, the United States, Bermuda, Egypt, New Zealand, and Australia, as was the case last year. This country could pretty well supply all of its own demand if it was determined to do so. Other countries can send us some early varieties before the domestic growths of them are ready for marketing. But there will always be some fluctuations of that kind so long as Canada cannot regulate its own climate.

The onions of Italy, Spain, Mexico, California and the Bermudas, are noted for their size and quality. Those of Brittany, Tripoli and Maderia are very popular in the British Isles ranking next to the varieties grown in Britain itself. Canada can grow practically all the varieties of onions, and in the opinion of experts, do so on a profitably commercial basis. She might cultivate a great export demand for them. At this time there may be some five or six thousand acres of land devoted to onion cultivation in Canada.

Potatoes, Cheese and Onions

Next to potatoes onions are the most common vegetable in the home and the demand for them steadily increases. The anomaly is presented of this country, in the face of an ever expanding domestic market, importing onions grown in foreign lands, and exporting quantities of the home grown.

To the potato there was devoted in the years from 1818 to 1923, an average of 745,000 acres in this country. The crop has usually found a market at home and abroad, though it has sometimes received hard knocks from tariff clubs, especially those wielded by the United States. The potato acreage and production in several provinces, has increased of late, and temporary set backs from one quarter are often counter-balanced by larger demands from another, or by the opening of new markets. An instance is the large shipments of potatoes to Britain during this season. This is said to be an entirely new departure, and Maritime provinces enterprise is given the credit for it.

What has been done and is being done in respect to potatoes may be accomplished in regard to onions. The Bermuda variety is a favorite, being exported far and wide from the Bermudas. It is the offspring of a plant from southern Europe and the seed is imported annually. Distance is the least of the obstacles in the trade. Growing the right kind of onions, shipping and marketing properly are the factors.

Southwestern Ontario is an area in which the commercial value of the onion has been proved beyond any questioning. Quebec and British Columbia are not a whit behind Ontario in their attention to a paying crop. What these provinces have done to build up the onion industry, if one may be permitted to use that term, is not their exclusive privilege, for the onion is easily adapted to a variety of soils in every province.

The recent shipments of Canadian onions to Australia may indeed mark a new area in our trade. Cheese goes well with onions. Who has not enjoyed cheese, onions and bread or crackers as a luncheon snack or a side dish? Canada's 1924 export of cheese is estimated at over one hundred and twenty-two million pounds! But the first known export shipment from this country was in 1865 and consisted of fifty boxes, containing a few hundred pounds. From 1865 to 1923 the aggregate export of Canadian cheese was somewhat over six billion five hundred and sixty million pounds, valued at over eight hundred and thirty million dollars! What mind could thoroughly grasp figures of such magnitude? Who would have dared to make a prediction of such an aggregate in trade when the first few boxes of cheese were sent from this country fifty-seven years ago?

Cheese and potatoes are two products in which Canada has won preeminence. It can add onions to the list by reasonable effort. The market for them is world wide; there is no reason why it should not know that Canada is very much of a factor in it.

It was a Welshman who brought a careless commentator to task for the remark that the leek and the onion are one, especially if the latter happens to be a Welsh onion. The last named, he quoted from an authority," is a native of Siberia. It resembles the leek in the absence of a distinct bulb, but differs from the leek in its hollow, onion-like leaves, which are cut like those of the shallot and used for flavoring. It is of dwarfer growth than the common onion, and has more clustered leaves."

He clinched his contention by quoting, "The leek is a culinary herb closely allied to the onion."

Canada has a variety of its own, action, the top or tree onion which, in t is book language of the scientific, "prod ement at at the summit of the stem ginning to- of flower and seeds, a clu ve caused as bulbs which are used for fore in various and as seeds for new pla according to

DISEASE BARRIER IN AFRICA HIDES ITS UNTAPPED WEALTH

Continent of Future Abounds in Untouched Treasure—Sanitation Problem.

ROMANCE ABOUNDS

Africa, the continent of the future, is still the Dark Continent. Four and one-half times the size of the United States, it abounds with untapped wealth! Africa—where a child was found a half-century ago playing with a pebble worth $100,000. Africa, where trees of ebony fall and rot. Africa, where millions in rubber and cocoa, hides and mahogany lie unheeded. There a radium more precious than the most priceless pearl, and a plateau of iron ore, an empire in itself, totally untouched. There is a region that the natives call "the Home of Copper," and in another region are the richest tin deposits in the world.

The mineral wealth of Africa is waiting for the enterprise of the white man. But the drawback to the white man is disease. It is estimated that 15,000,000 people have died on the Congo from sleeping sickness alone. Medical science, it would seem, has not been very successful as yet with Africa's stalking Nemesis. Medically she is still the Dark Continent.

If you take a density of population map of Africa and compare it with one of Europe, America or Asia you will immediately see that large parts of Africa are almost denuded of people. The reason is certainly not lack of food in the tropical regions of Africa, but simply the endemic and epidemic tropical diseases that have wiped out the people wholesale. These diseases have an evil habit of not limiting their devastations to the tropics; they appear in epidemic form in the temperate zone. For reasons of self-preservation, white men must take in hand the problem of Africa's sanitation.

Research Board Organized

To help in this work a board consisting of leading authorities on tropical medicine in America and Europe, and of certain business men, has just been incorporated for "Medical Research and Education in Africa." The members of this board are convinced that "humanity cannot permit this source of diseases, 'this open sore of Africa,' to infect the rest of the world in the future as in the days that are gone."

Men have gone to Africa for gold and for diamonds. Only recently another diamond rush started a tense, excited crowd running across a South African veldt, for dazzling stones had been unearthed by a farmer's shovel. Another Kimberley now looms magnificently on the horizon. Men have gone to Africa to hunt big game and they have gone for other things, for nature's great storehouse is on the West Africa coast—a coast no further from New York than is San Francisco, and now connected with the United States by steamship service. American steamers take gasoline, Ford cars, construction material and other manufactured articles to the West Coast and bring back raw products.

Today ships carry kapok half way round the world, while millions of tons of the same material go to waste annually in Africa. At present this silk cotton, so much used for making pillows and mattresses, comes from the Dutch East Indies instead of the much Nearer African coast. A new process has been recently discovered by which the cotton can be woven into cloth that takes a most artistic dye. This discovery naturally opens a new field for kapok.

Then there is rubber, of which West Africa has an abundance. America has none. We go to the Malacca Peninsula or to Ceylon to get it—places three times as far from Eastern United States as the Guinea Coast. The tropics supply food and can supply more food with their three harvests a year. There is only one harvest in the temperate zone. West Africa lies in the tropics. Two-fifths of the gold output of the world comes from one African town, Johannesburg. However, there is still gold in quantity on the Gold Coast, in Rhodesia, Abyssinia, on the Upper Congo, the Benue and in the Libyan desert unworked, undiscovered.

The Continent of Romance

Africa is a continent of contradictions and extremes. In it live the tallest people in the world, the Shilluks and Dinkas, 6 feet 6, on an average; and the smallest people, the pigmies. In Africa we find the ancient civilization of Egypt and the uncivilized savage. We find the greatest desert and the greatest waterfall, and the greatest health resorts in the north and in the south. The greatest library in the world was once in Alexandria. Here lived the first geographers. The priests of Egypt were learned in the art of healing, yet today Africa is without a single fully developed medical school for the natives. In the universities of North and South Africa little medicine is taught.

Men, no doubt, have also gone to Africa for romance, though no writer has done justice to that world of romance. Ethiopa, Carthage's ruined amphitheatre, the Great Pyramid—what tales they recall! I have seen the citdael and minarets of Cairo; Thebes of a hundred gates. I have laid at night at the foot of the Sphinx. I have watched the dawn on Table Mountain and stood at noon on Livingstone Island above Victoria Falls. I have wandered as the first white man across the Central African watershed between the Shari, Nile and Congo. And last Winter I stood on Dahia Hill. I looked down on Kano, the city of the Central Sudan.

Kano! Kano, whose romance is as old as time. Before me in the light of the setting sun lay the clay compounds where lived 50,000 Hausas and Fulanis. Here and there green date palms broke the uniformity of the reddish-brown homes. As I looked a cavalcade of richly robed horsemen galloped past the hill, reminiscent of ancient Bagdad, of the mystery and the legend of that city. Smoke from thousands of hearth fires dimmed the evening air. Dust clouds rose from the market place where mounted men, donkey drivers, cattle and camels created a din unsettling even to vultures poised on the palm trees.

Kano was a city before William the Conqueror came to England. It has twelve gates and walls twelve miles in circumference. Here in this thousand-year-old town they used gunpowder before it was known in England. Since the dawn of civilization they have grown their cotton, spun and woven it. Kano has indigo dye pits, the leather workers, iron smelters, makers of mats and baskets. Here, too, is the oldest craftsman of all, the potter working his clay.

A Proud and Ancient Race.

Kano dynasties trace their line through a millennium. Pride of race and custom is here, rightly, as in few other cities. First they were pagan Haussa, then Moslem Hausas and today Fulani Moslems. A great city before ever Timbuctoo was founded, Kano was a centre of civilization surpassed only in age by Thebes and Carthage. And those cities are dead, while Kano lives. Like all ancient peoples, those of Kano show a polish—a politeness rarely found among younger folk.

But Kano is insanitary. The refuse of 50,000 people creates an odor that once smelled is never forgotten. The most impressive and at times overpowering thing as one approaches a native village is its smell. Kano has a number of schools. But it has no medical school. There is one white Government doctor in Kano for the city and for the province of half a million people.

Men go to Africa for many things, but not for those busy troublemakers—the microbe, the mosquito and the tsetse fly—that look on human beings as fair game. And if men want the gold and diamonds, the oil and leather of African plateaus; if they want the ivory and ostrich feathers and lion and leopard skins of African jungles, they will have to subdue those busy troublemakers who prey preferably on humans.

While there are no medical schools for natives in Africa, there are some three hundred hospitals, with few exceptions British and French. Of these 169 are in British colonies and possessions; the largest number in British South Africa. Eighty are south of the Zambesi River, virtually all of them in the temperate zone. There are five hospitals in the Kenya Colony, nine in Nyassaland, twenty-six on the Gold Coast, twenty-five in Nigeria, four in Uganda, six in Zanzibar and Tanganyika, and ten in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

The French have a medical school in connection with the University of Algiers with a teaching staff of nineteen professors. The British maintain medical departments in connection with universities at Cairo, Johannesburg and Cape Town. Some medical teaching is given in the Island of Madagascar at Antananarivo and at Dakar, where a medical school was organized on Nov. 1, 1918. But in all of Africa there is not one school, with the exception of the one at Dakar, devoted exclusively to the study of medicine.

The Sanitation of Africa.

Adequate medical research and education are about to be taken in hand in various parts of Africa. I base my reasons for so thinking on the following signs: When passing through Sierra Leone I went to see the tropical diseases research station. This institution is the result of a legacy of £10,000 left by Sir Alfred Jones for the purpose. It is affiliated with the Liverpool University, subsidized by the Government of Sierra Leone, and is doing good work. Professor Blacklock, the director, expressed the opinion that the time was ripe to establish a medical school in Sierra Leone, as a number of natives who had received an education at Fourth Bay College were far enough advanced to be eligible for medical training.

Recently the news has come from Khartum that a beginning has been made with a medical school there named The Kitchener Memorial Medical School, after Lord Kitchener. It is a part of Gordon College, the trustees of which have collected £30,000 for a medical department. The head of the new school is appealing to America for financial help in order that he may be able to build up an addquate institution.

There has also been organized at a Uganda hospital a small class of native medical students, but there is no medical teaching yet in the Niger Territories, next to India the most populous British possession. There is none in the Congo Basin, a country as large as the United States; none in the Portugese, Italian or Spanish possessions in Africa.

Among the African colonial administrators who desire to have their people taught medicine and sanitation the Governor of the Gold Coast showed the greatest enthusiasm. He drove me in his car to see the schools of Accra and the new hospital, general conceded to be the finest in Africa.

Roughly speaking, one-third of Africa is under British control, one-third under French and the remaining third under Belgian, Portuguese, Italian and Spanish administrations. What is the attitude of these Governments to a proposal for sanitation in their African colonies? As far as the British colonies are concerned there is but one reply: "This thing must be done, and we would do it immediately had we the money."

SCIENTISTS TO AGAIN DISTURB TUT-ANKH-AMEN

Annual Hunt for New Light Extends From Yucatan to Mongolia.

SUNKEN GALLEY

Maya Children Probably Played Basketball in Court Uncovered.

Archæological units for 1925 are counting their forces and staking out their claims. More individuals, if no more units, are going out, it is said, on the annual treasure hunt than last year. Renewed search of Tut-ankh-Amen's tomb and the solving of its well-kept secret are promised. In a dozen likely sites the turn of a shovel may any day add a new chapter to the world's history. While in old days religious crusaders trekked through Eastern sands looking for spiritual peace, modern crusaders, more curious if no more energetic, are carefully sifting those sands for new light on early history.

Egypt, as in past years, already has a large body of eminent scholars working among its ruins. At Thebes and Lisht, the former in the Valley of the Kings, the Metropolitan Museum is adding to its notable finds. Ambrose Lansing, assistant curator of the museum working at Lisht, writes of a new statue, one Sehetepibre-ankh (a royal steward), recently unearthed. "In the history of Egyptian portrait sculpture the twelfth dynasty ranks as one of the best periods and, while the statue of Sehetepibre-ankh cannot be considered a first-class example of that school, it is nevertheless a very pleasing piece of work and a valuable addition both to the collection of the Metropolitan Museum and to the known sculpture of the Middle Kingdom." This statue is of a period some six dynasties earlier than the one that produced Tut-ankh-Amen.

Near Tut-ankh-Amen's tomb in the Valley of the Kings, H. E. Winlock, The Metropolitan's associate curator in Egyptology, has found among other XXI. Dynasty tombs, that of the Lady Henttowe, whom he describes from portraits painted on her coffin as a "charming, well-bred Oriental lady, with arms crossed upon her heart, looking calmly out from the shrouds that swathe her body."

Studies Temple Inscriptions.

At Napata and Gizeh and other points along the Nile, the University of Pennsylvania unit and the Harvard group, like all others in this field, are fitting new "finds" into the greatest cross-word puzzle in the world—the consecutive history of the first Egyptians.

From late reports, Professor James H. Breasted of Chicago, the veteran Egyptian authority, will devote most of the winter to recording temple inscriptions. For it was on the walls of these public buildings that the old Nile Kings left much of their history. Hymns, religious texts, political happenings (if record of changing rulers can be called political), were traced in early cipher on huge stone building blocks. In Palestine and also near Ur of the Chaldees, where several lucky strikes were made last year, excavations are expected to disclose further data bearing on biblical times. Work on fortifications of the City of David, near present-day Jerusalem, will continue, and an effort will be made to clear up points about its construction and date. Pottery found in the ruins would indicate a settlement on this site years before David fought his way into what was then the Jebusite capital. A Czecho-Slovak unit is at work in Syria, and other units in Turkey and Asia Minor. Crete and Cyprus, too, will have their diggers.

Count de Prorok, heading a Franco-American group, goes back to curse-ridden Carthage. Whether the temple site, where the goddess Tanit wove her mystic spell, will yield new pawns for the archæological chess-board is problematical, but there is hope of uncovering an early library amid the Acropolis ruins. Off the coast, not far from this scene of Flaubertian fame, lies a sunken galley. From it have already been taken several marble statues of beautiful Greek design. What else it may contain is still unknown. It is Count de Prorok's intention to continue the exploration this winter, as it is thought the galley will yield other art treasures of early vintage. Students from Oxford, Cambridge and McGill Universities have joined the Count's forces, and three hundred Arab workmen will help these scientists sift sands for Carthaginian relics.

Down in Yucatan, the Carnegie Institute unit, under the direction of Dr. Sylvanus G. Morley, continues its ten-year task of uncovering the Maya city, Chichen Itza. In the last two years, Dr. Morley and his assistants have excavated enough to lead them to believe this old city must have been, in the palmy days of Mayan civilization, about the size of Manhattan Island. Mosaic floors of elaborate design and other ornamentation indicate a culture as imposing as that of Mediterranean cities. Tremendous reservoirs bear witness of a wise provision for the city's water supply. Games similar to those played in modern schools would seem to have been popular with the Mayas, as a court closely resembling our basketball courts was found to contain familiar features of stone ring parallel to the wall and at right angles to the floor, jutting out near the top of either wall. Dr. Wissler, Director of the Department of Anthropology of the Museum of Natural History, who leaves soon for Yucatan at the invitation of the Carnegie Institute, said:

"We can decipher dates in the Mayan ruins, but not inscriptions. These dates go back to 100 B.C., and there are still other ruins under those showing Mayan culture. The Aztecs built over the Mayan layer, and their inscriptions we are able to read, but these belong to a much later period." Dr. Wissler does not belong to the group of archæologists who believe Egypt's civilization took root in South America and produced the Maya. "Their calendars are entirely different, and while there is a slight similarity in stone engravings of gods and other figures, this is too slight a foundation to build on."

Mongolia, whence came last year's important find of dinosaur eggs, will be watched with great interest this year. It is not improbable, Dr. Wissler thinks, that the year's digging will disclose remains of paleolithic man near the spot where the dinosaur eggs were found.

"Europe looks to anthropologists like a marginal country. There must have been a breeding ground of civilization somewhere. Perhaps it was in Western Asia, possibly in China. We don't know. Evidences of early life found in Northern Mongolia last year were the first signs in that district of prehistoric fossils. Anything else found there will be important. Professor Nelson, a member of our staff and probably one of the greatest American authorities on the cave man, has gone out to join the Andrews party in Mongolia. His reports will, we think, give us information about this unknown part of the world helpful in further research on early man.

"Another party, headed by Dr. P. E. Goddard, is going to Arizona for a preliminary survey of the cliff-dwellings there. These pueblo remains are an earlier type than ruins found further south. We are going on with the excavations at Aztec, where we have already dug out one building having 600 rooms. There must be six or seven buildings, each about this size, on the same site."

Thirty seconds after Parker foiled a Parkdale attack and broke away with Rose teaming with him. A neat pass at the right moment enabled Rose to whistle in a fast one that Thomson could not block.

Penalties to Ranger and Lount featured the next few minutes of play. When Ranger got back he and Collins combined beautifully for a close-in goal, Ranger doing the gunning. It was the final marker of the period.

Two Fast Ones.

The Petes opened the last period at an amazing clip and inside of of two minutes had scored two goals. Ranger got the first—his fourth of the night—on a clever play that completey fooled the Paddlers. Getting the rubber in the Parkdale corner he tore back of the net at top speed, swerved out in front and drove the puck home before Thomson had a chance to swing to meet the unexpected attack.

Collins made it 7 to 0 when he took a pass from Ranger at centre and went in alone to skate around the Parkdale defence and rip a fast one past Thomson.

There was only one team on the ice at this stage and if the Petes had chosen to keep up the pressure the score would have climbed to double figures.

But there are other games ahead and the blue shirts let up after the first five minutes. Give Parkdale credit. They tried until the last bell and when the Petes slackened the Paddlers, throwing four men up on the attack, came on and scored two goals, Lount figuring in both of them. He got No. 1 on a pass from Cawkell close in and carried the rubber down for the second, Jeffrey doing the shooting.

Penalties to Sullivan and Applegath followed these successful attacks but the Petes were satisfied with their lead and did not press the advantage. McLeod was taken out for a rest half way through the period, Rose finishing the game on the defence. Shorty Burgess had the honor of scoring the last goal in the play off just before the game ended. With Parkdale pressing he batted the rubber past the attackers, beat Lount in a race for it, stickhandled around Lou Harris and beat Thomson at point blank range. It was a fine play and Burgess got a big hand from the crowd.

GIANTS DEPART FOR THE SOUTH

Battery Men Comprise Contingent That Arrived Sunday at Sarasota.

OTHERS ON MARCH 1

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—Another shipment of possible pennant material started South Saturday. The third movement of baseball talent from this city, which departed from the Pennsylvania Station at 6:20 on a Florida-bound train, consisted of the Giants' batterymen residing in and around New York, Secretary James J. Tierney, Captain Frankie Frisch and seven correspondents for various metropolitan newspapers.

The players who left New York included Pitchers Hugh McMillan, Rosy Ryan, James Tunney John Manners, Catcher Mickey Devine and Second Baseman Frisch. The group expected to pick up Pitcher Walter Huntzinger at Philadelphia, Pitcher Jack Bentley and Howard Baldwin at Baltimore, Picher Frank Dodson at Washington and Pitcher John Henry Wisner at Jacksonville, so that Tierney would bring ten athletes to Manager John McGraw at the Sarsota training camp.

The other baterymen will journey to the headquarters of the Giants from their various homes, Hank Gowdy starting from Columbus, Ohio; Grover Cleveland Hartley moving south from Osgood, Ind., and Frank Snyder from San Antonio.

One embryo Giant also made the trip from New York yesterday. Frankie Frisch took his younger brother, Harold, along and has promised to let the youngster work out under the critical eye of McGraw. Young Harold aspires to become a member of his famous brother's team before many years have passed and he believes that the experience he can gain at the training camp this year will benefit him in the future. Like Frankie, Harold is an infielder and he has dreams of combining with his brother as the Giant's keystone combination some day.

Frisch Is Optimistic.

Frisch was still a holdout of sorts when he left last night. The Giants' captain is said to be making the early start for the training camp in order to talk over financial matters with McGraw. He doesn't anticipate any great trouble, however, and said that he felt a short conversation with the manager would settle the whole affair.

Before leaving yesterday Secretary Tierney announced that the signed contract of Catcher Hank Gowdy had been received at the Giants' offices, completing the list of batterymen on the roll. Among the few Giants who are not yet signed for the coming season are Meusel, Kelly, Young and Freddy Lindstrom, the young third baseman who stepped into Groh's position in the world's series and played almost faultlessly against the Senators. None of these are expected to remain unsigned after the time for them to report arrives next Sunday.

BALTO TROPHY TO LEADER IN DERBY

Husky Won Nome Epic Memorial in Quebec Race.

QUEBEC, Feb. 23.—"Yukon," Bacon's splendid cream colored leader in the team with which Emil St. Goddard clinched the Quebec Derby, wins the Balto Trophy given by Mrs. Frederick T. Clarke, of Sheepshead Bay, N.Y., to commemorate the heroic husky which saved the situation in Nome, Alaska, during the recent epidemic and thrilled the continent while "Jerry," the beautiful Alaskan husky owned by the McComb Brothers of Montreal, captured the cup awarded by Miss Pratt, of Boston, Mass., the former being for the best husky in the winning team, the latter for the best type of sled dog entered in the Eastern International Dog Sled Derby.

As a result of the judgment rendered here Saturday afternoon, six grizzled mushers in their picturesque outfiits and as many fine dogs faced the judges in what was from the point of view of heart interest and color, an event almost surpassing the actual race itself, every man and beast looking as if he had stepped out of a book by Service or Jack London. As "Yukon" is the only husky in Bacon's team he had to get the Balto trophy, but he is a handsome animal anyway. The McComb entry, McGill University's famous mascot, is a magnificent grey and white two year old, bred in Alaska. "Darky," the Clarke entry, which got the reserve ribbon and the money prize going with it, is an equally fine Eskimo dog, from Labrador. Bridges," Alex. Macdonald, Russick and Bacon also entered good dogs for Miss Pratt's trophy. The judging between "Jerry" and "Darky' was so close that it took the judges, Dr. H. A. Souther, Boston, Mass., H. I. Sutton, Chicago, acting for Dr. Mooney, who was unable to be present, and Dr. Henri Gauvin, D.V.S., Quebec, over twenty minutes to come to a decision. Feet, muscle, type, size, weight and appearance were the points considered. The dogs themselves obviously understood what was going on and were on their best behaviour, placidly wagging their tails.

If the Big Six winners get the choice the first game will be in Toronto Thursday and the final battle in Stratford or Niagara Falls on Monday.

OSHAWA CLAIMS STRONGER TEAM

Nearly All of 1:24 Team and Several New Infielders.

TWO PITCHERS.

The Oshawa Reformer says: The baseball situation for 1925 from a local aspect continues to be encouraging with prospects for Oshawa being represented by stronger teams than ever before. While the intermediate squad in the Durham and Ontario League will be almost of senior calibre, as in previous years, the Central Ontario League representatives are the centre of interest among the baseball patrons. With practically all of last year's team available and strengthened by one or two new infielders, together wth a couple of pitchers, including Jimmy Breckenridge, who made such a good showing with Leaside in 1923 and with Strollers in 1924, the Motor City should be able to compete successfully with any senior aggregation in Ontario. Rumors to the effect that Peterboro, Belleville and Kingston might operate pro teams in the Quebec-Ontario circuit this year will not likely be put into operation. Kingston is the only city where a professional brand of ball could be carried out successfully, Belleville and Peterboro not being in a position to support such a project financially or otherwise. Therefore it is likely that the C.O.B.L. will be unmolested for another year, with the same four clubs providing a high class brand of ball and being able to do so without financial loss. From the attitude taken by the executives of the various clubs, expenses of each team will be considerably reduced while at the same time the league will be greatly strengthened.

PLAY-OFFS DECIDED.

Allan Cup in Winnipeg—Junior Championships at Eastern Finalist Town.

OTTAWA, Feb. 23.— (Canadian Press.)— Finals in the Allan Cup play-off will be held in Winnipeg on March 21 and 23, according to an official statement handed out by Silver P. Quilty, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association here last night. The final play-offs for the O.H.A. Memorial Cup, emblematic of the Junior Amateur hockey championship of Canada, will be held in the home town of the eastern finalist team on March 23 and 25.

NURMI WON ANOTHER.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—Paavo Nurmi, the Finnish track star, defeated Verne Booth of the Millrose A. C., of New York, in a special 3,000 yards race last night at the Georgetown University track and field meet. He failed to establish a new world's record, running the distance in 7 mins., 46 2-5 seconds.

ST. PATS SQUEEZED WIN IN MONTREAL

Toronto Team Lucky to Get 2-1 Verdict.

MONTREAL, Feb. 23.—Toronto St. Patricks hurdled an important jump in their race for a National League play-off berth when they defeated the Montreal team 2 to 1 here Saturday night and kept pace with Canadiens in second place in the standing.

Paul Ciceri landed here with his players and found Jack Adams too sick to take the ice. Adams developed lagrippe and had to retire to bed with a high fever.

It was a severe blow to the Irish team and when in the first period Montreal had an edge in the play matters began to look anything but promising for the visitors.

But as the game progressed it became apparent that Montreal was followed by the jinx which has dogged the team all season. With an edge on the play they could not score. Around centre ice they held command, but when they got to the visitors' defence they lost their punch.

Every local player had a try at beating Roach, but a combination of weak shooting, brilliant saves by Roach and a number of plain lucky stops robbed them of tallies.

"TRUNKS" ORGANIZE.

Vernon Weir Secretary of Belleville Ball Club.

BELLEVILLE, Feb. 23. — At a meeting held by the Grand Trunk ball team, Veron Weir was appointed to the position of Secretary Treasurer of the club, lately vacated by Newton Thompson, who has been apopinted secretary of the Central Ontario League. Walter Gerow was alsoc hosen by the team and officers to represent their interests at the annual meeting of the C.O.B.L.

Mr. Weir will also be the teams representative on the executive of the Grand Trunk Club, having been chosen by a ballot of the members of the team.

Preparations are being made to field a strong team again this summer and the ptrons of the sport will find that Belleville will have at least a fighting aggregation. It looks as if the pro ball idea was a bubble, and that amateur ball will be stronger this season in this district than at any time. It is proposed by the Trunks to run the juniors in connection with the seniors and get a satisactory grouping and also to take one junior every game played away from home so that they will have the needed experience, providing they are capable to jump to senior rating.

SENATORS WIN LISTLESS GAME

Boston Team Lacked Punch —Weakened by Casualty of Herberts.

STEWART GOOD

OTTAWA, Feb. 21.—(Canadian Press).—The most listless game of the National Hockey League played in Ottawa this season, was witnessed at the Auditorium Saturday night when Ottawa Senators defeated Boston by three goals to nothing. Both teams failed to get going except in spots, and the hockey in general was very ordinary.

Ottawa's three-goal margin represents the edge they had on the Bruins in goal-getting, but not in the general play. Only spectacular work by Charlie Stewart in the Boston net kept the score as low as it was. Stewart turned in a fine game and repeatedly made saves that robbed the locals of what appeared to be sure goals. He was given very ordinary support by the forward line, although the defence in front of him held fairly well. An injury to Herberts' back in the first period, sustained in a collision with Clancy, slowed up the Bruin ace, and the remainder of the front line men, with the exception of Jackson, failed to fathom the Ottawa defensive system.

The First Goal.

The first period had gone ten and a half minutes when the Senators got their first. Gorman, who was relieving Denneny on left wing, grabbed a lose puck near centre and worked his way along the fence and into the corner, beating Stewart with an ankle-high shot from a difficult angle. Herberts drew one of the only two penalties imposed during the game, in this period, for hooking Smith. Nighbor slipped in on a pickup to give Stewart a clever save just at the close of the period.

George Boucher put the Senators two up in 8.35. Cooper went in for a double try, getting a second bang at Connell's cage from a rebound, when Boucher cleared. He circled the Ottawa net and then weaved his way from end to end, passing practically the entire Bruin team en route, to shove the disc through Stewart's feet. It was a high-class effort and the high spot of the game.

Gorman again came into the picture in seven minutes more with the final goal. He took Hooley Smith's pass at the defence, eluded Hitchman and foiled the Bruin goalie with another ankle-high drive.

Referee Injured.

The spectators had much amusement from an accident to Referee Smeaton in this period. Clancy ran into him, starting a rush, and the arbiter was temporarily out of commission, suffering a slight injury to his throat. He resumed in a few minutes. The third period was uneventful, individual play predominating. Both goals had several narrow escapes in turn, but no scoring resulted. Hooley Smith and Hitchman had been waging a miniature war all evening and it culminated in Smith drawing the second penalty of the game for riding the ex-Ottawan into the defence. Shay featured in this session with some splendid back checking, but the attack of the visitors could not net the goals, even against the Ottawa sub line which was sent on half way through the period. Herberts, Jackson and Cooper were Boston's best. The latter went well in spots, being plainly short on condition. He showed a wicked shot on several occasions. Stewart played well in goal, and while Hitchman and Mitchell blocked well, they were not strong offensively.

ST. GODDARD WINS QUEBEC DOG DERBY

Real Arctic Weather For Final Day of Big Race.

QUEBEC, Que. 23. —(Special to the Examiner).—The real north took a hand in the Eastern international dog sled derby on Saturday, and gave spectators, as a thrilling climax to the great race, their first notion of what drivers and dogs are frequently up against on the long trails.

The hardy mushers, white from head to foot and the teams sheathed in ice and half blinded by the merciless wind brought he arctic near to onlookers who watched them battling through country and weather which temporarily duplicated those of the polar zone.

The well-known sled tips, huskies, malamoots and outside dogs born to the work, close kin to Balto, the hero of the recent Nome epidemic were in their element as they bored through the bitter wind and flying snow which the other dogs could barely face. Their fight with the storm left most of the men dazed, the majority had no idea of their standing or time as they raced in and their teams through fresh enough were shivering with the cold." The wind was like a stone wall and cut like a whip," Harry Beauvais declared. St. Goddard, the winner whose fine driving and modesty have gained him great popularity, got a magnificent ovation. Young Brydges last year's winner, came in good style and regret was expressed that his luck was not better. Roberts, the inexperienced Englishman, who drove his local dogs in their very first race so pluckily when fate was against him from the start and who came in fifth also received an ovation, as did the veteran Welden, of New Hampshire, with his fine old leader, Chinook. The crowd was naturally delighted with the brilliant advance of the local men, Chevrette and Thoroien to second and third laces.

The old timer, Russick and his beautiful tawny huskies achieved similar popularity for his showing and good sportmanship.

THEATRES

AT THE ROYAL

CANADIAN PREMIER OF "CAFE IN CAIRO" AT ROYAL HERE AND HIPPODROME, TORONTO.

Priscilla Dean's Latest Film, "A Cafe in Cairo," Has Glamour of Egypt.

Egypt of the countless centuries, lulled by the Nile, the land of the Pharaohs and the minaretted tombs of Caliphs, the land of mystery and romance, is the intriguing background of Priscilla Dean's new Hunt Stromberg feature for Producers' Distributing Corporation, which opens at the Royal Theatre to-day.

"A Cafe in Cairo" is the interesting title of this new offering in which "The Fiery One" is starred, and if all advaice reports may be believed, it should be one of the most interesting things she has yet done. One of Miss Dean's most sensational early successes was "The Virgin of Stamboul," and this new production is said to contain all the elements that made for its success, plus a more elaborate production and a performance by the star that could never have been equalled in the earlier period before it had ripened to its present glorious state.

"A Cafe in Cairo" is from the novel by Izola Forrester, author of "The White Moth" and numerous other best sellers, and the photoplay version is the work of Harvey Gates, who wrote "The Wildcat of Paris" and other triumphs in which Priscilla Dean appeared.

The story tells a fascinating melodramatic romance between Naida, a spirited little dancer in a Cairo cafe, and a handsome young American secret service operator. Although Naida at first attempts to secure valuable papers from the American to aid her foster father in an attempt to overthrow the power of the white man in Egypt, her love for the American finally triumphs but not until both have risked their lives many times.

"A Cafe in Cairo" moves with remarkable rapidity, one tense situation following the other, but it is also claimed that it has a greater love interest and more moments of humor than any picture in which the dynamic star has recently been seen.

Appearing opposite the star is Robert Ellis, one of the screen's most popular leading men, while the supporting cast includes such screen favorites as Carl Stockdale, Carmen Phillips, Harry Woods, Evelyn Selbie, John Steppling, Ruth King, Larry Steers and Marie Crisp. Chet Withey directed and Sol Polito presided at the camera.

AT THE GRAND

ARE GHOSTS REAL?

Blackstone Contends Supernatural In Spiritism is 100 Per Cent. Bunk.

While it is against the ethics of the magic profession to expose any of the workings of the art to laymen, Blackstone is not backward in asserting that all spiritism is bogus. Blackstone will not reveal how the various stunts credited to mediums are performed, but he does agree to duplicate any so-called supernatural manifestation within full view of an audience in a lighted auditorium. The celebrated magi makes no claim to being other than what he is—a great artist and entertainer whose cleverness completely fools the beholders.

Next Friday night Blackstone offers to present any spiritualistic or occult manifestation that may be requested. He does not bar tests propounded by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle or Sir Oliver Lodge. In fact for several years Blackstone has attempted to have these exponents of spiritism accept his challenge.

"Those who believe in the supernatural as concerns the activities of mediums and clairvoyants are poor, misguided dupes. I believe that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is in this class. The genus homox has a tendency to believe what one wants to believe. Sir Arthur suffered the loss of a son in the great war. He wants to believe that he can communicate with the spirit of the departed and no doubt therefore does believe. It is such as these who furnish the victims for the predatory crew of spiritualists," said Blackstone in a recent interview.

"There is a scientific explanation for every one of the mysterious manifestations of the spiritualists," continued the modern Cagliostro. "Spiritualism is simply magic employed for ulterior purposes and were the truth known its performance is so crudely conducted that were it to be presented on the stage the audience would hoot it out of the theatre. To put out a magic show of any size costs well over fifty thousand dollars. My show is insured for twice that sum. A medium or clairvoyant can rig a whole outfit for less than a hundred dollars. The difference between a magician and a spiritualist is that the former deliberately fools his patrons for their own entertainment. They know they are being fooled and revel in it. On the other hand these second sight workers play on the emotions of their victims and frequently mulct them of large sums of money."

"I am President of the National Conjurers' Association and one of our iron clad rules is that none of the members shall expose any trick or device. This is simply protection because the secrets of the art are our bread and butter. However, I will agree to duplicate in a scientific manner any spiritualistic manifestation in the full light of the stage. Then if those making the request still believe with Sir Arthur Conan I know no hope for them."

AT THE CAPITOL

"A SAINTED DEVIL" SOUTH AMERICAN "BLOOD AND SAND," STARRING RUDOLPH VALENTINO, WITH BIG ALL-STAR CAST.

There are those who are of the opinion that "Blood and Sand" was the greatest picture Rudolph Valentino ever made. But "Monsieur Beauciare" and all the rest have their champions also. But whatever your personal opinion might be, "A Sainted Devil," Valentino's latest screen work under the Paramount banner is bound to please one hundred per cent plus. It's a big story by a big author, with a big star and produced in a big way. And it is going to make a big hit with the fans of Peterborough to-day and tomorrow at the Capitol Theatre.

Rex Beach wrote the story, which Forrest Halsey adapted to the screen. It's the "Blood and Sand" of South America, an actionful romance with out a lagging moment in it. "A Sainted Devil" keeps moving right along from one situation to another carrying its audieneces from ultra-fashionable cafes in Buenos Aires to its waterfront dives, bandit hangouts, etc.

"A Sainted Devil" has everything. There never was such a picture before, and it's going to be along time before you see another one like it.

If you but take our advice and come down to the Capitol Theatre—and come down early—you won't regret it. We guarantee that!

MAN WITH EVIL EYE MAKES MASON FILM VERY THRILLING

Hypnotism plays a prominent part in "Curlytop," the latest starring vehicle of Shirley Mason which comes to the Regent Theatre to-day for a run of three days.

In the picture Curlytop (Shirley Mason) is cast as a waif living in the notorious Limehouse district of London. The fact that she is different from the rest of the girls causes her to become an object of special attention.

Tom Brannigan, an outcast of civilization, is intrigued by the girl's freshness and beauty and to him she recalls brighter and happier days.

To Shanghai Dan, a white man who has lived among the Orientals for so long a time that he has really lost his identity, the girl is a new toy. Versed in the devious arts of the Orientals he is an adept at hypnotism and attempts to win the girl by the power of the eye.

Just what happens eventually and the many dramatic incidents that occur during the action of the play, is familiar to those who have read "Curlytop" which is one of the notable stories of Thomas Burke's Limehouse Nights, the most widely read volume of stories of the past year.

FILM, NOW CAUSING A FURORE IN ADJACENT CITIES COMING HERE.

Unusual interest is being evinced in the coming of the widely discussed William Fox screen production, "Darwin Was Right," which is booked for a three-day engagement at the Regent Theatre, beginning today. Few pictures have caused as much of a mirthful furore in various cities as this one has, according to reports, and, because the plot of the photoplay is based on the many moot questions stirred up by the Darwinian theory, it is receiving attention even in the editorial columns of some newspapers.

The story revolves around the quest of three old men for the elixir of youth and it is given a highly diverting twist when the trio falls victims to kidnappers as soon as they find what they are after. In the course of events it is shown that the line of demarcation between man and monkey is not so very sharp or distinguishing, but this is all unfolded in the midst of a wealth of hilarious humor, and, the result is, everybody is said to get a great "kick" out of it.

Some idea is ganied of what an enormous job it is to look after the telephone requirements of the community when we learn from the Bell Telephone Company's Annual Report that additions to the Company's property in 1924, made up of land, buildings, central office equipment and outside plant, cost nearly sixteen-and-one-half millions. TELEPHONES IN ONTARIO AND QUEBEC.

Although 1924 was a period of very quiet general business, says the Annual Report of the Bell Telephone Company, the number of telephones increased by 50,607. The total of Bell telpehones now in service in Ontario and Quebec is 536,848. This is a very creditable development of this great utility. Add to this total approximately 145,875 telephones operated by indepndent companies, most of which connect with Bell exchanges, and you have a development for the two provinces of something like 12.9 telephones per hundred thousand inhabitants.

BETTER FOR WORKERS.

Women Seek Better Conditions for Working Classes and Children.

WINNIPEG, Man., February 23 (Canadian Press). — "It is the aim of this conference to lay the foundations for a system by which the world may be made a better place for the working classes and their children,' 'was the statement made by Mrs. John Queen at the first session of the Labour Women's Social and Economic conference held here recently.

The conference was presided over by Mrs. Eddy of Regina, Dominion president of the Canadian Woman's Labour League.

Mrs. J. S. Woodsworth, who had been to Ottawa for the opening, saw very little hope for Labour in the Government policy as outlined in the speech from the throne. If the Government was prevented by the B. N. A. Act from taking the necessary action to relieve the economic situation, then steps should be taken to remove such hindrances as the Government must always be for the general good of the people.

Jes' Settin'

Hal Cockran's Daily Poem

Jes' settin' and fishin', and fishin' and settin'—it's fun, whether luck comes or not. Jes' frettin' and wishin', and wishin' and frettin', o'er what you will get, or have got.

The call of the stream kinda makes living seem a thing that's worth while, after all. And wise is the man who just does and who can bustle out there and answer the call.

Just who must we thank that there's always a bank where a fellow can loll at his ease? Just think what it means when you loaf mid the scenes where there's water and grasses and trees.

A cricket may "crick" in a voice that is thick, but it sounds like a lullaby tune. And even the waves any fellow enslaves for you'll bow to their charms pretty soon.

Go on, little world, run along while we're curled on a bank as an open-air guest. We're as happy and free as a fellow can be—jes' settin 'and fishin' ,at rest.

DANGER ZONE AFTER FIFTH YEAR

Testing Time Then Begins in Married Life—Honeymoon Has Faded and Romance Gone.

(By Clythia Grey)

How long should marriage last?
Forever and ever?
Or for a short term of years?

The other day a group of young English writers said that five years is long enough for any two people to live together. . . . that they were sure to be tired of each other by that time

They were wrong, of course. A lifetime is all too short for two people who relly love each other to be married.

But, at that, there is something about the fifth year of marriage that make it a sort of danger zone.

It is about that time that romance has receiyed a knock-out blow. The honeymoon has faded into the white daylight of reality.

Mrs. Lately-Wed gives her husband the once-over and begins to wonder why he doesnt look the way Pearl Parlortricks better-half looks. . . . or why he doesnt make as much money as Jim Overdrawn, whose wife has a cook and a chauffeur, not to mention a yearly trip to Palm Beach.

Unless Mrs. Lately-Wed is a busy woman . . . to busy to think . . . the chances are that she begins to be bored with marriaige.

She wonders if she couldnt have done better, perhaps, than to have married as she did.

Of course she couldnt have . . . for she was in love with Lately-Wed when she married him. And still is, probably. Only she doesn't know it.

A wife in this state of mind once went to Count Leo Tolstoi, the great Russian, to ask him if she should leave her husband. She said she no longer loved him at the end of five years of married life . . . and she was in love with someone else, besides!

"Stay with your husband," Tolstoi told her. "There has been happiness in marriage for you . . . so there will be happiness again in it. Wait and see!"

Whether the wife waited or not, I don't know. I hope she did.

But the advice that Tolstoi gave her was excellent counsel for any woman who has been looking over the matrimonial fence into fields that look greener than her own.

She will recover from the feeling of deadly dullness that several years of married life have given her . . . if only she waits! For women are like that . . . full of moods that pass.

And every dissatisfied wife is not half so dissatisfieid with her husband as she is with the things he stands for . . . the dishwashing, the darning, the everlasting bedmaking and dusting.

She wants the old thrill of courtshin and honeymoon days.

She wants her husband to be Prince Charming again, instead of the Tired Business Man he has become! . . . Women are incurably romantic.

I think it would surprise (and cure) the most bored wives if they could take a look into their husband's minds.

They would probably find that a sort of Russian revolution is going on there . . . as well as in their own minds.

It would doubtless given them a terrible jolt to know that Friend Husband may be thinking:

"Here I am slaving day in and day out to support a home that is not half so comfortable as Bill Neverwed's bachelor flat! To support a woman who apparently no longer loves me . . . who looks upon me as a Meal Ticket instead of a Real Man. . . . Where do they get this 'Wedded Bliss' idea, anyway?"

For marriage is not all beer and skittles for husbands! It's not the easiest thing in the world to go out every morning to earn the price of food, furniture rent, automobile upkeep and new Spring clothes for wifie.

We are all faulty, irritable human beings. And there must be times in every man's life when he wonders if the game . . . the marriaige game . . . is worth the candle.

Just as wives wonder the same thing when the baby has been cross, or the soup has burned, or some such terrible thing has happened to upset her!

And if we can believe the psycologists and the British Intelligentsia, it is along about the fifth year of marriage that people begin to feel that way.

The great thing is to recognize that there is such a crisis . . . and that it comes to almost everybody along with wrinkles and gray hair, and headaches.

And it's well to remember then that your own mate isn't half bad! Otherwise you'd never have married him—or her. Now, would you?

CHINAMAN'S VIEW OF MIXED MARRIAGES

Some Are Quite Happy—Chinese Cannot Bring Brides to Canada.

TORONTO, Feb. 23.—(Canadian Press). — A Toronto Presbyterian minister recently refused to officiate at the marriage of a white girl to a Chinaman. A local reporter asked a certain "Lee" for his view on the subject. Lee explained the unfortunate predicament of his compatriots who were unmarried. "One time feller could bring his wife long from China, but no same now. Feller get married in China, and he have to leave her there. One time he pay five hundred dollar and get her in but no can get her anyway now—got to leave her there. China boy not make bad husband," he said. PROTEST AGAINST NEW LEGISLATION

Petition For No Change in Boiler Inspection.

TORONTO, February 23 (Canadian Press). — A deputation from insurance companies saw Hon. Dr. Forbes Godfrey, Minister of Health and Labour, this morning, to protest against the proposed legislation which would combine inspections of steam boilers under one branch of the Government instead of coming under two separate Acts as at present.

The Boiler Act at present provides for the inspection of boilers before installation, and the Factory Act for inspection on the premises after installation.

Insurance companies inspect all boilers which are insured, or 80 per cent. of thees in the Province.

Thet effect of the new legislation would be to hamper them, V. E. Vangray, head of the deputation, told the Minister, and would impose heavier taxation on boiler users.

The Minister made no promises.

OBITUARY

MR. JOHN HOWDEN

The death occurred yesterday of Mr. John Howden, for many years lockmaster at the Peterboro Locks. He is survived by one son, William G., of Flint Michigan, and one daughter, Mrs. Ida Suthick, of Michigan, and one brother, Robert Howden, of this city. VOL. LVI., No. 46 PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1925 PRICE THREE CENTS

PETERBORO'S TAX RATE JUMPS TO 36.36 MILLS FROM 34.6 OF 1924 IN BUDGET DRAFTED FOR COUNCIL

Increase in Taxes Under Control of 1925 Council is Only $123.96.

$13,956 OVERDRAFT

Board of Education's Requisition is $16,600 Above Last Year's—Police, $25,000.

Alderman Walter Stocker was the life of the party last night when the Finance committee met to give the estimates for the year a last lingering consideration, and he scarcely needed Alderman Crowe's exhortation to "Keep on talking Walter, you're doing fine." He attacked everything on the schedule from the police department to the lighting of the Hunter street bridge; he alleged the press is controlled and the council's expenditure uncontrolled; and declared positively that the Council is acting illegally in paying His Honor Judge Huycke even the $100 that was voted him last year instead of the $300 that had been the customary honorarium for his services as chairman of the Police Commission. When the salary of the caretaker of the city buildings was being discussed and he was informed that the Utilities Commission contributes only a little over $200 to this expense, he declared "We are suckers," and advocated drastic measures to obtain what he considered a fair share.

Outside of the diversions caused by Alderman Stocker the meeting progressed tranquilly enough for the four and a half hours of its duration, finally arriving at the highest tax rate that has yet been imposed on the citizens of Peterborough, 36.36 mills. Last year's rate was 34.6 mills, a difference of nearly one mill and four-fifths. The nearest that the city ever came to this rate was in 1921, when 36.30 was fixed.

BEYOND COUNCIL'S CONTROL.

And yet, despite the big increase in the rate, the demands of the council are only $123.96 higher than last year. The difference between the $289,290.55 asked this year and the $258,610.30 asked last year is made up by two items outside the control of the 1925 Council, an overdraft from last year of $13,956.29 and an added demand from the Board of Education of $16,600.

The net result is that the City Council of 1925 is asking for $123.96 more than the council of 1924 was allowed, and yet the people must pay one mill and nearly four-fifths more tax rate.

And as was pointed out several times during the discussion, the assessment also has risen generally this year, adding an additional burden.

The increase in assessment is $440,740.

Making every effort to keep the rate down, the Finance committee after four and a half hours' work last night had succeeded in reducing its requirements by $162.50.

Revise Estimates.

Finally, before adjourning after midnight, the committee deputed Mayor Turner, Chairman Phelan and City Treasurer Adams to revise the estimates as to minor details and present them on Monday night for further discussion. Whatever is done, and the most that can be expected is the reduction of the estimates by $5,000 included for storm drains, the tax rate cannot be brought under 36 mills, and most of the council favors letting the amount stand so that the work already done may be utilized.

In connection with the $16,600 increase in the Board of Education demand, representing over half the total increase, $11,600 is on account of the Collegiate Institute and $5,000 on account of the Public schools. Of the former amount, a member told the committee, $8,000 is for plans for the still problematical new collegiate or technical school or both.

Salary Slash.

One of the first items to come under the pruning knife was the salaries of the members of the Court of Revision, cut from $350 to $175. This will be divided $75 to the chairman and $50 to each of the other two members, representing, it was said, about $7.50 and $5 respectively for the chairman and members for each meeting attended. This was on motion of Aldermen Crowe and Greene, the former producing figures from other cities in support of his motion.

An increase of nearly 1,000 in the Administration of Justice this year is due to the larger number of city inmates of Industrial Schools.

For the first two months of 1925

Collins' Brother Goes On Stage To Earn Money For Recovering Body In Cave

CHICAGO, Feb. 24.—Homer Collins is in Chicago to-day to go on the stage and tell how Floyd Collins, his brother, lost his life in Sand Cave in Kentucky. He said:

"I am going to get my brother's body and give it a decent burial. I aim to make $500 a week on the stage. It will take a lot of money to get my brother, but I'm going to do it if I have to tour the United States.

"We expect to sink a steel-walled shaft through the loose rock, clay and sand and bring the body out. Father and mother can't sleep knowing he is still down there."

STRONGER BEER IS NOT ENOUGH

President of the Moderation League Demands Government Sale and Control.

OR LOCAL OPTION.

TORONTO, Feb. 24.—(Canadian Press.)—I. F. Hellmuth, K.C., president of the Ontario Moderation League, declared at a convention of that organization here to-day that he "could not see eye to eye" with Premier Ferguson and the Government of Ontario in the matter of 4.4 per cent. beer. "The Moderation League must insist on Government sale and control of all beverages, and if we cannot have that we should have the privilege of local option," said Mr. Hellmuth.

Continuing, the President of the League said that while differing with the Premier on the question of stronger beer meeting the urgent necesitsies of the present situation, he would admit that "it was one step in the direction of true temperance." "It was not adequate," he said, "to the need as indicated by the recent plebiscite."

"I have no desire," said Mr. Hellmuth, "to join in the chorus of abuse which the recent prohibition convention turned against the Premier. That is not any part of our stock in trade. He had a difficult situation to meet, but I dot impute his integrity in the way he met it."

Mr. Hellmuth referred to the impossibility of enforcing the O.T.A. when "such a large proportion of the population did not thing it was a crime to take a drink of beer or whiskey," and there were so many who were "neither saints or devils" and were not opposed to the use of "one of God's gifts," who recognized tht the Act was unworkable.

Mayor Angrove of Kingston intimated that the strength of the proposed 4.4 beer was the weak point about it, but while the Attorney-General came from his own city, he could not concur in some of the ministers statements in regard to the beer being non-intoxicating.

Resolutions affirming the stand of the League for Government Control and favoring local option were sent to the resolutions committee. Mayor Foster of Toronto arrived just as the convention adjourned for lunch.

GIRL WANDERED WITH STRANGER

Missing Since Feb. 2 From Montreal—Newspaper Helps in Locating Her.

MAN ARRESTED.

MONTREAL, Feb 24.—A few days after her picture had been published in a local paper and her inexplicable disappearance from the home of her father here broadcast by radio and in news despatches, Amy Gowan, 15-year-old daughter of Robert Gowan, 3150 Hutchison Street, was found Sunday night at the home of A Shaw, Postmaster of Denesville, Ont., suffering from the hardships she endured while walking to that place, principally along canal banks. With her was a man who gave the name of William H. Hue, reported to be of London, England. He was placed under arrest and brought to Montreal charged with abduction, accompanied by Mr. Gowan, who went with the detectives to Denesville when word of his daughter's presence there reached him.

The recovery of the lost girl was due to the action of Mrs. Shaw, who saw her photograph and the story of her disappearance in a Montreal paper, and immediately wired to Mr. Gowan. She succeeded in keeping the pair with her until the arrival of the detectives and the distracted father.

Amy owan was last seen on February 2nd, when she ltft her home on a shopping expedition, from which she never returned. How she came into contact with Hue is not known. The Denesville post master and his wife explained that the couple had come to them for shelter for the night in such a pitiable condition from exhaustion and exposure that they had taken them in.

COST OF C.N.R. RADIO STATIONS TABLED

Wireless Equipment in Twenty Passenger Cars.

OTTAWA, Feb. 24. — (Canadian Press).—The two wireless stations installed by the Canadian National Railways at Ottawa and Moncton cost $18,253 and $22,500 respectively, according to answers made by the Railway Department to questions of George Black (Conservative, Yukon) in the House of Commons Monday. Twenty passenger cars have been equipped with wireless at a total cost of $10,843.39, averaging $542.17 per car. The equipment in the cars is, according to the statement, "to afford information and entertainment for passengers and thereby attract passenger business to Canadian National lines." The management received 3,122 telegram cards and letters acknowledging the broadcasts from all sections of Canada, United States, Great Britain and Cuba.

In answer to the question, "In what way is it expected that such wireless installations will produce revenue over expense?" the Department answers: "It is fair to assume that the interest displayed by the recipients of Canadian National Railway broadcasts will result in increased business to the railway."

AID TO ULSTER BY BRITAIN FOR SPECIAL POLICE

Snowden's Motion for Reduction of Appropriation Defeated by 271 to 113.

OPPOSE INCREASE

Churchill Defends Assistance to Government of Northern Ireland in First Years.

LONDON, February 24 (Canadian Press). — A strong breeze arose in the House of Commons yesterday over the British Government's proposed contributions to the assistance of Northern Ireland.

Former Chancellor of the Exchequer Snowden accused the Belfast government of illegally extracting money from the British Treasury in a manner which, he said, did Parliamentary etiquette permit, he would "characterise with an ugly word."

The trouble arose over the Home Office's supplementary estimate of £1,250,000 as a grant to aid the revenues of the Ulster Government toward the expenses of its special constabulary.

Mr. Snowden moved a reduction of the estimate on the ground that there was no legal authority for it, since the maintenance of law and order was an obligation laid upon the Northern Government itself.

Constant Demands.

The objector says this estimate was the latest concession wrung from the British Treasury, which had already been subjected to constant demands from the Ulster Government for illegal financial assistance. These demands had become so intolerable that in 1922 Stanley Baldwin, then Chancellor of the Exchequer, had referred them to a committee.

Amid rising indignation and challenge from the Ulster members, Mr. Snowden further accused the Northern Ireland Government of desiring this money for the unemployed and for the "support of the Orange ascendancy." He said, counting the police and special constables, there was a policeman for every six families in Ulster.

Such large forces, he continued, were not needed, and it was a backdoor way of levying upon the British Treasury. Similar grants had been made in previous years, but only after the resistance of the Treasury had been overcome by political pressure. Premier Craig had made imperative demands for assistance for the unemployed, although this was also Ulster's responsibility. There never before had been a suggestion that the constabulary estimate should exceed a million pounds, but now a quarter of a million had been added because it seemed that Premier Craig was unable to obtain unemployment relief any other way.

The Ulster members made ineffectual attempts to get the chairman to prevent Mr. Snowden from making the accusations.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Churchill, for the Government, said there was nothing illegal and nothing unprecedented about the proposed grant. He had the utmost confidence in Premier Craig's figures, and the latter had invited him to send inspectors and auditors to Ulster any time to examine the accounts in detail.

Ulster's Sacrifices.

It was far more important, Mr. Churchill said, that there should be peace and order than economy in the police service. He explained it was not a right but a concession freely made by the British Parliament for high reasons of state policy, and he trusted that the House would decide the matter on no narrower a basis. The members should never for get that, in consenting to the present status of Ireland, Ulster had made a great sacrifice of her wishes, had accepted a form of Government which had separated her administration from that of Great Britain, and that had placed her in the position of facing many perils and difficulties.

It should be a part of the honour with the British Parliament to sustain and support the Ulster Government during its early and difficult years, and that "is exactly what we are doing in this vote."

Several Labour and Liberal members supported Mr. Snowden, who made it clear that the late Labour Government had resisted Ulster's demands while Mr. Churchill himself had admitted that Premier Craig came to London directly the MacDonald Government resigned to make a demand for a further quarter of a million pounds, which he (Churchill) had agreed to.

After Mr. Snowden had pointed out that neither Mr. Churchill, nor the Ulster members had attempted to deny his charges, the House divided and the Snowden motion was defeated 271 against 113, and the Liberals challenged the division on the vote itself. This was carried by 233 to 112 votes.

CHICAGO WATER STEAL DECISION EXPECTED SOON

U. S. Cabinet Secretary Likely to be Guided by Report of Army Engineers.

SMALLER QUANTITY

Drainage Allowance From Great Lakes Likely to be 8,500 Cu. Ft. Rate.

WASHINGTON, February 24 (Canadian Press). — Secretary Weeks has virtually sidetracked all the projects before him, including for the time being even the case of Brigadier-General Mitchell, Assistant Army Air Chief, in order to reach a decision as soon as possible on Chicago's request for a withdrawal of 10,000 cubic feet per second of water from Lake Michigan for sewerage and sanitary use.

The degree of priority given the Chicago application, added to the statement by the Secretary that he intended to expedite a decision while the data collected in the two-day hearings which ended on Saturday still was fresh in his mind, was made the basis yesterday of estimates by War Department officials that an announcement would be forthcoming probably before the week-end and not later than 4th March in any event.

Engineers' Report.

The Secretary has before him the protests received from Great Lakes regions against any allowance of water to Chicago as great as that asked for; the pleas of the Sanitary District officials for the 10,000 cubic feet per second withdrawal, and, in addition, the recommendations of the army engineres for issuance of a five-year permit to Chicago allowing an annual average water intake of 8,500 cubic feet a second on a conditional basis.

Probable Course.

Those who have followed closely the Secretary's treatment of the water permit question expect a decision based principally on the army engineers' advice and recommendations. It would not be surprising, it is said, if the Secretary adopted in the main the recommendations made by Major-General Taylor, Chief of Army Engineers, and Major R. W. Putnam, District Engineer at Chicago, for the five-year 8,500 cubic feet average withdrawal, and requiring Chicago to carry out a programme of sewage treatment by artificial means, install water meters, bond itself to carry out all conditions imposed by the permit issuance, and within twenty years to complete a sewage disposal programme announced by the War Department.

SPUDS EMBARGO FOR LONG TIME

May Be Years Before Britain Again Admits Canadian Potatoes.

FEAR BEETLES

LONDON, Feb. 24 (Canadian Press Cable).—The embargo on Canadian potatoes, announced as effective from Friday last, owing to the suspected presence of the Colorada beetle, is certain to remain for an indefinite period, the Canadian Press learns from reliable quarters. The approximately 1,000 tons now afloat will be the last England will receive from the Dominion for perhaps many years.

The Ministry of Agriculture, with many professions of regret, declares that the action has been delayed as long as possible but the home producer must have protection from the introduction of the beetle pest.

In is understood that the Americans, when the embargo was instituted upon themselves recently, offered to establish an official inspection of consignments, and issue certificates of freedam from disease and infestation, declaring that the embargo could not be justified by any considerations of health.

Carefully Inspected.

For the Canadian growers, it has been urged to the authorities here, that great care is taken in grading and marking the Canadian potatoes, and they are examined by the government inspectors. It is pointed out tht the slugs feed on the leaf and then bury themselves in the earth, not in the tuber, while the potatoes are subjected to a further examination at the port of shipment, precluding their carrying anything which might develop into the beetle.

Dobens of certificates have been received from British potato importers, testifying to the healthy character of Canadian potatoes. On behalf of the British authorities it is maintained thot they are only pursuing the same action which Canada and the United States pursued without hesitation in similar circumstances when English potatoes were inflicted with the wart disease. In fact, under one such embargo, British exporters were required to dump the consignments already on the ocean into the sea, whereas the Canadian shipments at present on the ocean are to be allow entry.

5000 Tons in 1924

The result is most unfortunate, as a new line of trade seemed opened to Canada. Approximately five thousand tons were imported by Great Britain up to the end of 1924.

BANK DEBITS HIGHER.

Canadian Total Shows an Increase Over January, 1924.

OTTAWA, February 24 (Canadian Press). — The bank debits of Canada during January, 1925, was reported to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics by the Canadian Bankers' Association, showed an increase of 2.4 per cent. over the corresponding month of last year.

January debits were $2,230,036,277, as compared with $2,177,586,166 in the first month of 1924.

The debits in December, 1924, were $2,324,661,224 but on account of the seasonal character of business in Canada, the significant comparison is that with the same month of the preceding year.

The bank clearings in January were $1,410,002,198, representing an increase of 1.6 per cent. over the corresponding month of 1924.

AUTOMOBILES TO HIT 30 AN HOUR

O. M. L. Hails With Delight Rumor of Increase in Speed Limit.

CONDEMN FEES.

Automobile drivers may be able to add 5 miles an hour to their speed this summer if the statement proves true that J. O. Lundy made to the executive officials of the Ontario Motor League yesterday. The afternoon session of the annual meeting was held at the King Edward Hotel, and at it Mr. Lundy said that he had been informed by S. L. Squires, Deputy Minister of Highways for Ontario, that the Government was contemplating increasing the speed limit for motor cars from 25 to 30 miles per hour.

This announcement was received with expressions of warm approval. It was followed by allegations that the fee system in force in various parts of the Province in connection with infractions of speed regulations was encouraging what were known as "speed traps."

After further discussion, a resolution was proposed by W. A. Hammond, of Chatham, and seconded by J. T. Webster, of St. Thomas, that the Ontario Government be petitioned to pass legislation to have the fee system of paying constables and magistrates in automobile cases abolished. The resolution was carried unanimously.

The meeting discussed the proposed measure of Hon. George S. Henry, that motorists be required to slow down to 15 miles per hour when approaching level railway crossings, but decided to leave the attitude of the League on the question to the incoming executive.

Question of Headlights.

It was contended by Delegate C. H. Collins, of Toronto, that instead of the candle power of headlights being reduced, as was contemplated by the Ontario Highway Department, a regulation calling for proper focus would do more good; that the danger from glare was not due to strength of lights but to the manner in which they were focused.

A resolution expressing this view was carried by the meeting and will be forwarded to the Government.

The suggestion was made that the Ontario Motor League should take some steps in regard to the regulation of the price of gasoline, but no action was taken in the matter.

Seek Federal Aid.

The League went on record as strongly behind the movement for Federal aid to roadway developmen in the following telegram to the Prime Minister of Canada: "The Ontario Motor League, in annual meeting assembled, passed unanimously a resolution urging your Government to grant a further subsidy to the various provinces to enable them to complete a system of highways which will link up all Canada, and which will more particularly bring the Maritime Provinces in closer touch with the Central Provinces and the West. Such highways will be of great further service in military preparedness, in postal transport and in supplying feeders for the National Railways."

It was announced that the membership of the O.M.L. now stood at 25,264 an increase of 1,046 during the past year.

May License Drivers.

"If the issuing of permits to drivers becomes law, it will not be with the idea of getting revenue, but will be with the sole object of protecting the public," declared Samuel L. Squires, Deputy Minister of Highways, who addressed the executive officers of the Ontario Motor League and affiliated organizations at a luncheon at the King Edward Hotel. Morden Neilson, president of the O.M.L., presided, and some 200 representative motorists of the Province were present.

Mr. Squires intimated that the examination requirement of those obtaining a license to drive a car would not be a stringent one. A motorist who might quite readily pass any required mental or physical test might be so lacking in moral fibre, and so utterly regardless of the rights of others on the road, motorists and pedestrians alike, as to be a menace at the wheel of a car. Therefore, the permit to drive a car would be comparatively easy to obtain, but equally as easy to lose. When a motorist by his actions was found to be lacking in regard for the rights of others, the revoking of his license to drive a car would follow.

Referring to the proposed gasoline tax, Mr. Squires said he believed that the motorists of the Province would prefer to pay their share toward the upkeep of good roads in this manner, than indirectly through increased rise of gasoline and added wear and tear of the car caused by driving over poor roads.

SEVEN SEAS TO SEPARATE KING AND HIS SCIONS

King, Wales and Duke of York All Abroad at Once.

RARE COINCIDENCE

His Majesty Much Improved —Bows to Doctors' Orders Not to Smoke.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—The King's progress is so satisfactory that for the first time since he was attacked by bronchitis his physicians yesterday decided that it was needless to issue a bulletin. All three of them, however, visited the palace last night as usual.

The King is now sleeping better and is quite cheerful. One of the minor drawbacks of his illness is the ban put on him by his doctors, who have forbidden him to smoke. But he took the deprivation with good humor, merely remarking: "Even Kings must obey."

It is not known yet when His Majesty will be able to start on his cruise in the Mediterranean, for which preparations are being made, in keeping with the advice of the attending physicians, but it is generally expected about a fortnight hence.

Prince as Deputy

Under present arrangements the Prince of Wales, who returned to London last night to fulfill some engagements, will act for the King at the two levees at Buckingham Palace on March 10 and 19; thus these functions will not be abandoned, as was first supposed. This will be the first occasion on which the Prince of Wales will fill such an important state ceremony.

The King has cancelled an engagement to visit Lord Derby at Knowsley on March 25 for the Grand National race; hence it may be assumed that he will not be back in London to see the Prince of Wales off on his tour, March 29. The Queen will accompany the King on his cruise, which will be strictly a holiday trip, and it is thought that one of the King's physicians will be with him also.

Family Scattered

After the Prince of Wales has started on his tour, there will be a period when the King, the Prince of Wales and the Duke of York will all be abroad at the same time, an unusual, if not unprecedented, coincidence. It becomes necessary therefore, to settle how the royal functions will be carried on in the Kings absence, and this has provoked much speculation in the press. The King's secretary, Lord Stamfordham, yesterday discussed the matter with Premier Baldwin, but nothing is yet settled, and it is probable that as soon as the King is well enough, a meeting of the Privy Council will be held to decide what sort of commission shall be appointed for this purpose.

When the King visited India in 1911 a special council of state was appointed; but, as his absence this time will be brief, it is likely that some simpler form will be adopted. In any case, it seems certain that there will be no change in the plans of the Prince of Wales.

"We have sufficient confidence in the King's doctors" the Star says tonight, 'to believe that when they prescribe a yatching cruise for his majesty they expect it to effect a complete restoration of his health. At the same time it is sufficiently serious for one of his years that an obstinate attack of bronchitis should affect the bases of the lung, and there is bound to be some public anxiety until the mischief has been satisfactorily cleared up.

'A climate like ours and a day like to-day, with a nipping easterly wind aggravated by the raw damp atmosphere, gives point to the first words of the National Anthem, and may incline us all to say "Oh to be out of England, until April's here."

MANITOBA HAS GASOLINE TAX

EXEMPT FARMS.

WINNIPEG, Feb. 24.— (Canadian Press.)—Last night was gasoline tax night in the Legislature and the Government's bill amending the Act by increasing the tax from one to three cents per gallon with a rebate of two cents on gasoline used for agricultural machinery purposes, met with strenuous opposition, due to the fact that additional revenue to be derived will not be earmarked for road purposes. Progress on the bill was reported.

TAX COLLECTOR TAKING ACTION

Letters to Warn Delinquents That Process Will Follow Non-Payment.

WEEK ALLOWED.

"The tax roll must be returned by March 31," was the edict enunciated by Mayor J. J. Turner and the Finance Committee last night in response to representations by Tax Collector W. J. Green regarding outstanding debts. The Tax Collector sought information as to the means he should employ to collect the money due, and it was inferred from the discussion that the committee does not care what means he takes so long as he gets the money.

Letters drawn up by Mr. Green with the assistance of City Solicitor Joseph Wearing today pointsout to the delinquents that if the taxes are not paid by next Monday, March 2, distress warrants will be issued against every debtor. The Tax Collector is reluctant, he said, to take this step, but he has no alternative.

There are some twenty names of persons and firms on the list, and any that have not paid in the specified time will be served with process next Monday, Mr. Green told The Examiner today.

GERMANS AGREE ON FOREIGN POLICY

BERLIN, Feb. 24. — (United Press).—The German Government is doing its utmost to safeguard the well-being of the community Chancellor Luther told newspapermen at a banquet here.

The Chancellor said every Government should do its utmost to build a "synthetic" policy.

The whole nation, he said, was in perfect accord now so far as the general outline of the foreign policy was concerned. He said the press should learn "to wait and keep quiet."

SKIDS GREASED FOR ZINOVIEFF

Followed Trotzky in Lead of Russia—Saner People Rebel.

READY TO FALL.

BERLIN, February 24 (Canadian Press). — The skids are greased for Gregory Zinovieff, whose activities as head of the third Internationale were cited by Secretary Hughes as sufficient reason for the United States not recognising the Soviet Government.

The garrulous old firebrand of world revolution, who with the deposition of Trotzky, became one of the triumvirate who rules Russia, may soon find himself in the same ignominious position into which he pushed the former war lord.

The same authority who gave an exclusive forecast of the outing of Trotzky is in possession of information and documents showing a determined effort on the part of the saner elements in the Communist party to rid themselves of this self-acclaimed successor to Lenin.

WOMEN RIOTERS ATTACK PRIEST HOLDING MASS

Demonstration Against Separatist Patriarch Results in Riot in Mexico City.

ONE MAN KILLED.

Others Seriously Injured When Unknown Man Fired Into Crowd.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 24 (United Press).—A demonstration led mostly by women against the Separatists Priesthood resulted in the slaying of one man and the wounding of five others, one seriously, outside a Catholic church here.

The rioting began when Father Luis Monge, together with Father Joaquin Perez, whom the Separatists recognize as the Patiarch of Mexico, began to hold Mass. The priests took refugt in the sacristy and several street fights followed.

Firemen and mounted police were called out to restore order. An unknown man drew a revolver and fired into the brawling crowd, killing one and wounding five persons. The Separatists do not recognize the authority of the Pope of Rome and desire a Mexican Catholic Church on the ground that the Pope is not a Mexican and therefore, is unable to aid the Mexicans while residing at the Vatican.

ACCUSED OF STEALING, GIRL CAN'T GET WORK

Sues Former Employer For Malicious Prosecution.

WOODSTOCK, February 24 (Canadian Press). — The Supreme Court for Oxford County was opened yesterday afternoon, with Justice Rose on the bench, and with the jury action of Miss Leila Wootton against W. C. Forman, for damages for malicious prosecution and slander, as the first to be heard.

The case arose out of a Police Court action, which was brought by Mr. Forman against Miss Wootton about a year ago, when he charged her with stealing goods from his store while she was in his employ.

At that time a jury found her not guilty of the charge, and she was acquitted.

The evidence given at the Court yesterday consisted largely of a recital by the plaintiff of the facts regarding the theft charge.

Two merchants gave evidence, however, that she had applied to them for positions, but that she had not been considered on account of having been accused of stealing.

Mr. Forman, the defendant, also gave evidence, and stated that he had no malice or unkind feelings towards the girl, but rather felt sorry for her.

The case continues to-day.

Built for Use Every Day

SNYDER'S Sani-Bilt Living Room Furniture, guaranteed mothproof, although handsomest of its kind, is not built for mere show. It is built for hard, everyday use in the most used room in the house—the family living room of the modern home.

When a man wants to be comfortable after the day's work is done, he doesn't long to sit up in a stiff-backed chair or recline on a fancy spindle-legged sofa. Those days are passed and gone. Nowadays a man looks for a broad, low, Sani-Bilt Chesterfield or a deep, capacious Sani-Bilt Chair. He wants to relax and be comfortable.

In a house where there are children it is no use buying living room furniture that won't withstand constant use. Active little people are up and down, in and out, all the time. The Living Room belongs in part to them. Snyder's Sani-Bilt Living Room Furniture is built for the whole family, and the coverings are chosen for their durability, as well as their beauty.

Beauty Founded on Strength

The beauty of Snyder's Sani-Bilt is more than skin deep. It is beauty founded on constructional strength. The frames are built of thick, clear, solid hardwood without knot or flaw. Every joint is put together with a craftsman's skill, being dowelled and corner-blocked, glued and screwed.

Nor does a Sani-Bilt Chair or Chesterfield sag under heavy use. The springs rest on interlaced straps of a special, non-stretchable Scotch webbing, nailed securely to the frame. The springs themselves are more numerous than in ordinary upholstered furniture, the Sani-Bilt Chesterfield seat containing four rows of springs as compared to the usual three. They are of rust-proof, oil-tempered steel, very strong, cross-tied into place so that they may not slip from position under weight of constant use. The strain being thus equalized, no sags can occur. The edge of the seat is supported by a strong, steel wire stretched taut from arm to arm.

The Moths Can't Hurt It

Snyder's Sani-Bilt Furniture is, of course, absolutely immune from moths. Moths can't hurt it. You may leave a piece of Sani-Bilt covering fabric or Sani-Bilt stuffing in the possession of moths for a year. At the end of that time the moths and the moth worms will be dead and withered away to dust. But the fabric will be unharmed.

We want to warn the public that there are certain other makes of upholstered furniture on the market claimed to be mothproof like Sani-Bilt. But the one and only Sani-Bilt process is the process used in the Snyder factory. No other manufacturer of upholstered furniture in Canada uses the Sani-Bilt process. It is a process which is applied to every particle of inside stuffing and every thread of the coverings, in our own factory.

MAKE SURE OF IT

To make sure you are buying the genuine Snyder's Sani-Bilt Furniture, look for the Sani-Bilt Guarantee attached to every piece of genuine Sani-Bilt Furniture. Look also for the label under the Cushions. Leading dealers show a range of Snyder's Sani-Bilt Suites in which you will find quite a wide variety of prices. But, remember, at whatever price you pay you are protected absolutely by the Sani-Bilt Guarantee.

THE ATTACK ON THE PRINCE.

It remained for one of the most prominent Labour leaders, the former Minister of the Colonies, J. H. Thomas, to put Mr. Kirkwood, Labour member, and his associates, who attacked the tour of the Prince of Wales to South America, in their places.

Mr. Thomas remarked, as sensible men everywhere throughout the Empire would if asked for an opinion, that "if, as I believe, the Prince is serving his country by going, who would deny his right to have his expenses paid?"

Labour agitators of the Kirkwood type, however, do not care how much logic there is in their charges if they succeed in gaining cheap publicity for themselves.

No other individual has done as much to knit the British Empire more closely together, no other individual has accomplished as much in increasing the ties of friendship between Britain and the United States as has been effected by the Prince of Wales in his visits to various parts of the Empire and to the American Republic.

His every tour has been a personal triumph for himself—and a wonderful contribution toward the prosperity of the Empire, over which one day he will be King.

THE TALKERS INTERVENE.

Mr. Ferguson's plans for a speedy, business-like session of the Ontario Legislature seem to be threatened with shipwreck on the rock that has shattered many other similar resolutions—the insistence of members upon needlessly prolonging the debate on the Address in reply to the Speech from the Thone.

It is intimated that a small army of members from all parties in the House want to speak their piece before the debate is closed—just why it is impossible to guess, for everything covered in the Speech will be before the Legislature again before the session is concluded.

Of the many foolish features that seem to be regarded as necessary accompaniments to the transaction of public business there is nothing quite so nonsensical as this annual outburst of talk, talk, talk that holds up the proceedings day after day to no possible advantage.

If the various parties each chose a speaker to present its side of the case and the debate were confined to these official expressions of the party viewpoint, the whole thing could be cleaned up in a day with every bit as much achieved as is accomplished now by weeks of wearisome effort by speakers "intoxicated with the exuberance of their own verbosity."

THE GASOLINE TAX.

The tax on gasoline, against which there has been strong protests by the Ontario Motor League and other organizations, is to be even higher than was at first anticipated, a three-cent tax having been decided upon.

The levy may appear to the motoring fraternity as excessive, but it is difficult to convince the people who do not operate cars that the principle of making those who use the roads the most pay more for the privilege is not sound and equitable.

The city dweller who has no car and no prospect of getting one derives little benefit from a costly system of improved highways.

He is lucky if he ever gets a drive over a few miles of such roads, and he is beginning to object strenuously to being taxed for the building and upkeep of highways that so far as he can see are of no value to him.

Such taxpayers—and in spite of the numerous cars in commission their number is legion—feel that it is simple justice that the greatest contribution toward the cost of good roads should be paid by the people who use the roads the most.

The gasoline tax appeals, therefore, as the most equitable manner of ensuring that this contribution shall be made.

The man who merely uses his car at week-ends to give his family an outing and, therefore, is not doing much to wear down the surface of these expensive highways will escape lightly, as he should, while the trucking companies, which use the Provincial road system as a freight route and cause a great deal of wear and tear, will have to contribute proportionately, again as they should.

And the thousands of tourists who tear over the roads of Ontario every season will have to drop their contribution in the hat, too, which is as it should be.

NOT ON THE MARKET.

Ex-Mayor Tommy Church, M.P. of Toronto, is sponsoring a bill in the Federal Parliament in regard to the regulation of newspapers, and while most of the contents of the measure are of no very great importance, there is one feature that indicates that Mr. Church is talking through his hat.

The reference is to the clause calling for editorials for which money is paid to be marked as advertisements.

That request shows that Toronto's ex-Mayor is either utterly at sea in his conception of Canadian newspapers or he is trying to insult journalism in this country.

The editorial columns of newspapers in this country cannot be bought.

They are reserved for the expression of the viewpoint of the papers on matters of public interest and import, and no newspaper that the Examiner knows of departs from that rule under any circumstance.

The space in the editorial columns is not for sale, never has been and never will be, if newspapers are to count for anything in the communities which they serve.

If the section of a journal that is the voice of the organ were available to anybody who chose to buy it for his own purposes, then there would be no place in the scheme of things for a newspaper at all.

Mr. Church should be given to understand—and it is impossible to imagine how he could be so ignorant on such an important point—that editorial opinion cannot be bought.

Such as it is, it represents an honest and sincere attempt on the part of the newspapers to size up the problems of the hour, interpret the news of the day, and to take a stand on public questions.

The editorial column is not on the market, and Mr. Church's bill should bring out that fact forcibly as the significance of his proposal strikes home to the editors throughout the country.

THE NEW WEMBLEY.

The decision of the British Government to re-open the great Wembley Exhibition this summer has been warmly commended in all parts of the Empire, says the Montreal Star. Canada has promised that her display will be better than ever, while the stories which visiting Canadians brought back of its wonders last year has fired hundreds more to make the trip if means and time allow. All the roads within the grounds are being concreted, so that visitors will not have the complaints about heavy going this year if the weather is as unpropitious as it was in 1924. It is disappointing to hear that the great Palace of Engineering which was such a feature of the Wembley of last year will not be seen again. The big engineering firms find that they cannot afford to repeat the immense expenditure. They do not claim that the great outlay of imagination, care and money which they put into the work brought insufficient returns, but they maintain that those profits are too indirect to warrant a repetition of last year's effort. The motor manufacturers also are to abstain on the grounds that Wembley so completely overshadows their own annual display at Olympia as to straiten the gate money and to forestall orders. In their place there will be a Railway Centenary Exhibition and a Good Housing Exhibition, both of which should make an even wider appeal to the general public than did the Engineering display. Plans are also on foot to induce the Air Ministry to support and encourage a great exhibition of military and civil aviation.

Unstinted praise was lavished last year on the general management of the Exhibition, and as the personnel is little changed, the new Wembley should be able to profit by experience and make the Great Fair more popular than ever.

The British Empire is not prone to much bragging, but Wembley certainly gives us an excuse for our most sanguine boasts.

MAKING MONEY FOR THE FARMER.

Time is money, is an old oxiom, and one that is only too true, says the Natural Resources Intelligence Service. Especially do we appreciate this condition when we find it necessary to call in the plumber, the carpenter, or any mechanic of other trades whose charges are based upon the length of time he occupies in completing the work required of him. The farmer's time also is valuable, and must be paid for by the consumer of his products. If he requires two hours to perform a certain piece of work he is entitled to be paid for the time consumed, and no one will begrudge him his charge.

This applies to his time in reaching markets or in his other trips to dispose of his produce. Under old highway conditions, when mud roads were mainly the only kind available, many valuable hours were consumed in reaching the destination, and loads were limited in many instances to the capacity of the team to haul the wagon over the poor roads. When any considerable distance had to be covered, a start had to be made in the small hours of the morning to reach the market on time, and the return journey had to be started early, sometimes entailing the acceptance of sacrifice prices in order to dispose of the load. Times have changed, however, with the coming of good roads. Today he can get over the same distance in one-half or less of the time he previously took, and he can do it with much more comfort. He need not start as early in the morning and he has a longer time to sell his produce, while the early evening sees him back home. His day is consequently shortened and life is made more enjoyable. An illustration of what good roads mean in actual cash is furnished by a large dairy company that collects its milk within a wide radius. The company pays a higher price to the farmers living on good roads than to those situated on highways that are unimproved. The reason is quite evident. It costs the company more in time to collect the milk on the poor roads.

Canada has invested nearly $100,000,000 in improved highways, and has nearly 200,000 miles of good roads. Millions of dollars are being spent yearly to add to this mileage and to improve existing roads. It would be interesting to farmers located on good roads if they would keep a record of the time saved by them and of the greater loads they were able to haul over the good roads. It would lead to a greater appreciation of what this enormous expenditure means to them.

And while we are giving credit to our good roads, let us not forget that Canada's mineral resources have made the good roads possible.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, Man Fb 24 — A dull session of trading was experienced on the wheat market to-day The "bullish" sentiment in evidence at the close Saturday continued during the early part of the session, prices advancing one cent, with the May future closing at $1.98, the high for the day. July gained proportionately, finishing at $1.90 1-2.

Although the market was feature less and quiet the undertone reflected decided strength. There was some purchase of May wheat by exporters against a small amount sold out of Vancouver. Unconfirmed reports also indicated that Russia had placed another large order for flour.

On the coarse grain markets oats suffered an initial setback, but recovered under good buying pressure. Trade volume was fair with exporters taking advantage of every dip. The barley trade was held steady Trade in Rye was comparatively heavy, prices advancing 2 1-2 cents. The flax market was very steady with prices about 1 cent higher.

GERMANS ACTIVE IN EAST AFRICA

Peaceful Penetration to Captured Tanganyika Territory is Commenced.

LONDON, Feb. 23 (Associated Press).—Back to the old colony evidently is the purpose of many German commercial firms who have re-established themselves in Kenya and Uganda, according to Colonel W. H. Franklin, Trade Commissioner in East Africa. Reporting to the Department of Overseas Trade, Colonel Franklin says:

"Since September, 1923, German firms have been allowed to establish their own branches in Kenya and Uganda, and today there are nearly a dozen such establishments in Mombassa giving what can only be described as the loosest of credit conditions.

"How far this is simply a means of commercial repenetration or how far political exigencies enter into the matter, it is difficult to say. It is natural that Germany should try to recapture commercially what she once dominated politically, namely, the Tanganyika territory, and it may also be a matter of national financial policy to hold capital balances abroad in the shape of long-dated bills."

AUTO PRODUCTION LESS.

Fewer Cars in U. S. and Canada in January.

WASHINGTON, February 24 (Canadian Press). — January production of automobiles in Canada and the United States amounted to 212,908 passenger cars, and 28,004 trucks. The Canadian proportion of the total was 8,301 passenger machines and 1,540 trucks.

These figures were compiled by the Commerce Department rfom the manuafcturers' reports, and compared with totals for January, 1924, covering the two countries amounting to 293,822 possessors of cars and 30,627 trucks.

EMIGRANTS TO AUSTRALIA

Commonwealth Has Influx of South Europeans Who Cannot Enter U. S. A.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Feb. 24.—Since the United States began restricting immigration, southern Europe has turned covetous eyes on Australia, and there has been a great influx of Slavs, Greeks, Italians, Maltese and other peoples. The latest advice is that the steamer Cephee will arrive here in a few weeks with 1,200 Jugoslavs.

Sir George Fuller, premier of New South Wales, has written the federal government suggesting that the Commonwealth institute a quota system on the American lines, or adopt other means to limit foreign immigration.

Official government statements declare that while the need for population is urgent, some substantial reason must be advanced before the door be shut against white Europeans. Nevertheless the government is watching the situation carefully.

FORDS FOR AUSTRALIA

Propose Assembly Plant for the Land of the Southern Cross.

MELBOURNE, Feb. 24.— The Australian motor world is much interested in the proposed establishment of 5 assembling plants by the Ford Motor Corporation of Canada, and since the arrival of W. P. Grandeau, secretary of the company, and other representatives, speculation has been nearly as great as the reticence of the visitors.

Mr Grandeau has interviewed commonwealth ministers and sounded them on the tariff and its effect on the Ford project. There is reason to believe that the Ford corporation, in accordance with customs by-laws now operating, would be granted concessions to plant importations, provided the material is not available in Australia.

WOMAN WRITER WANTS "HE-MAN"

Cry of All Her So-Called Intellectual Women Friends, Says "Jane Burr."

A GUGGENHEIM

NEW YORK, Feb. 24—Despatches from Mexico indicated that Jane Burr, famous critic of marriage, was utilizing the speedy divorce procedure of Yucatan to realize her recently expressed desire:

"I want what every woman wants—a man."

The former Rosalind Guggenheim, daughter of the St. Louis family famous for its wealth, has been married for the past ten years to Horatio Winslow, editor of the now extinct Masses. After their wedding the two were members of the New York's group of radical writers and artists.

Marriage on Rocks.

The marriage which Jane Burr is now attempting to dissolve failed to result happily, Miss Burr writes, because Winslow, son of a former justice of the Supreme Court of Wisconsin, was "tall and thin and melancholy, but with all the finenesses that I had longed for and missed in other males. Every sympathy in me was stirred. I wanted to take him home, fatten him and mend him up.

"No two people could have been more poorly suited for matrimony. He, the deep, black recluse; I, the showy, glittering extravert."

They lived in Greenwich Village and later in a little cottage in Cos Cob, Conn., where Jane Burr established her reputation as a poet and writer of feminism.

Winslow, Miss Burr stated, persuaded her to quit fiction and devote her time to poetry. He assisted her with her verse and labored with her over "Feminine Wanderlust" which began:

"Fare you well! I am off down the long dusty road,
"And my heart shall grow light with the lift of the load."

They bade farewell to one another soon after, and in a recent magazine article, Jane Burr explained her cry:

"I want my man!"

Writing on this insistent desire of her soul which rose above any literary or financial success, Miss Burr stated:

He-Men Wanted.

"My cry is the cry of all the so-called intellectual women of my acquaintance.

"Not one of them is married to a he-man. That isn't because they didn't want he-men. It is because they couldn't get he-men.

"In desperation we took what we could get—sweet, sensitive, near-males who were looking for a mother."

While preparing to file a divorce pttition in Yucatan the author has been gathering material for a series of articles on the divorce law in Mexico.

This duplicates the situation by which Jane Burr first won fame, back in 1910. She gained publicity by her volume, "Letters of a Dakota Divorcee," and later went to Dakota to divorce her husband, Jack Punch, a St. Louis manufacturer, on the grounds of cruelty.

Much to her surprise, the judge refused to grant the decree. Later Punch divorced her for desertion and Jane Burr became the wife of Winslow whom she met at the Rand School of Social Science in New York.

U.S. WOMEN WIN AT MONTE CARLO

Play High Stakes on the Riviera Where Lumber King is Shorn.

RECENT "KILLINGS"

PARIS, Feb. 24. — High stakes continue to be the rule at Monte Carlo as well as at Nice and Cannes, where American society folk are flocking around the green tables.

Sitting next to the Duke of Connaught at the Sporting Club Thursday night, Mrs. Hubert Martin of New York won 85,000 francs.

Wins 5 Times on 13.

Mrs Annette Bracey, of Los Angeles, who is considered one of the loveliest women now on the Riviera, made a sensational killing at roulette Friday, winning five consecutive times with the maximum stake on Number 13.

Archibald Selwyn has had a losing streak at Cannes, where the Greek syndicate has practically slain the goose laying the golden eggs by breaking everybody in sight, but Mrs. Selwyn has more than made good the losses of her husband. Mrs. Arnold Rothstein and Mrs. Arthur Hopkins also have been lucky.

Frederick Gimbel, of New York, playing at the big table, won 100,000 francs on Wednesday night at Cannes.

Lumber King Shorn.

Probably the most pathetic story of the gaming tables is that of a big, burly lumber king who, arriving at Cannes a fortnight ago, announced he intended to "crush the Greeks" by the power of his money. The first night he put half a million francs on the table. To date he is loser approximately 14,000,000 francs and is now reduced to playing at the 60-franc minimum table.

MANY WANT ADVENTURE

English Youth Flock to Apply for Tropical Expedition.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—The same adventurous youths who flocked to enlist under the flag when England's navy was called to Trafalgar, live today in modern England. Mitchell Hedges, who recently advertised for three youths to accompany him on an expedition to the wilds of British Honduras, has had 2,300 applications from boys. Most of the applicants gave their age as 19, and finally Mr. Hedges selected two boys of this age and one four years. older.

The expedition is to search for cities and relics of the ancient Maya civilization. Mr. Hedges is taking with him a new invention called the amber spray, which is to be used to spray a varnish like liquid on any relics discovered to protect them from the air and sun. The relic can be sprayed inch by inch as it is unearthed, and later the varnish removed by spraying the object with another liquid.

COMMONS APPOINTS COMMITTEE TO REVISE PARLIAMENT'S RULES

Will Act With Speaker of the House in Considering Present Code.

IRVINE'S PROPOSAL

Hon. Arthur Meighen Sees Representation in House on Geographical Divisions.

OTTAWA, Feb. 24 (Canadian Press)—Appointment of a committee to act with the Speaker in considering and reporting on a proposed revision of the rules of Parliament was approved yesterday afternoon by the House of Commons. The question arose on a motion of William Irvine, Labor member for East Calgary, drawing the attention of the House to the desirability of a revision of the rules, and asking for a special committee to consider such revision. Later, Mr. Irvine withdrew his resolution in favor of an amendment proposed by Premier King, that the committee should act with the Speaker in considering the proposed revision. The amendment of the prime minister passed without a vote.

Parliamentary control over public expenditures was inadequate, maintained Mr. Irvine. Private members could not move an increase to the estimates and could not introduce a question for discussion which involved a financial outlay.

The result was that members did not always feel free to move the reduction of expenditures, for the reason that such a motion might be taken by the government as a vote of censure.

"This practice," stated Mr. Irvine, "which construes a motion to reduce an estimate as virtually a vote of censure of the government, practically makes parliamentary control over expenditures a farce.

To Special Committees

Mr. Irvine expressed the opinion that it would be better if estimates were allocated to special committees of parliament, instead of being passed on by the committee of the whole House. The rule which permitted only a single amendment to the Budget might well be the subject of consideration by the committee, he proposed.

"A good deal of consternation was caused last year when the leader of the Labor Party stepped into the place usually occupied by the leader of the Opposition, and moved an amendment to the Budget," Mr. Irvine said.

When Mr. Irvine sat down, no other member rose to participate in the debate.

After waiting a moment, Premier King stated that unless there was some expression from the House, the Government would not feel justified in taking hasty action. The Government was not opposed to a revision of the rules, but hoped to get through the session with despatch.

"Is the government satisfied with the rules as they are?" asked Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, Opposition leader.

Mr. King replied that the Government felt there was room for revision, but time was pressing.

W. C. Good (Progressive, Brant) said that he thought the rules of the House resulted, sometimes, in inefficiency. The rules had been built up when conditions were very different. They ought to be brought up to date.

Ready for Election

Robert Forke (Progressive, Leader) said that the Progressive group was practically bound to support the resolution. He indicated that procedure on the estimates might be considerably augmented, if rules were changed, and that the Government should not necessarily be obliged to go to the country because of a minor defeat on a division in the House. "I am quite ready to go to the country myself," he said.

"How would June suit you?" suggested H. C. Hocken (Conservative, Toronto West).

Mr. Forke said he was ready at any time. e thought that in future there would be more than three groups in the House, and the rules might be adjusted accordingly.

The Prime Minister moved an amendment to Mr. Irvine's resolution to the effect that the matter of revision of rules of the House be referred to a committee in association with the Speaker.

Dislikes Group System.

Referring to Mr. Forke's mention of the group system, and the proposal that more than one amendment might be made to the Budget, Mr. Meighen said, "I don't want to give any encouragement to groups. I don't think the group system is consonant with the British Parliamentary system in Canada. The group system is most certain to become one of sectional representation." There was a general trend to geographical representation. "After the next general election," he went on, "this House, insofar as it is a collection of groups, will, in the main, represent geographical divisions. Group representation on geographical divisions in this House, spell very great danger for this Dominion."

Mr. Meighen opposed any suggestion that there should be more latitude in the way of allowing private members to move for expenditures. It was absolutely essential that the government alone should initiate expenditures, otherwise the principle of government responsibility would be undermined.

It seemed right and proper that a government in power should have a majority on committees, but, under the present "group system," opposition in many cases was almost extinguished.

"Might I ask," interjected G. G. Coote (Progressive, Macleod) if the hon. gentleman is including the banking committee?"

"Yes, I include anything," replied Mr. Meighen.

"Is it the duty of an Opposition," asked Robert Forke (Leader, Progressives), "always to oppose?"

"Always to oppose this Government, Yes," retorted Mr. Meighen, amid laughter.

T. W. Bird (Progressive, Nelson) caused considerable amusement by remarking that he thought it was a mistake that the seating arrangement of the House should force the Prime Minister and the Leader of the Opposition to the uncongenial task of looking one another in the face.

Hon. Gorge P. Graham, Minister of Railways and Canals, pointed out that the rules of the House were founded on principles. He did not personally favor the group system, but rather the principle of two parties.

Mr. Graham urged that every one should "try to broaden out a bit and see the other fellow's point of view." As to the rules, he thought committess ought to be more careful in the reports they bring in. They were liable to limit work to some particular topic. It was for the government to decide ultimately whether or not a defeat on a small item in the estimates could be taken as a vote of want of confidence.

William Irvine, in withdrawing his resolution in favor of the amended resolution, put forward by the Prime Minister, said he had hopes for the future of the group system.

SLAVE ADS IN OLD PAPER.

Newspapers of Long Ago Printed News Without Headlines.

ATLANTA, Ga., February 24 (United Press). — Traffic in negro slavery, as practised in the old South in 1787, is revealed in the "Gazette of the State of Georgia," published in that year in Savannah.

The first thing that attracts the eye in this two-page, three-column newspaper, is a page one advertisement reading:

"A few prime slaves. Just arrived. May be purchased for cash or rice."

The paper, the only existing copy of which is owned by an Atlanta man, carries a number of whisky advertisements, among which is the following:

"George Spencer will sell for cash a few puncheons (casks) of the best high-proof Barbadoes rum."

Then there is a news story on the front page, and to give you an idea of how the boys did it back in those days, read this:

"Chevalier de Bouju, son of the comte of the famed name, is now the wonder of all Paris. This young man is of uncommon strength and is much addicted to gambling—(the rascal). When he loses at play he always thinks that those who win his money cheat him, and he insults them accordingly."

The item goes on to relate that the police attempted to bar him from Parisian gambling tables, with the result that young Bouju routed the Paris coppers with his broadsword.

The paper contained no headlines and few datelines. Reading matter starts in the left hand column of page one and continues straight through to the back page. "Public" was spelled "publick" and in all the finer type the "e's" look like "f's."

Battlements of Business - TORONTO

HERE is the focal point, the very heart of the industrial, commercial and financial activities of the wealthy Province of Ontario.

Here, in concrete and steel, is expressed the spirit of progress which typifies this great business centre.

More than half the manufactured products of the Dominion, and 26 per cent of Canada's field crops come from the Province of which Toronto is the political and commercial capital.

The stately Queen City, under the friendly spur of competition from a score of flourishing Ontario cities, affords a fine example of efficiency in manufacturing and trading.

Toronto is a distributing point of more than provincial importance. Her commerce extends to those vast territories, East and West, reached by the Canadian Pacific. The products of her factories go beyond Canada's shores to the markets of the world. So widespread are her activities that Transportation that "spans the world" has become a vital factor in Toronto's future. There is a bond of common interest linking the activities of the Queen City with the greatest of the world's carriers—The Canadian Pacific.

GASOLINE TAX IS THREE CENTS

Premier Ferguson Hands Motor League a Rather Unpleasant Surprise, For Them.

TAX ON GALLON.

TORONTO, February 24 (Canadian Press). — The announcement by the Premier yesterday afternoon to the deputation from the Ontario Motor League that the Government proposed a 3-cent tax on gasoline came as a big surprise.

Everyone was expecting a 2-cent tax.

The delegates from the Motor League were not pleased as a result of their interview with the Premier and the Minister of Highways, Hon. George S. Henry.

The new tax is expected to bring in $3,000,000 a year.

If it is a real success, there may be a revision of motor license fees next year, but it is a remote possibility, according to the Premier.

His anouncement that within the next two years the Government proposes to complete a hard surface road from Windsor to the Quebec boundary brought aplause. There is a large portion of this road already completed.

At Source of Supply.

The Premier stated that the tax would be assessed at the source of supply. He thought the idea was to impose a tax and collect from the man who handles the gasoline after it comes from the manufacturer.

"In the Province of Quebec, they have a two-cent gasoline tax," said the Premier. "They propose increasing it to 4 cents. They are urging this Province to act in uniformity with them so we can have another step towards the "bonne entente' if you like. (Laughter.) The Government, frankly, are not inclined to go that far, at the present time at any rate. What the Government has in mind is a 3 cent tax on gasoline for motor purposes.

"I think the principle is sound that the traffic should pay for the means of transportation. The 3 cent tax seems fair and equitable."

Ask Postponement.

Morden Neilson, president of the Motor League, who was the chief spokesman of a deputation which filled the reception room, stated that the League approved of the gasoline tax in principle, but opposed its imposition as a surtax upon the existing license fee, contending that the motor vehicle owners were at present contributing a fair share to the cost of road work. They asked that the matter be deferred until January, 1926, at which time the motor license fee should be proportionately reduced. A 2 cent a gallon tax on gasoline was estimated to bring in $2,000,000.

Interrupting Mr. Neilson while he was speaking of talk of a dollar fee on all drivers, Premier Ferguson said that was not the proposed fee.

It would not be as high as that, but might be 10, 15, or 25 cents.

Other speakers included T. N. Phelan, vice-president of the League, and Messrs. Johnson, of Ottawa; Asselstine, of Kingston; Briscoe, of Chatham; Overhill, of Hamilton; Rose, of St. Catharines; Colliver, of Picton; Frazer, of Peterborough; Sparling, of Cobourg; Milne, of Galt, and Denton, of Tillsonburg.

CHAMBERLAIN DENIES CONFERENCE ON ARMS

Proposal Unofficially Mentioned by U. S. Ambassador.

LONDON, February 24 (Canadian Press). — Commander Kenworthy, in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon, questioned Foreign Secretary Chamberlain as to whether, in discussions with representatives of other Governments regarding the proposed naval armaments conference, the question of extending the scope of the conference to include aerial and land armaments had arisen.

Mr. Chamberlain replied that no such discussions had taken place.

When a further attempt was made to interrogate the Foreign Secretary on the subject, he repeated that the projected conference had only been unofficially mentioned in a conversation with Ambassador Kellogg. He insisted that "no communications have passed between Great Britain and the United States on the matter, and, at the moment, it is not desirable that I should make any further statement."

MARTIN, Ky., Feb. 22. — Two men were killed, including a Deputy Sheriff, and five others were wounded during a gun battle here Sunday. The cause of the shooting had not been learned.

The dead were Tait Hall, Deputy Sheriff of Floyd County, and Lewis White; the wounded: John Hall, Town Marshal of Wheelwright, Ky.; Steven and John Flannery; Dick Thompson and Norman Collins.

Causes which led to the shooting were veiled in mystery. Authorities declared White and John Hall met as the latter was boarding a train here shortly before noon. The men are reported to have exchanged a few words and then to have drawn pistols. White was wounded, but he continued to pump bullets at Hall. A few minutes later White fell dead.

The shooting is then reported to have become general. During an exchange of shots among an undetermined number of men, more than 200 shots were fired, according to a police report.

Two versions of the shooting were circulated here one was that a feud existed between White and the Halls, and another was that the Halls were attempting to place White under arrest.

DELORO CHORAL CLUB'S CONCERT

Mining Village's Chorus and String Quartette Assisted by Leo Smith of Toronto.

A FINE EFFORT

MARMORA, Feb. 24.—The musical concert in Deloro Hall on Saturday evening, under the auspices of the Deloro Choral Club, assisted by the Deloro String Quartette and by that eminent 'cellist, Mr. Leo Smith, of Toronto, was one of the high lights of the season's entertainments.

At the beginning of the concert, Mr. S. B. Wright, Reeve of Deloro, gave a short address, telling of the origin of the Choral Club, last October, under the efficient leadership of Mr. Ross Hunter, late of Picton. Much credit was given to Mrs. Hunter, the talented accompanist, also to the faithfulness and talent of the members of the Choral Club necessary to produce a concert such as was presented that evening.

The following programme was given:

"There's a Land" (F. Allitsen) and Intercessory Hymn (Edward German)—Deloro Choral Club.

"Romance" (Sibelus) and "A Spanish Serenade" (Popper), and "Waltz" (C. Davidoff) — Mr. Leo Smith.

"Turn Ye to Me," Gaelic air (arranged by Collinson) and "Allegro Moderato," String Quartette No. 63 (Haydn)—Deloro String Quartette.

"He. Watching Over Israel," from "Elijah" (Mendelssohn) — Deloro Choral Club.

"The Gentle Maiden," old Irish air; "The Shy Shepherdess," old English air, and "Top o' the Cork Road," old Irish air (arranged by Cedric Sharpe)—Mr. Leo Smith.

"Husheen" (A. A. Needham) — Ladies' Voices.

String Quintette, Allegro Brillante (Schumann) — Delora String Quartette. Mrs. Hunter at piano.

"Soldiers' Chorus," from 'Faust' (Gounod)—Deloro Choral Club, assisted by Mr. S. B. Wright and Mr. Leo Smith.

God Save the King.

Those playing in the string quartette were: Messrs. S. B. Wright, Yates, Rigg and Hunter.

The Choral Club was composed of: Mrs. S. B. Wright, Miss J. Smyth, Miss Shea, Miss Wilson, Mrs. McNally, Miss Scarlett, Mrs. Cheeseman, Mrs. Hackey, Mrs. Scott, Mrs. Tamplin, Mrs. Hempel, Mrs. Williams and Mrs. Barlow, and Messrs. Grasham, Chapman, Ethier, Cheeseman, Tamplin, Patterson, Groves, Rigg and Yates.

Marmora Visitors.

There was a large appreciative audience present. Among those from Marmora were: Dr. and Mrs. Crawford, Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Pearce and Master Stanley, Mr. Grant, Mr. Hann, Mrs. Dr. Thompson, Rev. and Mrs. Clare and Miss Florence Clare, Miss Mildred Bedore, Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Bell and Miss Lorraine Bell, Mr. Lester, Miss L. Conner, Mrs. C. Gladney, Dr. Curtis, Mr. and Mrs. W. Sanderson, Mr. and Mrs. F. Wells, Mrs. Litt, Miss S. Moynes, Miss Hart, Mrs. N. Williams, Miss H. Williams, Miss C. Simmons, Mr. Aunger, Rev. P. Watson and Mr. Archer.

Sale of Cooking.

A very successful sale of home-made cooking and fancy articles was held by the Cheerful Workers' Class of the Methodist Church on Saturday afternoon in the Forestell and Maloney block.

The Busy Bees' Class also had a table of home-made cooking.

The total proceeds were about $35.

Personals.

Mr. Ed. Gladney visited his brother, Mr. C. Gladney, this week.

Mr. Wm. Inster and family motored over from Trent River on Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. A. T. Neal, who has been in the General Hospital, Kingston, for some weeks, has returned home much improved.

Mrs. S. B. Wright, of Deloro, entertained the Choral Club after the concert on Saturday night.

Mr. Leo Smith, of Toronto, was the guest of Mr. S. B. Wright over the week-end.

Commencing Wednesday, March 4th, the Reb. George Oliver Davies, B.A., rector of Rawdon, will give weekly addresses during Lent at St. Paul's Church on "The Church, Its Books and Its Sacraments." The evening service on Ash Wednesday will be taken by the Rector.

FINGER PRINTS BY RADIO.

A New Telegraphic Code For Transmitting Information Perfected.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—All the police chiefs in the principal cities of the United States, and other parts of the world, have been supplied with the key of a new telegraphic code prefected by Superintendent Charles Collins, of the Finger Print Bureau at Scotland Yard. Under this plan, by which the radio is brought into play to assist the work of detectives in tracing criminals, the records of persons held on suspicion may be obtained by wireless broadcasting of their finger prints.

The first use of the new system was made recently when a man arrested in London was identified in New York upon the receipt of finger prints taken here. The suspect had no police record in London, but Scotland Yard officials doubted the man's alibi and sent his prints by radio to the New York police, the records of the bureau in that city revealing him as a well known criminal.

In establishing the identity of the prisoner held in London, approximately 60 letters and figures were used in the Scotland Yard code system.

SALVAGE SCHEME.

Operations on Ill-fated Empress of Ireland This Year.

QUEBEC, Feb. 24. — (Canadian Press).—Plans to salvage every article of any value that went down in the Canadian Pacific steamship Empress of Ireland, and which were not taken from the steamer following her sinking, with the loss of more than a thousand lives, six and one-half miles east of Father Point in May, 1914, when she was rammed by the Norwegian collier Storstadt, are believed to be under way. It is reported that operations will be started early next summer by a syndicate comprising prominent Canadian and U. S. salvage men. It is said there yet remain valuables within the hull of the Empress of Ireland, the monetary value of which will easily run into large figures. The liner sunk in 102 feet of water.

This Lassie Has Her Colds "Rubbed Away"

The mother of this attractive little girl, Mrs. E. E. Emmans, of 215 Seventh Ave., N.E., Portage La Prairie, Man., is one of the many Canadian mothers who are enthusiastic about the vaporizing salve, Vicks Vapo-Rub, for treating children's colds. Mrs. Emmans writes: "My little girl had croup at night pretty badly and Vicks did her a lot of good. I have also used it with very satisfactory results for head and chest colds."

Vicks is just "rubbed in" for sore throat, tonsilitis, bronchitis, croup or deep chest colds. When so applied, Vicks has a double direct action; internally medicated vapors are inhaled while, at the same time, externally, it is absorbed through and stimulates the skin.

PETERBORO'S TAX RATE JUMPS

there has been $2,000 spent on charity.

In the fire, Water and Light committee, Alderman Jones stood firm for $39,000, declaring that even now the Fire Department is under equipped. After nearly an hour's discussion he won his point, and will endeavour to purchase a new car for the fire chief by saving out of this sum. It had been suggested that $38,200 was sufficient, although the fire chief asked $41,000.

Change Tax Payments.

Another fruitless effort was made to change the tax-payment system back to the two instalment plan, but a change was made allowing one per cent. discount on the second and third instalments if paid with the first partial payment. It was contended that by making the taxes payable in two instalments the city would save $800 to $1,000 in interest charges. The plan now adopted will not add cash to the city coffers, but it will divert it from the bank to the tax-payer.

Police Estimates.

Alderman Stocker led the assault on the police estimates, asking first that they be cut from $25,172 to $20,000, but later falling in with Alderman Crowe's suggestion that $22,000 be allowed. Only these two supported the cut, and Alderman Denne's motion that the appropriation for the Police Department be fixed at $25,000 passed. In the course of his arraignment of the police force Alderman Stocker took issue with the Mayor on the question of the bonus of $309.12 paid Chief of Police Newhall in lieu of his salary for the latter weeks of 1923. The City Council refused to pay this after the Chief had lost a suit he brought for recovery. Mayor Turner pointed out that the Chief had earned the salary; that he was morally entitled to it; and that the amount had been paid out of a lump sum allocated to the use of the Police Commission. None of the Aldermen seemed disposed to take up cudgels with Alderman Stocker, and he gave way to Alderman Crowe, who bewailed the size of the Peterborough force compared with that of Belleville, Kingston, Orillia and other cities and towns on the water front. He pictured the water front as the gathering place of all evil spirits while this city nestles in its seven hills, serene and far from the footsteps of those bent on crime.

Alderman Meyers, on being informed that His Honor Judge Huycke had not accepted his cheque for $100 allowed him last year as chairman of the Police Commission, said he was sorry he had supported the reduction of the honorarium from $300, and would now support a motion to restore it.

Alderman Stocker countered with a proposal to cut off the amount altogether, introducing a little comedy into an otherwise serious debate by suggesting that the Council is acting absolutely illegally in paying it. He found no support, and the police estimates carried by a large majority.

Storm Drains.

The amount of $5,000 for storm drains looking promising to Alderman Phelan and a few others who saw good prospects of shaving a considerable amount off the total by the elimiantion of this item. Mayor Turner and Alderman Fife were the principal supporters of the storm drain project, as they were last year, with Alderman McIntyre gallantly backing them up. A motion by Aldermen Denne and Greene to cut the $5,000 from the estimates was defeated.

It was pointed out that while the storm drains may appear now to benefit only one section of the city, they are intended eventually to link up the whole of the city streets in a single system. A start had to be made somewhere, and the most needy section was selected—in the Sherbrooke street area.

Special Grants.

Special grants gave some of the Aldermen another chance to ride their hobbies, and a great deal of discussion ended in a trim in this department of only $200. Other items that counted up last year were omitted for various reasons. Alderman Crowe questioned the usefulness of the Poultry Association. Alderman Fife attacked the exhibiting of fish in New York to attract tourists to take other fish away from these waters. "We have a fad on this Trent Canal," he said, asking for and getting a trim of fifty per cent in the grant to the Trent Waterway Development Association. Only $200 will be granted this year instead of $400. There will be no grant to the Canadian Deep Waterways Association this year; last year's grant was $100.

A sum of $200 was added to the Reception committee budget to provide for entertaining the Senior Hockey team. Talk by Alderman Phelan of gold watches and diamond rings presented to other teams under similar circumstances met with a cool reception, it being recognized that $200 would not go far towards the expense of such an expression of appreciation. It was admitted all around the board that the team has brought Peterborough a great deal of invaluable advertising.

Is This Your Birthday?

TUESDAY, Feb. 24 — Persons born this day will desire to lead a calm, peaceful life. They will prefer to live in the country or the suburban districts of a large city. A strong religious streak will be noticeable characteristic; as they grow older. At times, even when in the company of others they become extremely lonely, believing that other people do not understand them. Happiness, however, will come through marriage.

The NERVOUS WRECK

by E. J. Rath

©1924 - by NEA Service Inc.

He broke off in a cry of rage. The flivver was diving into the brush again and the posse seemed unable to stop it. He leaped to assist, slammed on the emergency brake, brought the cantankerous thing to a halt and fired a broadside of denunciation. But it was amazing to see that they not only endured it, but followed his directions about putting the car back on the road.

When he came back to her she hastily smothered a laugh. Not for the world did she want him to know that he amused her.

"They don't get anything right," he complained.

"Still I think they're trying," she said generously.

"But they don't understand."

"Lots of people don't understand things."

"Huh?"

She meant something; he felt certain. Did she mean that there were some things that he did not understand? Well, if so, what were they?

"What don't they understand?" demanded the Wreck.

"All kinds."

"Now you're just talking nonsense—in circles."

"I suppose so," said Sally.

"Do you mean me?" he asked, sharply.

"Oh, don't let's quarrel again."

"I'm not quarrelling. I never quarrel. My nerves may get on edge, but I'm always pleasant. I'm always——"

They were doing something wrong with the flivver.

Eventually they got it right again and once more resumed painful progress toward the main road. They were not far from it now; almost to the top of the last rise. When the Wreck returned to Sally he was moping his forehead.

"Excuse me," he said, "but they get me all worked up. Once we get to the main road, we're all right. Plain sailing then. We'll be almost at the end of this foolishness."

"Yes," agreed Sally.

"I bet you'll be glad."

She bit her lip until it made her wince. He was probably the most impossible person in the world.

"Get you home in no time after we hit the road," he added.

She flared without a warning symptom.

"Stop talking to me, Henry Williams!"

"Now, what have I said?" he asked.

"N-nothing!" She almost shouted it.

"Then what are you sore about?"

"I—I'm not sore. I just think you're the biggest idiot in the whole state of Montana—that's all."

He puzzled over that, got no sense out of it, but became suddenly conscious of it, but became suddenly contrite.

"I suppose so," he said. "I can't ever seem to do things right. Only I thought you were in a hurry to get home, and— What?"

She had mumbled something, but he did not catch it.

"What did you say?"

"You're always putting words in my mouth!" she exclaimed. "I never said I was in a hurry to get home. I never said I'd be glad. I never said——"

The tears were in her eyes again and she made an angry effort to dash them away with her hand.

"Oh, stop it!" groaned the Wreck. "I didn't mean anything. Honestly, Sally. I'm just a bonehead. I'm a near-sighted, goggle-eyed mutt. I'm all nerves. I'm a wreck. I've got a rotten temper and a mean disposition, and I know it."

"Do you really believe all that, Henry Williams?"

"Certainly, I believe it."

"Would you let anybody else say it?"

"No"

"Neither would I," said Sally.

The Wreck stared. He swallowed hard. His taut nerves, it seemed to him, were vibrating a million times to the second. He felt as though he were soaring far above the common things of earth. Did she really mean—No! Yes! He was scared—absolutely appalled—yet triumphant. How was it that everything hit him so suddenly? For he saw light at last. But the light was so dazzling that it did not show him the way. It blinded him. It fairly made him dizzy.

"Sally!"

"Yes, old-timer?"

"Sally Morgan! Honestly, could you——"

There was a surly interruption from the voice of the sheriff.

"We've rolled this darn thing as far as we're going to. There's the main road in front of you. If you can't manage yourself from now on, you can stay here for the rest of the summer, for all I care."

The Wreck came back to earth, but he touched it very lightly. He shook himself, blinked, grinned, laughed aloud. His chin was up and his shoulders were back. He was awake, because he saw a flivver, and four men, and other familiar objects. He also saw Sally Morgan, very pink in the cheeks and with a queer, incredulous expression in her eyes. He strode forward like a champion. He swaggered a little. He was ragged, a trifle absurd—but kingly.

He made a sweeping gesture that belonged in melodrama, but with the Wreck it was intense realism. It was a dismissal.

"On your way!" he commanded. "Get out of here. You're all through. Beat it!"

The middle-aged, solid-looking man, who stood wiping his face and breathing heavily, spoke up from the heart.

"Last time I'll ever go out on a posse with you, Bob Wells," he said. "I don't mind performing the reasonable duties of citizenship, but I'll be doggoned if I'll ever roll a flivver again—not if it stands between me and the gates of Heaven. When I get through with this job I'm going back home and I'm going to stay there. If you want a justice of the peace, you know where I am. But if you want a garage hand——"

The Wreck interrupted him by walking briskly forward and tapping him on the breast with a rigid forefinger.

"Justice of the peace, did you say?" he asked.

"Justice of the peace," said the middle-aged man.

"Issue warrants, try cases, send people to jail, and all that?"

"All that and other things, young man."

The Wreck beamed at him.

"Can you marry people?" he demanded.

"Not only c but do," answered the justice of the peace.

The Wreck whooped.

CAVE CITY BACK TO NORMALCY

Military and Newspaper Men Quit Scene of Collins Rescue Efforts.

CAVE CITY, Ky., Feb. 24.—Relieved of its strain and tension of nineteen days, Cave City today drifted along in its usual calm. Floyd Collins, found trapped in Sand cave, January 31, had died in his natural tomb and funeral services had been conducted.

The Dixie Hotel, headquarters for the military, a host of newspaper men and many of the rescue workers, was nearly deserted.

A wreath of flowers had been carried to the Sand cave tomb. It came from the newsboys of The Louisville Courier-Journal and Times. Funeral services, held on short notice, made it impossible to get any floral offerings to the scene in time.

Wales Going Abroad In The Interest Of Workers

The Prince of Wales, blissfully making ready for a run to the Southern Hemisphere, had a jar the other day when a Red Clyde labor leader in Parliament demanded that £2,000 should be lopped off the appropriation for the globe-trotter's travelling expenses. "Come with me to Glasgow," said the earnest Scot to the absent Prince, "and I'll show you sights you won't see in Africa or South America. I'll show you how the workers of your land live." It seems a bit rough when you remember that the Prince is going abroad to seek new markets for the products of those same workers.

Albert Edward is no Nero, even if he was born in a palace. At a recent party for charity he singled out a blind girl to be his dancing partner, and gave her a moment of triumph to remember for the rest of her poor, sightless days.

JAPAN IS READY TO LIMIT ARMS

Would Agree to an Air Programme on Same Ratio as Naval.

SAYS OFFICIAL.

LONDON, Feb. 24. — (United Press).—The Japanese War Department would gladly agree to an air ratio similar to the naval ratio in the event of a second disarmament conference were held at Washington, Captain Hizosi, of the Japanese General Staff, is quoted as saying in an interview with the Daily Mail's correspondent.

"Japan has nothing to lose in the matter of air strength, despite fears expressed abroad," continued the official. "While we are just completing a strong air programme, we have fewer than 500 craft in commission, while the United States has 2,000 and France twice that number.

"Therefore, any suggestion that the strength of Great Britain, the United States and Japan should be in respective ratios, 5-5-3, is wholly satisfactory to us.

"I feel certain that the War Office would willingly agree to limit its arms to the extent of national defence requirements."

EPIDEMICS AT ORLAND.

Many Cases of Mumps and Whooping Cough Reported in District.

ORLAND, Feb. 24.—The family of Robert Spencer, who resides about three miles southeast of this place near the stone school house, has been quarantined with the scarlet fever. There are also many cases of mumps and whooping cough throughout the township.

The farmers who are getting up their yearly supply of fire wood are much handicapped by the recent thaw which has filled the swamps with water and taken off nearly all the snow. However, they have succeeded in getting a large number of logs deliverd at Mr. Willet Simpson's lumber mill.

INVITE ENQUIRY.

British Ship Owners Comment on Preston Report.

LONDON, Feb. 24. — (Canadian Press).—The Chamber of Shipping of the United Kingdom and the Liverpool Steamship Owners' Association, in a letter drawing the attention of Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister, president of the Board of Trade, to the charges against the North Atlantic Shipping Conference contained in the report of W. T. R. Preston, state that the lines interested in this traffic would cordially welcome a searching investigation of the charges to be made by the Imperial Shipping Committee, which was formed at the instance of the Dominions and to which several questions affecting Canadian interest have quite recently been referred by the Canadian Government.

LONDON, February 24 (Canadian Press). — Announcement that the Australian Commonwealth Government has decided to sell thirty-one ships composing the Commonwealth Line, attracted much notice here.

WOMAN OSSIFIES AND DIES.

Iowa Victim of Neuritis Deformans Withered From 223 to 40 Pounds.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa, Feb. 24. —Mrs. Mary McCormick, of Charlton, Iowa, died in the University Hospital at Iowa City of one of the rarest diseases known to medical science, physicians said.

She was attacked by neuritis deformans six years ago and vainly sought relief from some of the leading specialists in the country. Six weeks ago, she entered the University Hospital with the hope of obtaining some relief, but knowing that death was only a matter of a short time.

Just after entering the hospital, Mrs. McCormick began to turn to stone. Two weeks ago her jaws set and she was only able to open them a fraction of an inch. It was impossible to give her food, and she gradually starved to death, attendants at the hospital said.

When the disease first seized Mrs. McCormich she weighed about 223 pounds, but as her body ossified she gradually withered to only about 40 pounds. Mrs. McCormick suffered considerable pain, it was said, when she first became ill, but as the end approached the pain gradually subsided.

Tanlac goes straight to the seat of your trouble; cleanses and purifies the blood stream; puts your digestion in proper shape. First thing you know you have an appetite like a starved child. You rest at night and your whole body begins to feel the stir of strength and energy.

Don't you be discouraged. Don't put off testing Tanlac another day. Get a bottle now and in a week you should notice signs of real improvement.

PARLIAMENT READY FOR MAIN BUSINESS OF THE 1925 SESSION

Debate on Speech From the Throne Was Short—Analysis of Estimates.

PROGRESSIVES QUIET

OTTAWA, Feb. 23.—The proceedings in Parliament during the first two weeks do not suggest a long or turbulent session, but it would be a mistake to conclude therefrom that it will be both short and sweet. The debate on the Address was curtailed because both the Government and the Progressives decided not to enter generally into it. The Government relied on the effort of the Prime Minister, while only a few of the Progressives spoke after Mr. Forke. But the Conservatives had their share, for even after the debate had been closed on the part of the deputy speaker, they insisted on their rights and the discussion was renewed for two more days.

If the Progressives shut down on their usual flow of words, the session will certainly be shorter than others in this parliament have been. But there is no assurance that they will do this. They merely say that when the subjects mentioned in the legislative programme come specifically before the House they can be better discussed than in the debate on the Address. It does look, however, as though higher wheat prices, with their accompaniment of better times on the prairies, had taken some of the sting out of their criticism. Their general attitude is that conditions appear to be righting themselves and that it is now a case pretty much of holding on and planting a large acreage to grain.

The Conservatives intend to fight it out, and apparently quite as strenuously as their numbers will permit. In point of individual effectiveness they do not measure up to some other Oppositions, but in such men as Messrs. Meighen, Stevens, Manion, Guthrie and Baxter they have some of the best. From present indications the Conservatives' really big effort will come during the debate on Mr. Meighen's national policy resolution. Owing to the fact that private members' day only comes once a week, their effort will be rather disjointed, but they cannot help this. At any rate they will make the most of their opportunity.

Listening to the debate on the Address one got the impression that the average member of the House does not expect a marked and early revival of business. He has pretty well come to the conclusion that it will be a long pull, longer possibly than is usual during such periods, because the various sections of the country are not pulling together. A much more serious view of the situation is being taken than formerly. In the sessions past when certain members talked of grievances they were usually dismissed with the observation that they had a grouch.

No Relief From Taxation.

The estimates for the coming fiscal year bear out expectations that there is no immediate prospect of a reduction in either taxation or expenditure. Of course, to those who have followed the situation closely this will not be a surprise. The country having multiplied its net debt six times during the last decade, and having in addition taken on a great burden of railway indebtedness, has to carry a heavy load, and there is no way out of it. In addition an invisible debt has been growing in the form of railway guarantees, which is eating up more millions in the form of taxation. Canada has very little to realize on in the form of debts, as has the United States, and she has neither the wealth nor the people to tax, as has the republic.

The total estimates before parliament at this date are $402,704,547, or within $3,700,000 of the total estimates, including main and supplementary, of last year. The so-called main estimates this year, which amount to $342,036,597, do not include the amounts asked for the railways and Government shipping, which need another $60,670,000. Add this to the $342,036,597, and one gets the total of $404,704,547, which is only slightly less than the entire appropriations put through last session. It will be surprising if another $18,000,000 or $20,000,000 is not added in the form either of supplementary estimates or loans of one kind or another.

Observers of experience note that Parliament is viewing with unwonted equanimity this increase in expenditure, for it is noteworthy that the burden of argument on the part of a very large section is to justify it. Possibly, after all, this is only the part of honest men, for it passes comprehension how some persons could expect a comparatively sparsely settled country, such as Canada, to spend well on to $2,000,000,000 on the great war, to say nothing of that spent on the railways, and not feel it in heavy taxation.

Vote for Home Bank Depositors.

The Prime Minister has informed Parliament that the Government, in conformity with the recommendation of the banking and commerce committee, that the depositors of the Home Bank have a moral claim to be recouped for their losses, will introduce a bill this session to this end. The indications are that this will take the best part of $10,000,000. Indeed, by the time the legislation is through the House it is questionable if there will be any of the $10,000,000 left. The bill will go through the House all right, for an election is too near in sight to induce many members of the lower House to oppose it. The Government would welcome opposition in the Senate, for it would give them a good issue in a general election, but it is unlikely that the Senate would oppose a measure of this kind that is strongly supported in the Commons.

As the estimates for the Canadian National Railways call for $3,473,000 more than the total vote this year, it is probable that this pretty well indicates the reduction in net earnings during the last calendar year. The slump in business during the last 12 months has been quite disappointing to the acting Minister of Finance, and the remarks of some members of the Government dropped by the way indicate that they are not quite as optimistic over the immediate railway outlook as they were during the early part of 1924. This is not to say that the situation is any worse; it means really that men generally are getting a better balanced view of the situation.

Immigration Estimates.

Some have expressed surprise that the immigration estimates have been reduced to the extent of $708,000. This does not necessarily mean that efforts to secure immigrants will be any less aggressive; it means only that less money will be spent possibly on publicity and attendant features. It would not be surprising if the amount for advertising in the United States were reduced, for it is quite evident that results are not being secured in proportion to the amount of money spent over there. The truth is that in his present frame of mind the American farmer is not much disposed to come to Canada. Two dollar wheat may induce him to change his mind, but this remains to be seen.

A reduction of $1,500,000 in the Soldier Settlement estimates and of $1,210,000 for Soldier Civil Re-Establishment shows that these features of the Government's work are gradually being reduced. At the same time they call for an expenditure of nearly $13,000,000 in this coming year. But in this kind of expenditure a great deal of what is saved with one hand is spent by the other, for pensions call for an increased expenditure of $1,080,000. The miscellaneous expenditure this year calls for $3,429,000 less than it did a year ago. Here and in the Department of Trade and Commerce, which is to get $800,000 less than it got this year, real economy is being manifested.

So Says Mr. Allan McMullin of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Nova Scotia Man was unable to move in his bed, but Dodd's Kidney Pills brought him relief.

Upper Grand Mira, N. S.—(Special).—"I am more than thankful to Dodd's Kidney Pills, because they have helped me so much," states Mr. McMullin, a well-known and highly-respected resident of this place. "I know I could not live without them. Before I started taking Dodd's Kidney Pills I was so bad I could not move in my bed. I was suffering with rheumatism, lumbago and pains in my back. I could not rest day or night. I had to turn myself in bed with straps. After the first box of Dodd's Kidney Pills I noticed a great improvement. I am sorry I did not start taking them ten years ago. I will never be without them if I can get them. I cannot find anything which builds me up so much."

It is statements like the above that have made Dodd's Kidney Pills a household remedy throughout Canada.

PANCAKE SOCIAL.

'All Saints' Young People Hold Successful Supper and Concert.

In the Parish Hall of All Saints' Church last night, the A. Y. P. A. held a congregational pancake supper, attended by about one hundred people. Mr. J. Adams, president of the A.Y.P.A., acted as chairman for the occasion, and the special speaker of the evening was Mr. F. H. Dobbin, who gave, in his own inimitable manner, a very entertaining address, describing his experiences when visiting Quebec province.

An excellent musical programme was provided after the supper, including a sketch by the Minstrel boys, composed of Leslie Abraham, leader, Spencer Hope, "Bud" Sage, Russell Lucas and Lionel Bailey. Miss Kathleen Edgar and Mr. H. Rush gave vocal solos, and Mr. Wm. King a saxaphone number. The Sunday School orchestra played before the opening of the programme, and gave a special selection in "Love's Old Sweet Song."

Why Endure PILES MISERY

The weakening agony of piles robs life of its pleasure, turns days of brightness into days of misery, and brings periods of acute suffering. Overwhelming evidence proves Zam-Buk incomparable for banishing the pain, bleeding, swelling and inflammation.

Mr. Alf Brown, of Merritton, writes:—"I hope that my testimony will reach thousands suffering from that dreadful ailment, piles. For six years I was never free from pain. No one ever spent more money in search of a remedy. A sympathetic friend gave me a part of a box of Zam-Buk to try. Its soothing power was marvellous, and I soon had a further supply of this grand herbal healer. I used Zam-Buk until the old painful trouble was gone completely."

RIGHT OF WAY NOT LAW.

Motorists Who Insist on Taking Right Are Responsible For Accidents.

KINGSTON, Feb. 24.—In deciding an auotmobile action brought by John Fisher against Rev. Dr. Daniel M. Gordon for damages due to a collision, Judge Lavell yesterday handed down an important decision. The Judge declares there is no absolute right of way on a public road. The right of the vehicle on the right is qualified and relative, and if the driver proceeds and an accident ensues when by care on his part it might have been prevented he is responsible. In the action under review Judge Lavell finds both drivers guilty of negligence. Miss W. Gordon was driving her father's car. Damages were assessed upon both car owners.

After the conviction, the court wired the executioner, Mauser, to appear for the execution in Belgrade. He replied he had not been paid for his last job, and would not come until he had. The court spent six days deliberating his demand, then Zaruga's lawyer found a law which provides that a sentence of death must be carried out within three days after it is passed. So Zaruga was given life imprisonment instead.

A wee little youngster is Mollie Marie, who proudly will tell you her age is just three. She lisps when she talks with a catch in her breath. To know her's to feel you would "love her to death."

Like all little ladies, she's tickled and proud whenever to wear her best clothes she's allowed. She'll hie to her bureau and take out a dress, and brush it out smooth with admiring caress.

Her shoes, patent leather, are brought from their place and they soon are reflecting a smile from her face. There's stockings and other things little folks wear that are donned by this tot with the greatest of care.

'Course mother will help her to get things just right while Mollie is hummin' with all of her might. She's happy, this wee one, while dressing time hums. She knows she'll look sweet when the company comes.

And what do you guess is the finishing touch It's small, yet it really amounts to SO much. 'Tis last, but not least, that she's pick out, with care, the dear little "wibbon" she'll wear in her hair.

FALLS WIN THE TOSS AND WILL PLAY PETES AT TORONTO ARENA IN FIRST OF FINALS THURSDAY

Peterboro Selects the Big Sheet in Toronto for Its Home Ice in Final And Deciding Round for the Senior O.H.A. Championship.

AT NIAGARA FALLS NEXT MONDAY

Last Year's Intermediate Finalists Reach the Major Circuit's Wind Up—Crowd of Fans Expected to Accompany Team.

It is Peterboro or Niagara Falls for the Senior O.H.A. Championship.

The two teams which competed in the finals for the Intermediate series last year will meet in the wind up for the Ontario Major honours, on Thursday and next Monday night.

The Falls team, after eliminating Stratford last night, won the toss and elected to play their last game at home, which means that the first game of the series will take place in Toronto on Thursday night.

* * * * *

The Petes will leave for Toronto on the 7:35 train tomorow morning and Coach Connie Smythe will put them through a stiff hour's workout at the Arena during the day, after which they will rest up for the big test on Thursday.

Last year when the Petes and Niagara Falls met the Petes lost the first game in the Falls by 3 to 1, but beat the team from the Big Roar 5 to 4 in the second game at Toronto, losing the round by the narrowest possible margin.

* * * * *

Now the two teams clash again in the higher series and all Peterboro, in fact all Eastern Ontario, and most of the fans in Toronto, are pulling for the blue and white to come on and win the senior title.

* * * * *

A big crowd of Peterboro fans will be in Toronto Thursday night for the first game of the series, and it is expected that the Arena will be sold out for the first time this season for an amateur game. The Petes, who have won nine games this season in Toronto, will have plenty of support from Queen City enthusiasts who have become Peterboro rooters because of the clean and brilliant hockey dished up by the blue and white all season.

WOULD SUSPEND RITOLA.

Finnish Runner Failed to Keep Boston Engagement.

BOSTON, Feb. 24. — (Canadian Press)—Charles F. Gorman, athletic director of the Massachusetts Department of the American Legion, announced last night that he had requested by wire the immediate suspension of Willie Ritola, Finnish A. C. distance star, as the result of the failure of the latter to appear in the American Legion track games here Monday.

Mr. Gorman declared that Ritola had not come to the meet despite the fact that his manager had accepted $40 expense money. Gorman also said that he was contemplating a request to Amateur Athletic Union authorities to investigate the running of Lloyd Hahn, crack Boston miler, who dropped out of the Legion mile after running less than three-quarters of the distance.

WON JUNIOR BONSPIEL

Jack Amys Defeated "Bub" Killaly in Final Game.

Jack Amy's rink won the Junior bonspiel held over the week-end. Amys defeated "Bub" Killaly in the finals.

In the first round Dobbin had a bye, Cormack beat Widdess, Amys beat Rye, and Killaly downed Fraser. In the second round Dobbit was eliminated by Killaley and Cormack fell to Amys.

The ice was good for the preliminaries, but in the finals the surface was poor and good curling was impossible. However, the youngsters did well and tickled the hearts of some of the old members for the promise they are showing. The "spiel" this year demonstrated much improvement. The way Jack Amys curled and the minus in which he skipped his rink was commendable.

CHURCH LEAGUE GAME WON BY ST. ANDREWS 1-0

Championship of the League Practically Decided Yesterday.

St. Andrew's team practically clinched the championship of the Juvenile Church League yesterday afternoon, by defeating the George Street sextette 1 to 0 at Brock Street Arena.

The ice was in poor shape for the game, and continued to go from bad to worse. However, the game was a good exhibition of hockey.

Gillespie, the goalie, won the game for St. Andrew's. He turned back a flock of shots in the first period and was bombarded in the last half. Marshall's rushing was good for the winners. However, he seldom penetrated the George Street defence. The one time he did so, he netted the single counter of the game. "Jake" Hall's poke check at centre ice was effective.

Ed. Dormer was the hardest worker for George Street, and it was only hard luck and Gillespie in the nets that kept him from scoring repeatedly. Harold Dormer, White and McCartney were also good for George Street.

Line-Ups

George Street.—R. Delahaye; defence, White and McGee; centre, T. Dormer; right wing, Spencer; left wing, H. Dormer; sub., B. McCartney.

St. Andrew's.—Goal, Gillespie; defence, Jennings and Marshall; centre, Hall; right wing, Weir; left wing, Moray.

Referee, Fred Thirnbeck.

It looks like the Canadian Woollens having an all-star team, according to reports in soccer circles.

The senior organization received no official notification from the juniors in regards to the suggested conference that was to take place last night, but anticipate an amicable understanding in the near future.

The Thistle Football Club will hold a special meeting on Thursday evening first in Sutherland's Store, Simcoe Street, at 8 o'clock. Please bring all equipment with you.

THE 13TH HOLE

Relating How This Jinx of the Links Rose in Its Wrath And Crushed Francis Ouimet in 1922.

Francis Ouimet has never been a believer that the thirteenth hole — the devil hole, they call it in Australia, home of Joe Kirkwood—was his Nemesis.

That is, he held to this belief until the so styled jinx of the links rose menacingly before him two years ago at the Flossmoor Country Club and crushed him to the earth.

This was in the memorable match with Max Marston, veteran Philadelphia player, who winning from the Boston man, went on to land his first important championship.

It will always be a mystery to some people whether Marston's iron shot to this hole, a short one of about 140 yards to a well trapped saucer-shaped carpet, hit a Boy Scout at the far edge of the green.

Some claim, standing close by, that the shot, badly overplayed, was destined for the bunker lurking in the rear, and that it hit one of the scouts doing patrol duty.

Other, including the gracious Ouimet—one of the country's finest sportsmen—insist the ball landed at the boy's feet on the green and stayed there, having been played with prodigious backspin.

At any rate this was the situation when the two players unsheathed their putters: Ouimets' ball lay dead to the pin, not two feet away. Marston's was all but off the green fully 50 feet away. Ouimet was one down at the time. (This was in the afternoon.)

Surely Francis would win this hole, square the match and then go on to win, as per expectations. But the laughing imps of fate had other ideas. Marston did the impossible and sank the long putt, over dips and gently rising mounds, for an eagle two.

Ouimet, likewise, did the impossible; he missed the two-footer! The shock of seeing Marston's long putt drop, overwhelmed Ouimet and he failed to remove a coating of mud from his ball, which was permissable. This is probably why he missed. Ouimet's only comment was, "What might one expect. It was the thirteenth hole."

ALLAN SOTHORON'S WEAKNESS CURED?

His Wildness on Bunts Threw Him Out of the American League—Made Perfect Average Last Year With Cards.

BY BILLY EVANS

One of the most mysterious cases in baseball has Allan Sothoron for the leading character.

Here was a pitcher who was recognized as one of the richest prizes ever found. He had a fast ball, a spitter, a curve, a change of pace, control — well, just everything a great pitcher requires.

And Sothoron lived as a pitching star—but not for long. A weakness was discovered. Show the opposing side a weak spot and it plays through it.

Sothoron, with an iron arm and rare intelligence, could not control his throw once he fielded the ball.

On bunts or easy taps hit straight to him he lost his bearings. With one swish of his arm he threw—threw in any direction, which usually was yards away from his fielder.

Lowest Fielding Average.

To first, second, third base or the plate, Sothoron aimed and fired.

And eventually he "threw himself out of the American League."

In 1920 Sothoron registered the lowest fielding percentage ever recorded by a regular pitcher, having an average of .813 with 14 errors, 12 putouts and 49 assists.

Sothoron passed from the Browns to the Red Sox, thence to Cleveland Indians. Tris Speaker thought he could correct the fault but gave up the job after a year's trial.

Sothoron, disgusted with himself, retired from baseball in 1922. But the germ worked its way back in his system and he accepted a transfer to the Louisville Colonels in the American Association in 1923.

The scene changes. Branch Rickey, as manager of the St. Louis Browns in 1914, discovered Sothoron And he refused to believe that such an evil could not be corrected. He took a chance and purchased Sothoron for his St. Louis Cardinals in 1924.

Made Two Perfect Records

The story is not closed. Sothoron was one of the few pitchers with a perfect fielding average last season. He handled 37 chances in his 29 games, making 35 perfect throws in aiding in the retirement of batters or runners.

Branch Rickey's system of training probably explains the secret. There was a special course in fielding bunts for Sothoron at the Cardinals' camp last spring.

On the first on Rickey shouted: "I have it."

He saw that Sothoron, in trailing the ball, made his throw without taking aim. He simply scooped in the ball and made his throw. He did not steady himself.

For days and weeks Sothoron was put through such a course—fielding a ball, pausing, steadying himself, then following with the throw.

K. O. IN FIRST ROUND.

Just a Few Taps Between Beginning and End For Jimmy Britt.

TORONTO, Feb. 24 (Canadian Press).—Just a few preliminary taps and rallies preceded a short right jolt in the first round of the main bout of the International Club at the Standard Theatre last night and Jimmy Brit of Montreal was counted out. Howard Mayberry of Hamilton thus qualifies to meet Victor Foley of Vancouver next Monday at the Queensbury Club's show. Mayberry was knocked out by Foley at Vancouver about three months ago in the third round of a bout in which Mayberry's Canadian bantamweight crown was transferred to the brow of Foley.

NIAGARA FALLS SWAMP INDIANS

Win Second Game 6-0 and Overcome Stratford's 3 Goal Lead of Friday.

SCORE ON ROUND 6-3.

NIAGARA FALLS, February 24 (Special to The Examiner). — Niagara Falls and Peterborough, Intermediate O.H.A. finalists last season, will fight it out for the Senior championship and the right to enter the Allan Cup play-downs in Toronto on Thursday night and back here next Monday.

The Big Roar Town qualified by pulling one of the biggest surprises of the season here last night, when they not only overcame the Stratford three-goal lead gained in the first game last Friday, but added three more goals to win 6-0.

The game brought about a complete reversal of form for both teams.

The Indians' hockey did not compare with that shown by them in the first game, while the Falls never showed to better advantage.

The same game Stratford played on Friday would have won here last night, but they could never get going, their opponents rushing them off their feet in the first period, and tieing up the round before the teams left the ice for their first rest.

And the Falls added three more in the second period, while the third was scoreless.

The Falls were the best team last night, outplaying their opponents from every angle.

Their combination was pretty and effective, and their checking close and true.

Standing out very prominently in the sensational win by Niagara Falls that gives them the championship of the "Big Six" Senior O.H.A. group was the wonderful playing of Gene Fraser and Hobie Kitchen and the back-checking of the whole forward line. Gross and Burke were invincible in the first game, holding the Falls' attackers out for fifty minutes, but last night Fraser and Kitchen kept the brilliant Bill Carson, the hard-working Frank Carson and Nifty Griffin at a safe distance the entire sixty minutes. The defensive hockey as played by the Niagara Falls team here last night has never been surpassed by any team in the O.H.A. for many years.

Another big factor in the great victory was the playing of Butch Kelterbourne of the Falls. In the first game he wasn't in the picture at any stage, but Frank Carson failed absolutely to hold him here last night, while Herrington outplayed both Griffin and Bill Carson on the other rail. Babe Seibert was another Falls player who surprised even his own admirers. He stuck strictly to hockey, and was responsible for his team's second and third goals. Steve Rice did not prove any wonder at carrying the puck, but his poke check was a source of worry to the Stratford team the entire night, and he also scored a goal, the first of the game, on a pass from Harrington.

Fraser and Kitchen were not only strong on the defensive, but were also very dangerous in attack, each scoring a goal, while Fraser gave the pass to Kelterbourne for another when Gross was serving a penalty.

A heavy mist hung over the ice during the greater part of the game, making it almost impossible to see from one side of the rink to the other, while at times neither goal tender was visible to some of the spectators. This also made it very difficult for the referee to handle the game, but play was not quite so strenuous as in the game at Stratford.

Long range shooting under the circumstances appeared to be the better tactics, but neither team indulged to any great extent. And when they did they were miles off the mark.

Stratford in particular were very poor with their aim.

Bill Carson twice missed sure goals from fairly close in by shooting wide, and so did the other Stratford players.

Without taking any credit from Niagara Falls for their win, it is only fair to say that Stratford can play better hockey, and have done so.

Dolly Dolson made a number of goal saves, but did not play the sensational hockey he did in Stratford.

Harold Gross was best for his team, while Burke and Cole went well at times.

Bill Carson flashed at his best on rare occasions.

Stratford players served sixteen minutes in penalties, while Niagara Falls put in twelve minutes.

ROTARIANS OFFERING BLOOD TRANSFUSIONS

To Aid Third Son of St. Catharines Member—Two Dead.

ST. CATHARINES, Feb. 24. — (Canadian Press).—John Park, the only surviving son of ex-Alderman W. W. Park, whose two other sons have died as a result of a mysterious fire in his home Thursday night last, was still in a serious, though more hopeful, condition early yesterday afternoon.

Crown Attorney Lancaster Sunday gave a blood transfusion for the son of his Rotarian brother, and another Rotarian is standing ready if necessary. The father is ill through his efforts and exposure at the time of the fire and attendant weakness through giving the first blood transfusion Saturday night. So great is the interest in the case that the Bell Telephone Co. has found it necessary to establish a special 'phone number at the central office for the answer to enquiries as to the condition of the only living child.

The number of 'phone calls on the local exchange Sunday was increased by over 2,000.

LABOR OPPOSED CADET TRAINING IN SCHOOLS

London (Ont.) Board of Education Votes For Uniforms.

LONDON, February 24 (Canadian Press). — Despite the strenuous opposition of the Trades Union Council and the Men's Brotherhood, the Board of Education will continue cadet training in the schools.

Yesterday, with only one trustee dissenting, the Board voted an appropriation of $2,500 for uniforms for the cadets.

The Labour men and Brotherhood sent a delegation to the meeting, which contended that cadet training led to militarism.

Col. Gillespie, head of the Cadet Corps for the Military Division, denied such claims, and at times the discussion became quite heated.

Toronto dispatches tell us that the rest of the team are almost equally as brilliant five pin heavers.

From the offing a defeat for the Queen City aggregation looks like a big undertaking but Harry Cressman will lead out his squad of reliables knowing they'll do their best and incidently pick up a lot of bowling pointers from the celebrated Toronto visitors.

The Teachers took all three games in the play-off for the first series of the Y. M. C. A. League from George street, and they rolled some nice games to do it. Two of the games were close, however. Henry was high for the three games with 614 and three nice games of 222, 176 and 216. Other nice singles were Richardson's 214, Smith's 211 and 213, Graham's 177 and 222, Outram's 208, Robertson's 201 and 218, and Norm Routley's 176 and 196.

AUSTRALIA FAILED CAN CANADA WIN?

London Times Does Not Approve Subsidy For Shipping Interests.

LONDON, Feb. 24. —(Canadian Press).—The Times, commenting today on what it terms 'The collapse of the Australian Government's experiments in public ownership of merchant shipping," says that the report of W. T. R. Preston to the Canadian Government, on North Atlantic freight rates situation, has material bearing on the same question of state as opposed to private enterprise.

"There is a certain irony, in fact, that just when, the Australian governmen's shipping venture proved a costly failure, the Canadian Government is proposing to subsidize private interests,' says the Times "It is of course their right and duty to frame their transport arrangements on lines which seem to them best calculated to promote the interests of the population they serve. It can only be hoped from that point of view that this experimental step will prove more successful than has been the case with her sister Dominion and that the burden of the tax payers will not grow to proportions too heavy to be borne.

ANNIVERSARY OF ROTARY MARKED BY LOCAL CLUB

Ladies' Night Produces Splendid Programme of Oratory and Music.

MESSAGE IS READ.

The twentieth anniversary of the founding of Rotary was fittingly celebroted by the Peterboro Rotary Club at the Empress last night, the Rotary-Annes being guests of honor for the occasion. The programme was in charge of the Educational Committee and the chairman of that committee, Rotarian W. R. Morris, very gracefully presided over the proceeding and read the anniversary message from Everett W. Hill, president of the Rotary International.

The central idea of the programme was the stressing of the sixth object of Rotary, this is, "The advancement of understanding, goodwill and international peace through a world fellowship of business and professional men united in the Rotary idea of service," and the object was most eloquently discussed from three different angles by the speakers of the evening, Rotarian H. R. H. Kenner, Kiwanian C. D. Cook president of the Peterboro Kiwanian Club, and Mr. W. Boulton, divisional manager of the Confedereation Life.

A splendid musical programme was presented by Rotarians John Crane, R. A. Browne and Douglas Carlisle, and Mr. M. H. Park as a quartette and most enjoyable duets were given by Messrs. Carlisle and Park, and Messrs Browne and Park, with Rotarian Crane at the piano. The vocal numbers were enthusiastically received and in every case the artists had to respond to hearty encores.

Anniversary Message.

After a most daintily served dinner had been done justice to, Chairman Morris opened the programme by reading the anniversary message which was as follows:

"To promote a common understanding among men—regardless of race, creed nation or political belief—and in this common understanding shall rest a fellowship, so deep, so secure, so thorough that the growth from it shall be practical good will and sound international amity—that is Rotary International's mission on earth. That is what has bound together, with irremovable bonds of friendship and brotherhood, 103,000 men in nearly two thousand Rotary clubs in twenty-eight nations.

"You who are Rotarians, you who have subscribed to sublime principles of unselfish service that find their basis in the fundamental philosophy of at least nine of the greater religious faiths—you are not living unto yourselves as members of your own local clubs or as citizens of your particular nation. You are members of Rotary International, world-wide in its actual organization.

"More than that—Rotary's great mission with you is to help you find your place in your community and to see that you occupy that place and contribute your share of individual service to the general good. Thus each Rotarian in the world is an individual broadcasting station. Every conscious or sub-conscious action of every Rotarian in his business, civic and personal contacts every minute of every hour of every day of the year is a message broadcasted to the world on a universal wave length that tells how truly and how sincerely he is living up to the principles of service to mankind—how much he, as an individual, is doing to promote or retard our great objective of international understanding, good-will and friendship.

"Any man who creates a feeling of ill will among communities, any man who engenders distrust in the good intention of men, any man who excites class hatred, any man who stirs up enmity among nations or races is a traitor to mankind, a traitor to his country and a traitor to his God.

"And that is why I say to Rotarians that you are something more than members of a local club. You are members of a world-wide brotherhood. What you, a member of the Peterboro or Toronto or London or Paris Rotary Club may do today or say today in your office, your home, on a street corner or in a barber shop, may be reflected in Shanghai or Auckland or Johannesburg a few weeks hence. Yous is a great responsibility as well as a great privilege.

"And in this connection, please do not overlook the fact that no comprehensive survey of the development of the Rotary ideal of service is complete with a statement of what Rotary alone has done with it. For the anniversary we celebrate each year is the anniversary of the birth of an idea, rather than the anniversary of the birth of a single organization. What we Rotarians call the Rotary idea is today being carried forward in a splendid way with various modifications ot detail, but none in principle and purpose, by Kiwanis, Lions Exchange, Gyro, Civitan, Optimist—a dozen organizations with an aggregate membership of approximately half a million earnest men. Rotary would be untrue to its purpose and distinctly untrue to its principle of service before self, did it fail to recognize and take pride in the privilege of working side by side with such able men and such earnest, useful citizens as the memberships or these other organizations include.

"The ultimate goal of Rotary is all to be attained through a world fellowship of business and professional men united in the ideal of service. We, who are Rotarians, can and must translate the philosophy of Rotary into human activity and thereby throughout our membership encourage others to enroll under the banner of freedom from wars and misunderstanding.

"I believe that Rotary is helping to tear down the barriers of political and religious prejudices, and it seems to me that the time is opportune that such barriers should be wiped out. I believe that Rotary is helping materially and practically in bringing about the use of the 'Golden Rule' in business and professional life. I believe that this great organization of Rotary is meeting an urgent need in calling attention to the world that the greatest wealth we have to give, in fact the only real wealth, is that of unselfish service to our fellowmen."

Rotarian Kenner.

Rotarian H. R. H. Kenner, speaking to the subject, "What Rotary Has Done With the World-wide Fellowship Idea," gave a most thoughtful and eloquent address, prefacing his treatment of the subject proper with a rapid fire sketch of the growth of Rotary, which, starting with four members in the first club in Chicago 20 years ago, has now a list of 1,864 clubs operating in 28 countries throughout the world. The central idea of Rotarian Kenner's address was international friendship, and he briefly outlined his views as to how best such friendship could be fostered and built up. He advised among other things the coming of athletes of other countries to Canada and the visit of Canadian athletes to other countries, the necessity of knowing more about other lands either by visiting them or reading about them, the desirability of Canadians ceasing their dogmatizing about the people of other countries, and the placing in the hands of our children books about other countries that deal fairly with them.

Speaking as a Canadian, he said that the people of the Dominion were too much inclined to criticize those of other lands, and he considered that it would be a most valuable contribution to world friendship if this habit were to be corrected.

Incidentally our Federal authorities, he thought, were not contributing to international good-will by allowing motor boats loaded with liquor to clear ostensibly for Cuba when they were obviously intended to land elsewhere.

The Kiwanian President.

President C. D. Cook of the Kiwanis Club discussed in most interesting fashion the subject, "What the Idea of World-wide Fellowship means to the Community." Kiwanian Cook, in beginning, paid a tribute to the co-operation and harmony existing between the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs, and reminded his hearers that the mottoes of the two organizations were closely related. The Rotarian motto was service, and the Kiwanis, "We Build." It was impossible to serve without building, and impossible to build without serving.

The speaker emphasized the fact that international fellowship must necessarily be founded upon community fellowship. It was given to but few individuals to impress themselves upon the nation, but all exercised consciously or unconsciously an influence upon those around them in their own community, and it was here that he thought that by devoting themselves to seeing that their contributions to the community's welfare was bigger than it was yesterday that Rotarians and Kiwanians could make their biggest contribution toward good-will. Kiwanian Cook especially emphasized the duty of giving the boys who will be the citizens of to-morrow a fair chance.

Mr. W. Boulton.

Mr. W. Boulton, the third speaker, discoursed eloquently on the topic, "What the Idea of World-wide Fellowship means to those outside of Service Organizations." In doing so, he declared his belief that an organization of business and professional world-wide in its scope could accomplish great things in bringing about a better understanding among the nations of the world. Using the menu provided for the dinner as an illustration, the speaker called attention to the fact that many different countries had contributed toward the repast, and he listed the articles used in the making of a pair of shoes as another proof of the close relationship that existed among the nations of the world commercially. The world, he said, due to improved methods of transportation and communication, was being a neighborhood, and he was sure that eventually the ideals of such organizations as Rotary would turn that world neighborhood into a world brotherhood.

Rotarian Alex. Mowat voiced the appreciation of Rotary to the speakers of the evening and to the artists who took part in the programme, while Rotarian V. J. McElderry paid a warm tribute to the assistance given to Rotary by the Rotary-annes in equipping the Boys' Camp and in the crippled children's work.

AT THE GRAND

RABBITS FOR YOUNGSTERS.

From the standpoint of Peterboro's youngest generation the rabbit matinee that will be provided by Blackstone at the Grand Saturday afternoon is the most important event of the famous magician's local engagement. At that time the necromancer will by his mysterious agencies cause little bunnies to appear from most unusual places, in many instances from the persons of the children themselves. The cute pets will then be presented to such of the youngsters who are fortunate enough to have unknowingly harbored the little fellows.

Despite the added incentive to juvenile patronage, Blackstone announces that no advance in the usual theatre matinee price scale will be permitted.

AT THE CAPITOL

"A SAINTED DEVIL" IS "THE SHIEK' AND A SORT OF SPANISH "ROBIN HOOD" COMBINED

"A Sainted Devil," Rudolph Valentino's new production for Paramount, with Nita Naldi, Helen D'Algy, Louise Lagrange, Dagmar Godowsky and others playing in support, was shown for the first time in Peterboro last night at the Capitol Theatre. The story is by Rex Beach. Joseph Henabery, who made "The Stranger," directed.

"A Sainted Devil" is "The Shiek" and a sort of Spanish "Robin Hood" combined—a tense, exciting love drama, with the star in the role of a young Spaniard who roams South America in search of a notorious bandit who had stolen his bride on his wedding night.

As Don Alonzo Castro, Valentino is the Valentino of old—the Valentino of "Blood and Sand," the Valentino the fans like to see. As the "mysterious stranger" he terrorizes the country in his endless search for the bandit gang—and for revenge.

None but Valentino could play such a role as he does this one. He loves and fights as only he can. And Nita—she's neater than ever! Miss D'Algy, practically a newcomer on the screen, is a sure-enough "find." Louise Lagrande, you remember her with Ernest Torrence in "The Side Show of Life," is also unusually well cast while Miss Godowsky has a high-power vamp part.

PULITZER PRIZE NOVEL "AGE OF INNOCENCE" COMING TO CAPITOL

Nothing less than the Pulitzer Prize novel, "The Age of Innocence," by Edith Wharton, furnishes the story that will be offered movie patrons by the Capitol Theatre, beginning tomorrow, at which time the screen translation of this popular book will be shown.

When it is remembered that Miss Wharton's novel, "The Age of Innocence," was chosen from amongst thousands of others as the best piece of literature published in 1922, the depth and merit of the story can very readily be appreciated. The plot is unusually interesting and deals with the novel experiences of a Russian Countess, who attempts to acclimate herself to the conventionalities of aristocratic New York, finding romance hedged about by restrictions that seem absurd and meaningless to her European code of living.

The novel calls for some characterizations of cameo clearness, and it seems that Warner Bros. have been particularly happy in their selection of Beverly Bayne and Elliott Dexter, both favorites of long standing, to portray the central figures, around which Willard Louis, Edith Roberts, Stuart Holmes, Rosa Rosanova, Fred Huntley, Gertrude Norman and many other notables weave the gripping story of love, that most poignant of all human emotions.

"A SAINTED DEVIL"

There was a good attendance at The Capitol last night, to see the handsome Valentino, idol of feminine fans, who is the attraction at the Capitol Theatre for the first two days of this week. Back in the Argentine, in the setting which seems to harmonize most admirably with his temperament, "A Sainted Devil" shows the gorgeous Rudolph in situations that are probably his favorite characterizations, as the hero of innumerable love episodes, and finally, the ardent lover of one woman.

The star, whose success has been mainly built up by his peculiar flair for interpreting a certain type of passion on the silver sheet, has quite evidently been bitten by the desire to try his hand at other modes of acting, with what success will probably be a matter of dispute between his audiences. In "A Sainted Devil" he essays the delineation of terrifying anger and revenge, departing necessarily from the suave smoothness of the type that has been associated with his fame just as closely as the sleek shine of his dark head. Whether Valentino can be a dramatic and vital actor in furious roles is a question..

However, he does enough lovemaking in this picture to satisfy his feminine adorers, and the fierce atmosphere he injects into certain scenes is glossed over by the characteristic delineation of his Alonzo de Castro heir to an enormous ranch among the swelling pampas of the Argentine, and lover of the beautiful Julietta Valdez, the maiden who comes from Spain to marry him, and who supplants the crafty Carlotta, played by Nita Naldi in vivid fashion. The jealousy of the other woman forms the keynote of the picture and leads to all the complications which ensnare the young lovers.

On their bridal day, Julietta is abducted by El Tigre, the bandit, and Alonzo's home is burned and his parents slain. Believing his bride lost to him, revenge leads Alonzo to the dives of South America, searching for El Tigre, and drink takes his steps on downward paths. The handsome Rudolph, who, in previous pictures, has usually preserved his aristrocratic and sleek demeanor, lets himself go in this production. There may be verity in his acting of the role of a drunken man, but it isn't pleasant. That's the worst of forming a fixed idea of a screen actor. One would much rather see the gorgeous Rudolph, if he has to be intoxicated, do it gracefully, and not depart from his suave grace and impeccable grooming.

An odd characterization in this picture is the brief one of Dona Florencia, "the lady of three suicides," with her nun-like pose and her snaky eyes

It is throughout a Latin-American drama, entertaining, exotic, and unusual, with the popular Valentino always in the limelight, losing just a bit of his attraction by his long drawing out of special incidents, and by his insistence on being dramatic instead of intriguing. It's all very well for Milton Sills and his ilk to go in for strong, heavy stuff, but why should the pleasant young man who has become the idol of women by reason of his intergsting love-making decide that he has to be a dramatic star and start in to upset all the romantic traditions woven about his name and his mirror-like head?—Jeannette.

AT THE REGENT

NOVEL COMEDY, HERE TO-DAY, STARS A TRIO OF HUMAN MONKEYS.

Remarkable Performance of Comedians of Jungle is Hilarious Feature of New Film.

One of the most novel and intensely interesting pictures of the season is the new William Fox comedy feature "Darwin Was Right," which opened a 3-day run at the Regent Theatre last night. This new special features Max, Moritz and Pep, the three chimpanzee actors that have created a furore in comedy circles.

The remarkable success of the pictures in which these monkey stars have appeared recently prompted Mr. Fox to cast them in a full-length feature. Edward Moran wrote the story and prepared the scenario for this comedy special, treating the Darwinian theory in a manner that is at once original, unique and full of comedy.

Lewis Seiler, the man who directed nearly all of the Imperial comedies in which the monkeys appeared, has guided the animal actors in what is a real humorous epic.

The story concerns the experiments of a scientist who is seeking the elixir of youth. He finds what he believes to be the great restorative, and, in order to convince his family and his friends, tries it on himself, the gardener and a negro butler.

Through a series of humorous incidents the family is led to believe the three men have taken so much of the youth reatorer that at first they become childish, then revert to babyhood, and finally rever to the state which Darwin claims for our ancestors.

"Darwin Was Right" is one of the outstanding comedy features of the season.

SHIRLEY WINS PRAISE AS A LIVELY BLONDE.

There is probably no actress on the screen better fitted temperamentally for the role of Thomas Burke's "Curlytop" than Shirley Mason, bat the Burke Limehouse heroine was a blond, so it was a curious reviewer who went to the opening of the William Fox photoplay adaptation of this well-known story at the Regent Theatre last night. And it was a much surprised and delighted reviewer who left the theatre later. For, Shirley is a blond in this picture—the sauciest, most vivacious and wholly enticing little bundle of blond curls you would wish to gaze upon.

"Curlytop" is an excellent picture. Maurice Elvey, the director Mr. Fox imported recently from England, has given it a most realistic Limehouse atmosphere and an abundance of highly dramatic performances. Miss Mason as "Curlytop," the little waif of the wharfs whose beautiful hair captivated the heart of Bill Branigan, sheik of the slums, shows once again that she is an actress with a wealth of dramatic gifts. She goes from light carefree comedy to dire drama with a smoothness of technique that only an experienced player could be capable of.

Wallace MacDonald, as Branigan, gives an excellent performance and Warner Oland, he of the slant eyes and ominous countenance, acquits himself with distinction as usual. Diana Miller is fine, too.

AT THE ROYAL

"A CAFE IN CAIRO" IS SPLENDID FILM.

Clamour of Egypt Caught in Priscilla Dean's New Picture.

A critic's work is made unusually pleasant when a production such as "A Cafe in Cairo" comes around.

Few recent pictures have offered such a wealth of exciting moments, so realistically produced. Few stars of the screen have such a vibrant personality as Priscilla Dean, and it is doubtful if she has ever appeared to better advantage than in this, her second Hunt Stromberg production, which Producers Distributing Corporation is releasing.

"A Cafe in Cairo" is a picturization of the novel of the same name by Izola Forrester, author of "The White Moth," and numerous best sellers. The photoplay version is by Harvey Gates, and inasmuch as he wrote "The Wildcat of Paris" and other earlier Priscilla Dean successes, it is not surprising that he has made the story fit the dynamic star to the proverbial T.

There is something intriguing always about the land of the Nile, made famous by Cleopatra. The sun-scorching desert wastes, the bazaars, the lure of moonlight on the Nile, the harem dancers and the perfumed gardens of powerful sheiks—all these elements that intrigue the interest have been artfully injected into "A Cafe in Cairo." But they are only a part and parcel of the background for the story.

Opening with a tensely dramatic prologue, the interest is tightly held through one thrilling sequence after another until the under-water knife duel of the climax is reached.

As Naida, fascinating little Houri, Priscilla Dean gives a performance that excels even "The Siren of Seville," her initial Hunt Stromberg feature. Robert Ellis is a splendid choice for the young American secret service operator, and the rest of the cast—including such well-known players as Carl Stockdale, Evelyn Selbie, Harry Woods, Ruth King, Larry Steers, Carmen Phillips and John Steppling, do excellent work.

Chet Withey, a protege of D. W. Griffith, directed and the camera-work of Sol Polito is unusually lovely.

TRUTH VERSUS ERROR.

"Paradise" is not heaven as some erroneously teach. There has been no "Paradise" since Adam was driven out of the Garden of Eden, which garden prior to that was "Paradise." Those who preach that there is a place now called "Paradise," endeavour to bolster up that idea, by saying Jesus and the thief did not really die, but that both went that day to "Paradise." A flimsy argument, seeing there was no "Paradise" to go to, and that dead men could not go anywhere. A slight error in punctuation sometimes changes the real meaning of words, or make statements either untrue or absurd. Read the words of Jesus to the thief on the cross, with the punctuation mark in the right place. The words of Jesus, "Verily, I say unto you "this day," thou shalt be with me in "Paradise." Jesus had reference to the future, when "Paradise" would be restored, when he would reign, when God's will would be done on earth as in heaven. God spoke by the holy prophets of olden times concerning Paradise being here on this earth. Observation of the signs that Jesus foretold would precede the end of the world, prior to Paradise being ushered in to show to us that we are near that glorious day.

In view of the increased tax rate this year and the peculiar circumstances surrounding its necessity, with the City Council asking only $123 more than last year, the Board of Education demanding $16,600 more than last year, and the deficit carried forward of $13,900, the following comparison with twelve years ago is interesting:

FEDERAL RELIEF FOR N. S. STEEL WORKERS DEBATED IN COMMONS ON PROPOSAL OF LABOR MEMBER

J. S. Woodsworth, of Centre Winnipeg, Says Families of Steel Workers and Miners Should Not Be Allowed to Suffer Extreme Privation.

MURDOCK AND MEIGHEN IN DISPUTE.

Minister of Labor Contneded That Nova Scotia Received Large Royalties From Steel Company and Province Should Look After Employees.

OTTAWA, Feb. 25. — (Canadian Press).—Scheduled business in the House Tuesday gave place to lively discussion of conditions in the mining areas of Nova Scotia. Scarcely had the House opened when J. S. Woodsworth, Labor member for Centre Winnipeg, raised the issue with a motion for adjournment. Mr. Woodsworth, in a sharp indictment of the situation, pressed for action along two lines:

(1)—That some immediate relief should be given to the miners and steel workers. "Their wives and children," he said, "ought not to be allowed to starve or to suffer extreme privation."

(2)—The Dominion Government ought to institute a very definite, impartial and full inquiry.

Supported by Murdock.

Hon. James Murdock, Minister of Labor, was at one with Mr. Woodsworth in his criticism of conditions in the Cape Breton mining fields. He thought the time had come to get down to brass tacks and see "if this canker on the industrial life of Canada should be permitted to exist any longer." But as the Province of Nova Scotia owned the mines and drew royalties from them, should not the appeal be addressed rather to the Provincial Government? Charity began at home, Mr. Murdock added, and the Province of Nova Scotia was receiving $600,000 a year in the way of mining royalties.

Premier King pressed the argument further by reference to the announcement of Premier Armstrong that the Nova Scotia Government intended to appoint a commission of investigation. Such a policy having been decided by the Nova Scotia Government, Premier King held, the Federal authority could best assist the situation by not interfering.

If there were any consistent way in which the Dominion Government, having regard to its authority, could do something to change the entire conditions on Cape Breton Island, said Mr. Murdock, he would gladly support any such action.

General Unemployment.

T. L. Church (Conservative, Toronto North) said conditions of unemployment in Toronto were very bad, and men were out of work through no fault of their own. Considerable money had been spent by various associations in looking after the unemployed. Unemployment was one primarily for the Dominion Government, and it should co-operate with the provinces and municipalities in the matter.

Mr. Church favored an embargo against American coal for the protection of the Cape Breton coal mines.

The Minister of Labor, Mr. Church went on, was not to blame altogether for conditions; but "he might show a little more heart." A conference was called by Hon. Mr. Murdork with the representatives of the various Provincial governments and municipalities, a diversity of opinion occurred and the conference broke up without any concrete result. Public opinion was not satisfied with the way the unemployment question was handled. There were three views to the question. "There is the Minister's view, the other fellow's view, and the right view."

He recommended a national policy of development for the Cape Breton coal fields which would get rid of labor difficulties, unemployment, and do something of a practical nature.

Province Acting.

Premier King referred to a Canadian Press despatch that the Government of Nova Scotia was about to appoint a commission of investigation. This illustrated the advisability of questions discussed in the Federal Parliament being restricted to those of a national character. Had the House aquiesced in the request of Mr. Woodsworth (Labor, Winnipeg Centre) it would have found itself in a position of appointing a commission to investigate this trouble, while the same action was being taken by the Nova Scotia Government. The steps taken by Premier Armstrong in appointing a commission were all that were asked in the resolution which was being discussed.

The Prime Minister read the letter of Premier Armstrong of Nova Scotia to the employers and employees in the Sydney dispute. "We can best help this situation by not interfering in it at the present time," said Premier King, after the conclusion of the letter. It was advisable to refrain from taking part in the matter while the proper authorities were doing the best they could. To continue the discussion longer, would not be helpful, but rather put the anticipated result further in the background.

Blames Nova Scotia.

Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, leader of the Opposition, pointed out that in essence, the case under dispute was not a difference between workers and employers, but "a case of men hungering for toil," and not being able to find it. It was argued that the British Empire Steel was over-capitalized, and over-manned, and suggestions of watered stock had been made, but if the blame was to be placed, it should be laid "at the door of the present Government of Nova Scotia that gave that company its charter."

The facts presented appeared to indicate that the real trouble was lack of work. It was no use to appoint commissions to investigate a condition of that kind. Mr. Meighen proceeded to quote from a memorial presented to the Government by a delegation urging measures of relief for the Nova Scotia steel and coal workers, some time ago. The memorial stated that the coal and steel industry has been depressed for some years.

"This Government has been in power for some years," Mr. Meighen interjected.

"And will be for some years longer," retorted Premier King.

"Perhaps. I do not think that the member for Centre Winnipeg will look forward to that with equanimity," Mr. Meighen shot back.

The memorial suggested a remedy for the situation, continued the leader of the Opposition. It was in the form of a resolution passed by the Legislature of Nova Scotia, and presented to the Dominion Government by a delegation headed by the Liberal Prime Minister of Nova Scotia, and supported by Liberal members of the Federal House. This resolution asked for an increase in the tariff on American slack coal so as to prevent it from competing with the Canadian slack coal. It called for a duty on American coke, so as to encourage the coking of Canadian coal; finally, it demanded a readjustment of railway rates so as to permit Canadian coal mined in Nova Scotia to get into the central market of Canada. In a word, tariff and freight rates had been the basis of the remedy suggested.

The question arose as to whether this Government had any responsibility in the matter. The Minister of Labor took the ground that the British North America Act interfered with the right of the Federal Government to assist the coal miners and steel workers, Mr. Meighen said. "There is no more question of the British North America Act arising in the matter, than the criminal code or the magna charta," he said. The British North America Act could not preclude the Dominion Government from granting relief.

Mr. Murdock—"That has never been contended so far as I have heard."

Mr. Meighen then said that he would accept the positon of the Government as being that the B.N.A. Act had nothing to do with the matter.

Mr. Murdock immediately arose: "I decline to let the the right hon. member continue this policy of misrepresentation," he declared.

There were cries of "Order."

TROTZKY'S SUCCESSOR ADDRESSES RED ARMY

Predicts Conflict With Enemies of Soviet.

MOSCOW, Feb. 25.—In his maiden speech on the army delivered yesterday, General Michael W. Frunze, Leon Trotzky's successor as Soviet war minister, sounded a warning to the Russian people to be ready to meet an attack from foreign foes.

"The Red army must realize its situation," Gen. Frunze said. "It should know that a big military clash with the enemies of Soviet Russia is in front of it. We must see that not only our Red army is prepared for this even, but our rear also."

MILE A MINUTE OVER RICE LAKE

Automobile Made Rapid Trip From Gore's Landing to Bewdley.

CARS ON HIGHWAY.

BAILIEBORO, Feb. 25. — Monday's rain has taken away most of the snow throughout the country. The creeks and flats are all deeply flooded with flowing water. The streets and roads are glare with ice, and where the highways are not already bare, they are covered with ice, which makes the roads rather dangerous for horses to travel on. More than one of the stately citizens of the village have had the misfortune to slip and fall on the icy pavement.

The motor cars are once more travelling the highway between Port Hope and Bewdley, and with the exception of a couple of cuts in the highway, one at Bailieboro Hill, and one near Fraserville, there is not sufficient snow on the Provincial highway to prevent a car from going to Springville through to Port Hope.

On Sunday afternoon a motor car went from Gore's Landing to Bewdley by way of Rice Lake, and those who watched the car gliding over the smooth surface of the Lake stated that the motorist must have been travelling at the rate of sixty to sixty-five miles per hour. It is likely that he thought the speed cops would not attempt to stop speeding on the lake, and it is still more likely that he found it necessary to drive at such a fast rate to keep the car from turning completely around on the smooth ice. At any rate he made the distance in a comparatively short time.

During the past three weeks the teaming has been splendid on the lake. Many of the farmers have been hauling wood, logs, grain, etc., across the lake, and by so doing cut off a considerable distance off their route, besides it is much easier to haul a heavy load on the ice than it is on good roads.

THIEF PLUNDERS EAST CITY FOLK

St. Luke's Church Social Visited By Unwelcome Guest Last Night.

TOOK $17.90.

Invading the sacred precincts of St. Luke's Anglican Church, East City, last night, a thief got away with nearly $18 which he took from the pockets of coats left in a room by ladies attending a "Pancake Social."

Three persons were victims, one losing $16, another $1.30 and the third 90 cents. The party marked Shrove Tuesday, the last day before Lent, which is observed in appropriate feasts. The occasion did not deter the thief, however, who took advantage of the opportunity to steal the purses of fellow-guests at the function.

The police have been notified.

UNITED STATES AND CANADA IN BOUNDARY PACT

Agreement Signed by Hon. Ernest Lapointe and Hon. Chas. E. Hughes.

REGULATE WATER.

Also Authorizes Boundary Commission to Determine Location of Points on Line.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25. — (Canadian Press)—Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice of Canada, and Secretary of State Hughes yesterday signed two international agreements affecting the boundary line through the Lake of the Woods, separating Minnesota from Manitoba and Ontario Provinces will be definitely established and provision will be made for regulation of the levels of the lake, as well as the settlement of damages caused by these waters. The State Department authorized the following statement of the agreements:

"The following treaties between the United States and His Britannic Majesty, in respect of the Dominion of Canada, were signed to-day by the Secretary of State and Mr. Ernest LaPoine, Minister of Justice of Canada.

'A convention to regulate the levels of the Lake of the Woods, to acquire a flowage easement along the shores of the lake, to provide for fluctuation in the level and to provide for certain protective works along the shores of the Lake and the settlement of past damages."

A protocol to acompany the convention, elaborating upon certain provisions, was also signed. It read:

"A treaty to define more accurately the boundary line beween the United States and Canada in the North West Angle of Lake of the Woods to the summit of the Rocky Mountains and to authorize the American-Canadian boundary commission to maintain an effective boundary throughout the entire boundary line between the United States and Canada, and to determine the location of any point on the line which may become necessary in the settlement of questions arising between the United States and Canada.

U. S. IS NOT OPEN TO COMPROMISE ON BROAD LINES

That is Principal Difficulty in Settlement of Inter-Allied Debts.

BRITAIN AFFECTED.

Financial Burdens of War a Serious Handicap to British Industry.

LONDON, Feb. 25. — (United Press).—The Grand Council of the Federation of British Industries today sent to Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, a memorandum, urging settlement of inter-Allied debts based on the principles of the Dawes report, and payments regulated by the "prosperity index."

The memorandum stated that the principal difficulty in the settlement of the debts is the attitude of the United States, which has "adopted a strictly commercial attitude and does not appear open to any compromise along broad lines." Britain must govern her attitude by that taken by the United States, according to the memorandum.

A Serious Handicap.

The financial burdens of war form a serious handicap to British industry in competition abroad, the memorandum states.

"In terms of international competition in trade, Britain is subsidizing the franc to the extent of £31,000,000 year, Italy £27,000,000, and all others combined £41,000,000, representing an additional tax burden to the British industries and a corresponding lightening of the burden of the industries of our debtors," the memorandum says.

NOTICE

Those intending procuring hockey tickets for the game at the Toronto Arena to-morrow night, are advised of the fact that the Toronto Arena is sold out, and that only those tickets that are purchased and taken to-night will be available for Peterborough, as any that are unsold of the portion allotted to Peterborough will be returned to Toronto in the morning.

GENERAL WOODS LEAVES CHEQUE WITHOUT FUNDS

Legal Proceedings Threatened Against Former U. S. Army Officer By Casino Director.

"MUST PAY FIDDLER."

Crossed Border Into Spain—Intimates Father Had Cut Him Off.

BIARRITZ, France, Feb. 25.—After having awaited a full week in order to give Osborne C. Wood every opportunity to redeem what he alleges is a worthless cheque, which Wood cashed February 17 at the Biarritz Casino, the director of the Casino announced yesterday that he had decided finally to take legal proceedings against the former United States army officer.

Even at this stage of the proceedings the police assert that the director of the Casino expressed his willingness to withdraw the complaint should he be re-imbursed in the sum of 35,000 francs, alleged to have been paid to Wood. It was added that the cash payment must be made promptly, however, inasmuch as the contoversy last night passes out of the hands of the local authorities and into the jurisdiction of the Bayonne magistrates, who will decide whether a warrant should be issued or not.

Must Pay the Fiddler.

Told of this at his retreat in Spain, the young plunger merely shrugged his shoulder. Then he dramatically said:

"I have had my dance. Now I must pay the fiddler. My Wall Street luck has deserted me."

This declaration is believed among some of his friends to be an ironical reference to mythical winnings in the stock market. It is reported here on what seems good authority that he never won any money in Wall Street.

At Biarritz he visited the villa of Charles Wacker, a millionaire former brewer of Chicago, and was accorded a hearty welcome.

Maid Cashes Cheque

There he took what is believed to have been a last desperate fling at the Casino, where he is said to have spent the proceeds of a 5,000-franc cheque cashed through the kindness of a maid at the Wacker villa. The maid's father is a grocer.

Wood hired a taxicab Sunday at a Biarritz hotel, sent the chauffeur to the Wacker home for his baggage and drove to San Sebastian.

A short time later he had a caller, an American society woman whose divorce was recently announced. She also had been at Biarritz, where she arrived two days ahead of Lieut. Wood. She had lived on the ground floor of the Villa Goudiar. Wood obtained an apartment on the third floor.

When she left Wood at San Sebastian for her return to Biarritz, he drove with her as far as the French border.

"I know I cannot return to France."

Wood is reported to have said this when he turned back at the border. He had heard about the warrant issued for him by French authorities on complaint of directors of the Biarritz Casino. He said:

"That is done. There is no use discussing it."

And then he repeated.

"Now I will have to pay the fiddler."

Only a month ago, a school-day friend of Lieutenant Wood came to his rescue when a bank threatened him with imprisonment. This friend paid the amount and then sent Wood to Versailles, where he lived for several weeks in comparative seclusion at the villa of his friend.

At that time it was reported that Lieutenant Wood's mind was slightly turned and the friend was appointed as his guardian, accompanying Wood wherever he went.

About the same time Lieutenant Wood gave a cheque for several thousand dollars to a masseur in Paris. When the cheque was returned for lack of funds Wood told the masseur:

"Well, put me in jail. Maybe then the old man will come through."

From this and other indications it is evident that General Leonard Wood had cut off his son for some time.

Young Wood's life in Paris has been a continual series of dissipation and gambling. When not in the company of some society flapper at the Ritz or at the New York bar or at Ciro's, he would certainly be found in the night cafes of Montmartre, spending his money freely.

Gave "Suicide Party"

When he arrived here from the Orient with his wife, Lieutenant Wood immediately plunged into the gay but fatal vortex which has drawn so many to their doom. One of his most sensational stunts in Paris was his "suicide party," staged three months ago at Ciro's Restaurant.

The rules were that each member of the party had to drink thirty different kinds of cocktails. At the end of the party only three of the forty guests were able to eat lunch.

Among his other extravagances here Lieutenant Wood presented many of his friends with jewelry, one instance being cited of his giving a diamond stickpin to a race track tipster.

Wife Threatens Suit

Wood also frequented the famous Hausmann Club, one of the biggest gambling dives in Paris, where he played heavily, at first winning and then losing enormous sums.

His wife left him, returning to America, where she threatened to sue him for divorce.

One night Wood sat at the big table at the Hausmann Club, winner by 1,000,000 francs. The next night he was utterly broke and signing cheques.

For many months he has been telling his friends that he was nearly at the end of his tether. It is estimated that he has lost $50,000 in his last six months in Europe, instead of the million he is popularly credited with having won in Wall Street.

KING IS MAKING GOOD PROGRESS TO HEALTH

May Be Allowed Out of Bed in Few Days.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—The King is making ratifying progress back to health, so much so that the attending physicians have not deemed it necessary to issue bulletins since Sunday night. In the course of a few days, if the weather, which has been miserably wet, cold and changeable should prove more genial, the royal patient will be allowed out of bed. The King' temperature came a little closer to normal today.

No definite itinerary of the projected tour of the King and Queen has yet been mapped out. They are certain to make a number of calls in the course of their Mediterranean cruise, but it is not likely that they will make engagements of any kind in advance.

NEW TESTIMONY IN TROTT TRIAL

Crown Witness Said to Have Admitted Evidence in Former Sessions Untrue.

MURDER CHARGE.

WELLAND, Feb. 25.—An attempt by the defence to discredit one of the Crown's chief witnesses featured the first day of the second trial of John Trott, charged with murder of Police Constable Joseph Truman at Thorold, on December 17, 1922.

The new feature was in the form of a new witness, Frank Sgaballone, a Thorold shoemaker, who swore that he met Joe Caponi, Crown witness at Cochrane on November 26 last, shortly after the first Trott trial, and that Caponi admitted he gave false testimony against Trott at that trial.

Was Offered Reward

Sgaballone in his evidence, declared that Caponi made the admission to him in these words:

"I am very sorry for what I said at the trial of John Trott. What I said was not true. I was forced to make those statements by certain people because of the reward that was offered."

"Why did you say it, knowing it was not true? Sgaballone declares he asked Caponi, and that Caponi again replied: "Because I was forced to."

Wm. German, K.C., defence counsel, confronted Caponi on the stand yesterday with this statement which the Crown witness denied absolutely. Caponi declared that the only truthful part of Sgaballone's evidence was the statement that they met at Cochrane since the first trial. The shoemaker had asked him why he had gone to the trial, but his answer had been that he was subpoenaed and had to go.

No Intimidation

In reply to Justice Logie, Caponi stated that Sgaballone had not tried to intimidate him at the time of the meeting. The case opened at 2 o'clock before Justice Logie and a jury. The evidence of the Crown was similar to that given at the first trial at the Fall Assizes when the jury disagreed. The only exception was that of former Provincial Constable Stockbridge, who is now out out the country His previous testimony was read and accepted as evidence. Caponi's testimony was a repetition of his evidence at the first trial with variation to the effect that John Trott had admitted to him at South Porcupine a year or more ago that Trott had killed a policeman at Thorold when Trott was trying to coax Caponi and James Strangis into the bootlegging business.

BENIAH BOWMAN AND LESLIE OKE QUIT RANEYS PROGRESSIVES AND DECLARE THEIR LOYALTY TO U. F. O.

Oke Denounced Ex-Premier Drury For Having Tried to Wreck the Farmers' Party For His Own Glorification—Also Attacked Raney and Doherty.

WILL VOTE AGAINST STRONGER BEER.

Doherty Criticizes Government For Not Carrying Out Plans He Began For Commodity Marketing Association—Supports Original O. T. A.

TORONTO, February 25 (Canadian Press).— By the breaking away of two members from the Progressives under the leadership of W. E. Raney, the Ontario Legislature yesterday added another to its numerous groups.

Leslie Oke, East Lambton, in speaking in the debate on the reply to the Speech from the Throne announced that he and Beniah Bowman, Minister of Lands and Forests in the Drury administration, were continuing to be United Farmer members, with no connection with the Progressive Party.

The House now has Conservatives, Liberals, Progressives, Labour men and United Farmers.

Mr. Oke made a scathing attack on E. C. Drury, former Prime Minister, charging him with wrecking or trying to wreck the farmers' movement in Ontario for his own glorification. He included in his attack W. E. Raney and Manning Doherty, both ministers in the Drury Cabinet.

Previous to Mr. Oke the debate was carried along by J. A. Sangster (Lib., Glengarry) and Manning Doherty (Prog., East Kent).

Messrs. Oke and Doherty opposed the proposal to increase the strength of beer to be sold legally under the Ontario Temperance Act, while Mr. Sangster did not mention it.

Mr. Doherty condemned the present administration for not carrying out the plans he had started as Minister of Agriculture for the establishment of farm commodity marketing associations.

Sees Better Business.

Mr. Sangster condemned the blue ruin cry and the "whisper of death," stating that 1924 had ben a good business year in comparison with many others. He pointed to the $12,000,000 flour order recently placed in Canada and the recent sending West from an Ontario point of 22 carloads of hardware as signs of brightening business. He declared that the extreme Eastern end of Ontario was being neglected by the Government,e specially in Hydro matters. "We might as well not be in the Province at all, as far as the Hydro is concerned," said Mr. Sangster, who advocated steps towards a flat rate for Hydro power.

Mr. Doherty reminded the Government that it held power with a majority of members, but a minority of the votes in the Province. He said the Premier would not live to see the day when the Progressives were not doing business, and said that the by-election result in South Waterloo when a Labour man was elected had proved it.

"Is he a member of your group?" asked Mr. Sinclair.

"He is not a member of yours," was the retort.

Mr. Doherty commended the Government for dealing with unemployment by the provision of work, but declared although there were some who wanted work and could not get it, that a great many of the so-called unemployed in their hearts did not want work at all.

"If there is unemployment in the country it is a condemnation of the false doctrine of industrialism," said Mr. Doherty, who added that smoking chimneys did not necessarily mean prosperity.

Marketing Problems.

Mr. Doherty dwelt at some length with marketing problems in agricultural products stating that South Africa had beaten Canada in placing her fruits on the British market, and that what market had retained was only kept by the good quality and not by the way it was marketed. New Zealand was beating Canada in the cheese trade for the same reasons, although Canada made as good if not better cheese. He thought there should be an Ontario Cabinet Minister in Britain every year. He was glad to see that the Government had not rescinded the Dairy Standards Act ,although Eastern Ontario Conservatives in their election campaigns had promised that such would be the case. He also suggested that text books on co-operative marketing should be placed in the public schools and taught.

The proposed ber amendment to the O.T.A., Mr. Doherty said, was the supreme blunder made by the Government. He said that the Premier had committed himself both before and after the vote because he was over confident of the result.

"We don't know exactly who is the father of this amendment," said Mr. Doherty. "The other night, we heard an explanation of the new Nickle booze psychology—that the best way to keep people sober is to let them get half drunk." The argument of the Attorney-General was so tortuous, that it made a corkscrew look like a straight line.

Will Oppose Bill.

"Personally I am going to oppose the Bill," he continued. "First because the system proposed is worse than good, sane government control. It will lead to the re-establishment of the bar room. Second, I oppose it because the constituencies have declared against it, and I am obliged to obey the wishes of my constituents or resign my seat. Thirdly, I oppose it because I believe the word of the Prime Minister should be kept as sacred. There must be no going back on the word of a public man."

Oke for O.T.A.

On the O.T.A. charge Mr. Oke said that the people felt that Premier Ferguson was not doing what he said he would do. "The people think they are in a position to challenge the veracity of the Premier," said Mr. Oke, who added that the Government, if it contemplated the step now being taken, should have told the people about it, and then had an election. I will vote against the stronger beer, because my riding voted 4,000 against any change in the O.T.A. I like my glass of beer myself, but I will oppose the measure because my riding does not want it."

BRANDON, Manitoba, Feb. 25.—Detro Tomius, confessed burglar, and home robber, who has been operating in this city and district for a period of more than two years, was sentenced to five years in Stopey Mountain penitentiary yesterday on five charges of breaking and threat.

REAL ELECTION.

Gun Play, Riots and Charges of Fraud Add Spice in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Feb. 25.— (Canadian Press).—In the Aldermanic election, marked by rioting, gun play, and many charges of fraud, half a million Chicago voters yesterday renewed the life of Democractic City government. The voters elected 27 Democrats in 36 voted for. Fourteen additional council men will be elected in the trun off election in April.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 25.—A state of siege for one month throughout Turkish Kurdistan was proclaimed yesterday by the National Assembly at Angora. An insurrection in that territory, said to be headed by the Kurdish irregular chieftain, Shiek Said, is reported to have spread into open rebellion against the Angora Government.

American Professor Announces Important Achievement During Recent Eclipse.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 25. — (Canadian Press).—A photograph of the infra-red portion of sun was obtained by Professor Heber D. Curtis, director of Allegheny Observatory, on his trip to New Haven, Conn., January 24, during the solar eclipse, it was announced yesterday.

It is possible, it was said, to photograph this portion only at the time the rim of the sun is about to burst forth from behind the intervening moon as this is the only time thousands of bright lines appear beyond red. From violet at one end of the spectrum along the whole length until red is reached these brilliant lines flash out in thousands.

This is called the flash spectrum which was discovered in 1870 by C. A. Young, of Princeton University. In the half century that has elapsed since his discovery but little progress has been made in the study of the phenomenom because it had never had been photographed.

30,000 IN FILM OF ROME'S FALL

Italian Production of "Quo Vadis" Shows Barbarism of Nero.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—To weld and wield 30,000 people in a motion picture, as was done in the Italian production of "Quo Vadis," is a titanic achievement. And like all gigantic things, it lumbers heavily —its very proportions at times dragging the drama roughly behind it as the Roman chariots of Sienkiewicz's tale trailed Christian martyrs around the arena.

In spectacular scope it probably never has been exceeded. It whacks the spectator with sledge-hammer blows, exhausting the nerves with rapid succession of shocks reaching a terrible climax in Nero's maniacal perversions. And more than any picture I have seen, the staccato of movement suggests noise, great surges of sound, increasing its brusque vitality.

Its faults—and there are enough —are mainly due to the size of the production.

Portrayal of Nero.

Its strength largely is Emil Jannings, in the role of Nero. Jannings exhumes the monstrous paranoiac with an understanding and a rendition which places him among the great actors of all time. Here, one feels, is the authentic tyrant, weak, vain, terrible, in his casing of flabby flesh surmounted by a coronet of flowers, whipping women with silken cords, casting victims into the horrid pool of lamprey eels, consigning folk of a threatening faith to lions and aurochs—then praying to his Christian servants to save him in the hour of doom.

The picture teems with incidents of barbarism, leavened perhaps insufficiently for the popular taste with episodes of heroic beauty. It may well be pondered, in its apparently valid representation of the Roman decadence, by those who believe the world of men is on the down grade.

One of the striking scenes, showing the reaction of his sycophants to the sixth Caesar, is Petronius' revulsion at the emperor's abominations —Petronius, the dandy of the court, who reads his scathing denunciation, which he knows also to be his death warrant, and then has a surgeon open his veins.

Plenty of Realism.

Realism is overwhelming to the squeamish in some spots, especially where the beasts snarl over the fallen Christians in the torture arena, and in the atrocities that accompany Nero's burning of Rome. To balance these is one memorable scene where, to save her threatened child, a Christian mother, with some of the elder Roman spirit, mounts a chariot and wins a race and the upturned thumbs of mercy from the populace.

One whelming scene follows another throughout the gamut of the major passions. And with a unity that is surprising for a piece and a crowd so unwieldy, all lines of action spoke in to Nero as the hub of the tragic wheel.

From the standpoint of entertainment, there is too much to "Quo Vadis." It is like an overdose of a powerful stimulant. It sends one exhausted emotionally from the theatre.

The picture was made by the Unione Cinematographica Italiana and is presented by First National Pictures.

JAIL FOR ELECTION FIXER.

Deputy Returning Officer Who Marked Ballots, Sentenced at Kitchener.

KITCHENER, Feb. 25.—William H. Gottfried, a local deputy returning officer, who was found guilty last Saturday of fraudulently marking ballots in the recent election for C. C. Hahn, was yesterday sentenced to three months' hard labor in the county jail by Magistrate J. J. A. Weir in Police Court. Gottfried, through his counsel, E. B. Dowdall, stated that he would appeal and he was allowed out on $1,000 bail.

Gottfried's counsel claims that confession made by him to Judge Hearn in the recent recount proceeding was obtained under duress and it is anticipated that this will form the basis of the appeal.

TUNGSTEN ORE IN B.C.

Alice Arm Mine Assays 39 P.C., Giving Value of $351 Per Ton.

STEWART, B. C., —(C.P.)—Assay returns from Denver, Col., show that a sample shipment of ore from the Esperanza mine at Alice Arm contained 39 per cent ...sten which gives the value per ton of ore at $351. This mine had previously been worked for ... silver contents in the ore. A shipment of 60 tons of low grade ore and 179 tons of high-grade ore has recently been made to the Anyox smelter.

According to those in charge of development at the Independence mine, a cross cut from the end of the end of the main drift, 400 feet from the portal, has penetrated 12 feet of ore without reaching the opposite wall. The vein is somewhat leached, but contains considerable galena and chalcopyrite ore. An encouraging feature is that the ore is more plentiful at the bottom of the drift than at the top.

Diamond drilling commenced last week at the Glacier Creek mine, the machine being set up at the mouth of the tunnel. Present plans are for 2,000 feet of holes to be driven, cross cutting the veins at their depth.

HOLSTEIN CLUB DISCUSSES TYPE

Talk By Field Man at Home of P. B. Nelson, Campbellford.

BREEDERS PRESENT.

CAMPBELLFORD, February 25.—The meeting of the Holstein Breeders' Club, held at Morningside Farm, the home of P. B. Nelson, on Monday afternoon, was just a fair success as to numbers, owing to the heavy rain all day.

However, quite a number of the breeders and others interested in dairying gathered to hear Mr. R. Holtby, of Port Perry, the newly appointed field man for the Holstein Breedres Asso'ciation.

The event would have been postponed for a day if Mr. Holtby had not already had engagements with which a delay would interfere.

The president of the club, Mr. R. Honey, of Brickly, was present, and gave a short address, following which Mr. Holtby took his models, which had been sent to Morningside Farm for the purpose of demonstrating a perfect type of Holstein cattle.

Some time was devoted to type. He said: "Breeders should pay more attention to type, but must not forget production which breeders had in the past over-estimated.

After a talk on type with models before the class, a cow was selected and her merits and faults described. Following this four cows were lined up and the class was asked to place them. This brought out differences of opinion.

A feeling of gratitude seemed to exist, that it was well worth while to have these courses in judging for the education and inspiration given to breeders both young and old.

The models used by Mr. Holtby will be at Morningside Farm for a week, and it will be well worth while for any breeder to go and inspect them.

LAKEFIELD LIKED DIXIE MINSTRELS

Peterboro Entertainers Played to Large Crowd in Town Hall.

LAKEFIELD, Feb. 25. — The Dixie Minstrels scored another success when they appeared in Lakefield on Monday night, under the auspices of the Young People's Club of St. Paul's Church. In spite of several counter attractions and very unpromising weather, there was a splendid turnout, and the audience proved appreciative as is usual in Lakefield.

The row of sunflower beauties which nodded over the garden fence was a unique and decidedly effective background for the soloists and end men who were grouped in the foreground on either side of Mr. R. Lush who was a genial and popular interlocutor. Mr. Lush is not a stranger to Lakefield, and has many friends, who appreciated his performance.

Mr. Frank Clarke, the banjo artist, is another favorite in Lakefield, having taken part in at least one concert in the past. His banjo selections were among the best bits of a first-class entertainment. Other selections in the first part of the programme included "The Pal I Loved Stole the Gal I Loved," by Urban Brady; "Dreaming of You," by E. Leonard; "Follow the Swallow Back Home," by Martin Guinn; "Sally," by John Holland; "Old-Fashioned Town," by J. Clancy; "Hoosier Blues," by George Wesley, and "Going South," by Eddie Leonard. The songs were all good and received hearty applause. There were the usual merry quips which go to the making of a minstrel show and which brought forth hearty laughter.

Special features in the second part of the programme were the lightning crayon sketches of Mr. Lush, which amused and interested the audience and were a decidedly unique attraction. Mr. Eddie Leonard's baritone solo, "Asleep in the Deep," was appreciated and rendered in splendid voice. His dancing was also a feature. The Ukelele Four sang "Say it with a Ukelele," accompanying themselves on the instruments, and Joseph Minicolo gave a tenor solo, "The World is Waiting for the Sunrise," and Mr. Wesley's serious (?) monologue and Mr. Urban Brady's rendition of "Dreams I Dream of You." Mr. Minicolo gave a cornet solo, "The End of a Perfect Day," which was especially popular. Mr. J. Sullivan, with his dance of the Sunny South, and Mr. D. Quinlan in his buck and wing dance, and the fancy steps of Messrs. E. Leonard, F. Clarke, G. Wesley, and D. Sullivan brought down the house. Mr. Leonard's song and dance, "I'm Bringing Home the Bacon," brought the show to a close after two hours of real enjoyment.

At the close of the minstrel show a dance and supper were given, the music for the former being furnished by the orchestra which had played so beautifully all evening, and did so much toward the success of the entertainment. The young people spent a pleasant social hour and enjoyed every minute tripping the "light fantastic" to the alluring strains of the orchestra.

Rev. J. J. Garvey is to be congratulated on the success of the entertainment.

Military Euchre.

On Monday evening a military euchre was held by the members of St. John's A.Y.P.A. in which twelve tables participated. A novelty was given by the company being divided into two groups, captained by Messrs. W. Chappell and E. Robertshaw respectively. This added not a little to the fun. Mr. Robertshaw's group won by 70 points, the prizes being won by Miss Gertrude Summers and Mr. John Sanderson. At the close of the card game supper was served, a feature being hot pancakes and maple syrup. For years it has been a custom of the association to hold a pancake social at the last meeting before Lent, and this year it was combined with the euchre. Mr. C. C. Stenner is the "chef" whose pancakes have become quite famous. Sandwiches and tea were also provided. Mesdames Stenner, Chappell and T. Waldon assisted the committee with the refreshments. In presenting the prizes to the winners, Rev. W. Cox expressed the hope that another would be held after Easter.

Day of Prayer.

The day of prayer for the Women's Missionary Societies will be observed in the village on Friday afternoon in the Baptist Church, beginning at 3 o'clock. All ladies interested are invited to be present.

FEDERAL RELIEF FOR N. S. STEEL

"The statement has not been made as the right hon. gentleman persists in stating it," insisted Mr. Murdock. "If he would quote facts, and truth, I think it would be fairer for those whose interests we are discussing."

Mr. Meighen—"The Hon. Minister of Labor comes forward with such a tramp and beat that one is almost frightened at his approach, but the difficulty is that while he is all emblazoned with swords, he cannot use them."

"You started your misrepresentation last year, and you can't get away with it," Mr. Murdock retorted.

The Speaker called "Order."

May Grant Relief.

Mr. Meighen continued by saying that there was absolutely nothing in the British North America Act which prevented the granting of relief by the Federal Government.

Does any one suggest that we have lived under a constitution for a number of years, which permitted relief to be given to Japan and China, but forbade relief in this country?"

When suffering got beyond the range of local authorities, the Dominion Parliament had the right to assist. The Government itself had given unemployment relief since it came into office.

Premier King explained that the unemployment relief in question had to be given because of certain obligations incurred as a result of the war.

Premier Armstrong, stated Mr. Meighen, was appointing a commission to investigate this situation, but an investigation in the matter had been made by the Dominion Government only recently.

"That investigation was as regards steel—this is coal," interjected Mr. Murdock.

TEMPTATIONS OF WEALTH GREATER

Affirmative Debaters Win at Millbrook and Lose at Reaboro.

MILLBROOK, Feb. 25. — The series of debates which the Young People's League has been carrying on this winter under the auspices of the Citizenship Department, was continued on Monday evening, the vice-president, G. Elson, being in the chair.

The subject was, "Resolved that wealth offers greater temptations than poverty," the affirmative being ably upheld by Messrs. F. Alcorn and J. Larmer, while G. Elson and Ernest Burnham made out a strong case for the negative.

Mr. W. G. Hetherington was time-keeper, and each speaker was allowed five minutes, the leader of the affirmative having two minutes for reply. The judges were Misses S. Hetherington, M. Sayles and P. Burnham. Sixty per cent. was the allowance for material presented, and forty per cent. for manner of address, enunciation, deportment, etc.

The affirmative won by one point, the score being 22-21, with an award of 10-8 for the manner of address, and general presentation of argument.

The young people are entered in the Conference series of debates for the Whattam Cup, and expect to compete with one of the Leagues in the Cobourg district in the near future. F. N. Alcorn and J. Larmer are the members who represent Millbrook in the series.

A reading, "The Lost Island," by Jean Burnham, added to the pleasure of the programme, and a treat of home-made candy, provided by the president, Miss Estelle Hetherington, passed the time happily while waiting for the judges to arrive at their decision.

Next week's meeting is under the Missionary Department, Mrs. G. W. Sayles being vice-president.

REVERSED AT REABORO.

OMEMEE, Feb. 25.—The Community Hall, Reaboro, was well filled with an appreciative audience on Tuesday evening last, when representatives from the Omemee U.F.O. debated with a representation from the Reaboro Club. The subject for discussion was, "Resolved that more crime is due to wealth than poverty." The affirmative was taken by Messrs. Gordon Bradley and Melville Moncrief, of Omemee, while Messrs. J. Endicott and Kenneth Reid, of Reaboro, upheld the negative.

Mr. Bruce McNevin acted as critic and complimented the young men on being able to discuss the subject clearly and to present their facts in a convincing manner. He also was glad to see them taking advantage of the opportunity to develop public spirit and public speaking.

The judges were Messrs. David Weir, Fred. Reeds and Mr. Knight, B.S.A., of Lindsay.

Mr. Knight, chairman of the judges, in giving his decision, congratulated all the speakers, but decided in favor of the negative as he believed they quoted authority to prove their points.

A short programme of music and recitations followed, after which Mr. Knight showed a number of moving picture views which were both entertaining and instructive.

Mr. F. G. Sandy acted as chairman of the evening's programme in his usual efficient manner.

At the close of the programme, refreshments were served to those who assisted, thus bringing to a close another pleasant evening in community life.

TAX ARREARS.

City Tax Collector Green, faced with an ultimatum that his rolls must be returned by March 31st, has been forced to take sterner measures to ensure the payment of taxes by a number of firms and individuals who are behind in their payments.

The public should understand that the Collector is in a difficult position.

His kindness of heart is well known, but the situation is such as to render it necessary for him, with the Council pressing for the return of the rolls, to get in these delayed payments at once, under the penalty of losing his position if he fails to make good.

It may be that this conception of the situation has not impressed itself upon some of the delinquents, and with the facts now in their possession, they will make an effort to meet their obligations to the city and assist a public servant who is placed in a very unfortunate position by reason of their failure to pay their taxes.

Many of them are in a position to do so at once, and it would be a kindly act if they were to arise to the occasion and make it unnecessary for the Collector to adopt extreme measures to save his position.

INCOME TAX RELIEF.

Mr. Frederick McBrien, Conservative member for Southwest Toronto, has introduced a bill into the Provincial Legislature, providing for double the present rate of exemption from income tax assessment for children and dependants, says the Hamilton Spectator. That is to say, instead of $200 being remitted by the municipalities for every child under eighteen years of age or other person dependent on the wage-earner, coming within the prescribed category, $400 will be allowed, which is $100 more than the existing Dominion rate of exemption. In these days of stress, when administrations are hard put to it to find adequate sources of revenue, it is not to be supposed that such a measure would be popular with civic authorities. The financial loss arising from the suggested change would, no doubt, be considerable; but the question is whether it would not be good policy, as well as good ethics, to afford this extra measure of relief to the family man. The income tax falls with special severity on that class of citizens who just come within the taxable standards. It is a very expensive business to raise a family in these times, and official assistance of this kind would be very welcome. The wisdom of doubling the exemption, however, may be doubted. If $400 was established for the Province, it is certain that an agitation would arise for a corresponding rate for the Dominion. The principle of the thing is the same in both cases, and for that reason, it would seem more sensible to make local income taxation conform to the Federal scale. Three hundred dollars is not too much to take off the levy of the wage-earner who is doing what is requisite for the care and upbringing of his child—the future citizen. By going the Dominion Government one better, the sponsor of this bill has probably defeated his object. In any event, there is no reason why legislation along these lines should not be sympathetically received, and uniformity, at least, be brought into the income tax system.

THE TAXATION PROBLEM.

Some reference is made in another article in these columns today to Peterboro's record tax rate.

It is interesting to note that an analysis made by the Citizens' Research Institute dealing with a number of cities in various parts of Canada—Peterboro is not included in the list—shows that in 1923 every city studied, except one, west of Ontario reduced its expenditure, while, on the other hand, every city on the list in Ontario and Quebec increased its expenditure during the same period.

The institute in its bulletin does not attempt to explain why western municipalities are apparently growing more economical than those in the east, but simply calls attention to the reductions in the west and the increases in the east, without comment.

The point that chiefly interests Peterboro people is that both the tax rate and the assessment have been climbing in Peterboro, and that the time seems to have arrived for the application of scientific procedure in budget control rather than to trust to more or less haphazard "cutting."

The present method whereby Aldermen attempt to digest a vast amount of figures in a few sessions and more or less aimlessly take a hack at the estimates here, there and anywhere, often without much consideration for the particular item under review, is not a satisfactory plan.

Something more business-like will have to be found if expenditures are to be scientifically reduced —and, of course, the only sure way of reducing taxation is to cut the cost of government.

HITTING THE CLOUDS.

It is not pleasant news for the people of Peterboro to hear that after all the pruning of the estimates by the Aldermen, the City Council is going to spend $123.96 more on its own account than last year, while it has to provide for an overdraft of $13,956.29 carried from 1924, and $16,600.00 more for the Board of Education than was needed last year.

The net result is a tax rate that at present is set at 36.36, and that is not likely to be finally pared down below 36 mills at the best.

The increase in the rate from 25 1-2 mills in 1915 to 36.36 mills in 1925 is striking.

Going back a little further to 1913, just twelve years ago, and we find Peterboro, with a population of 20,759, paying a tax rate of 25 mills on a total assessment of $10,000,000.

Today we find the assessment nearly doubled, or $18,312,910, while the rate is 36.36 mills.

Yet in the twelve years the population of the city has increased by less than a thousand people.

Peterboro is paying today a municipal taxation per capita almost three times as great as in 1913, with a population not appreciably greater.

It is interesting to note that a large share of the increase is accounted for by the ever-increasing cost of education in this city.

Twelve years ago we were paying only $21,800 to take care of the Collegiate Institute and $51,861 to operate the Public Schools.

Today the former costs $64,200 and the latter $147,700.

In short, the 21,726 present residents of Peterboro pay about three times as much for education as the 20,759 citizens of 1913 had to provide.

The increase is alarmingly large, and there is reason to ask if it is altogether justified, and if a portion at least could not have been avoided?

"CAVEAT VENDOR."

One of the puzzles of international affairs is the inconsistent juggling of tarriffs and embargoes. It is quite logical for a country to aim at self-sufficiency, and a big one like the United States can, with the help of tariff protection, produce nearly all its own goods; it is not an economical policy, but political factors often over-ride economic considerations. This is the usual form of "protection," achieved by placing an import duty on foreign products. These duties may be so high as to practically exclude goods, or a country may go as far as to place an embargo on the import of certain goods, prohibiting them altogether. Such outright embargoes have been rare, however.
